Fired again! Why? They couldn't explain—and she couldn't guess.

But that very day she discovered the reason. The girls were whispering about it and she happened to overhear. "B.O."—body odor.

That's the last job Miss Scott ever lost. For since she learned what her handicap was and how to overcome it, her natural ability and charm—unspoiled by this unpardonable social error—have won her promotion after promotion—and a host of friends, besides.

No fear of body odor when pores are purified

Body odor is treacherous. We can't tell when we have it because our own sense of smell becomes deadened to familiar odors.

And no one is safe. We all must perspire to live. Even on a cool day, our pores give off as much as a quart of odor-causing waste.

Don't risk embarrassment—use the delightful, purifying toilet soap that millions enjoy—Lifebuoy. Its bland and abundant antiseptic lather deodorizes pores, giving bath-to-bath freshness and freedom from body odor.

Keeps skin clear

Lifebuoy keeps complexions fresh and clear, too—by gently purifying pores. It also guards health, removing germs as well as dirt.

You'll learn to love Lifebuoy's pleasant clean scent which tells you Lifebuoy purifies. It quickly vanishes as you rinse. Use Lifebuoy a week and you'll use it for life. Get some today. Lever Bros. Co.

RESOLUTIONS
At a special meeting of the directors of The Thames National Bank, held on the 6th day of August, 1928, at one o'clock P. M., for the purpose of taking action upon the death of the late William B. Young, the following minute was adopted:
William B. Young, for many years a prominent figure in business and banking circles in the City of Norwich, died at his home in this city on the 5th day of August, 1928, at the advanced age of eighty-one years.
Mr. Young was elected a director of The Thames National Bank in 1903 and Vice-President in 1923, thus rendering the Bank twenty-five years of continuous service.
He was a man of excellent judgment and foresight both as to matters and men and was thoroughly loyal to every interest which he served. He coupled a sterling character with a genial temperament, all of which qualities rendered his services to the Bank of high value and his companionship a pleasure to the other members of the Board. As an expression of the great loss which the institution has sustained and the personal loss which his fellow directors and officers have sustained, we place this brief tribute upon our records.
Voted that a copy of this resolution be placed upon the records of the Bank and a copy sent to the press and to the immediate family of the deceased.
Voted that the officers and directors of this institution attend the funeral in a body.
A true copy of the record,
Attest:
NATHAN A. GIBBS, Secretary.

RESOLUTIONS
Norwich, Conn., Aug. 6, 1928.
At a meeting of the directors of The Dime Savings Bank of Norwich, Monday, August 6th, 1928, the following minute was adopted:
With heartfelt sorrow we record the death of our first vice-president, William B. Young, who had been connected with us for twenty-eight years as a corporator. He was elected director in 1903 and vice-president in 1922.
He always took the deepest interest in the bank's affairs, and his long experience in banking matters, combined with a sound judgment made his advice very valuable; while his genial presence made him always welcome at our meetings, which he regularly attended when it was possible for him to do so.
His loss will be sincerely mourned, not only by his fellow directors, but by the whole community, in which he was so prominent.
It was voted to send a copy of this minute to Mr. Young's family, and to close the bank during the afternoon of the funeral.
Attest: A true copy of the original record.
FRANK L. WOODARD, Treasurer.

NEW LONDON MAN BOUND OVER ON BURGLARY CHARGE

(Special to The Bulletin)

NEW LONDON, Aug. 6—Charles F. Grady, Main street, this city and proprietor of a store at Montville, was presented in the Groton town court today charged with burglary. He pleaded not guilty but upon evidence introduced by the state, probable cause was found and Grady was held for trial before the next criminal term of the superior court. In default of bail, Grady was remanded to jail.

Grady was arrested at his home here Saturday afternoon upon request of the Groton police, it being suspected that he had robbed the Groton Hardware store and Preston jewelry store, Thames street, Groton, last Friday night when plunder of the estimated value of $500 was stolen from both stores. Grady entered a complete denial of the charge, but as he was seen loitering about the stores as late as Friday midnight, together with the fact that a key to the jewelry store was found on his person when arrested and to his relating conflicting statements, he was held for trial in the high court. It is believed that Grady intended to transfer the plunder to his Montville store. The plunder was found Saturday night secreted in the brush in the rear of the stores by Patrolman Fay Chapman, Groton department.

An automobile driven by Charles Ailing, 37 Colt street, in rounding the corner of Hempstead and Broad streets early this morning, skidded on the wet surface and on Hempstead street, crashed against the motionless auto owned by H. F. Gibson, 84 Broad street. Mr. Gibson's auto was forced against a tree, and damaged to such extent that it had to be towed to a garage.

Richard Glidden, formerly of New London and Groton, of late living at Narragansett Pier, who was arrested several days charged with being engaged in the theft of automobiles and their subsequent sale, was presented in the police court today. Probable cause was found and Glidden was bound over to the next term of the superior court for trial. In default of a surety on his bond of $5000, Glidden was remanded to jail. Glidden is implicated in the wholesale theft of automobiles in New England, together with his brother, Horace Glidden, Boston, who has not been apprehended. It was Glidden who sold the Essex automobile that had been stolen in Boston, to Stephen Burka and Cecil Lamar, alias Huval, sailors, stationed at the submarine base and who are now awaiting trial, having been committed to jail from the police court last Saturday, being held, also in bail of $5,000.

Herman Fisher, Williams street; Louis Pasteplin and Basil Lester, of Camp Trumbull, Niantic; Mrs. Andrew Gray, Gales Ferry; John Brianer, Eastern Point; Mrs. Charles Grier and infant daughter, No. 15 Morse avenue, Groton; Walter Howard, Williams street; Theresa Cantor, 164 Broad street; Mrs. Elger Larsen, No. 539 Main street, Marjorie Holland, North Stonington; Mrs. Charles Clark and infant daughter, 44 Garfield avenue; Mrs. George Keeney and infant son, New York and Marjorie Page, 196 Ocean avenue, patients at Lawrence-Memorial Associated hospital, were discharged over the week end.

FUNERALS

Adam Marx

The funeral of Adam Marx, formerly of New London, who died at Preston, Friday night, was held this morning at 1.30 o'clock at 62 Washington street. Burial was in Jordan cemetery.

Mrs. Jonathan S. Bishop

Private funeral services for Mrs. Martha T. Bishop, widow of Johnathan S. Bishop, were held this afternoon at 1.30 o'clock, Rev. J. Romeyn Danforth, pastor of the First Church of Christ, officiating. Burial was in Cedar Grove cemetery.

Charles P. Ash

The funeral of Charles P. Ash, was held this afternoon at 2 o'clock at his late residence, 5 Morse avenue, Groton, the services being conducted by Rev. Frederick Halst, rector of Seabury Memorial chapel. Burial was in Groton cemetery.

OBITUARY

Leon Tuthill

Leon Tuthill, 23, son of Mr. and Mrs. Willis W. Tuthill, Pleasant Valley, Groton, died Sunday at Lena hospital. Besides his parents, Mr. Tuthill is survived by his wife, three children and several brothers and sisters.

The presidential yacht, Mayflower, cleared from the harbor this morning for Brooklyn, N. Y., after having been in port several days.

The state police raided a cottage at Crescent beach early Sunday morning following several complaints because of the conduct of several men and women. The officers consisting of Sergeant Henry Albright and Troopers Arthur Whitmarsh and Donald Brown, went to the cottage at 2 o'clock and aroused the occupants, William T Doerr, Charles Marse and John D Pollard, Brooklyn, N. Y., Everett Ehrhardt, Jersey City; Mary Carter, Norwich; Mary McLean, New York and Mary Adams, New Jersey. All were charged with breach of the peace and an hour later were presented in the East Lyme justice court where all pleaded guilty and were fined. The amount of cash the party paid was $87.30.

Mrs. Josephine Sammatrao of 12 Shaw street, gave a surprise party Saturday night to Miss Viola Burke of No. 55 Walden avenue. The evening was spent in the enjoyment of games and a mock marriage. Those present at the affair were Miss Viola Burke, Miss Grace Finnigan, Miss Helen Fallet, Miss Mary Eldridge, Miss Anna Athes, Miss Emma Sandman, Miss Mary Sandman, Miss Persie Grippo, Miss May MacLaughlin, Miss Dorothy Burkem, Miss Grace Cannata, Miss Muriel Cruise, Miss Mary Cogan, Miss Palma Delmonte, Miss Evelyn Labouc, Miss Jennie Bielecki, Mrs. May Wilbur, Miss Frances Perry, Miss Julia Turisco, Miss Adeline Stone, Miss Edna Reed and Mrs. Josephine Sammataro.

Miss Irene Louise Beran, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Andrew Beran of 24 Lester street, became the bride this morning of William M. Lucy of this city. The ceremony was performed at the rectory of St. Joseph's church. After a honeymoon the young couple will reside at No. 38 Squire street.

Spiros and Christy Ganos, former proprietors of the Coney Island Lunch will sail on September 22 for a tour of Europe, with their mother, Mrs. Paraskevy Ganos. The itinerary calls for a tour of Europe, Asia and Africa.

On August 8th, Mrs. Harriet Anderson of Goshen street will act as hostess to members of Ann Rogers tent at a picnic which will be held during the afternoon and evening. At six o'clock a chowder will be served.

The annual outing of the Martha Winthrop club will be held on Wednesday at Clark's tea garden, Noank. Members of the club will leave from Williams park at 12 o'clock. Luncheon and bridge will be played.

MANY AUTO DRIVERS FINED IN COURT

(Special to The Bulletin)

NEW LONDON, Aug. 6—Drivers of automobiles in Connecticut should begin to realize that they must adhere to the laws of the state and towns through which they pass for by the number of arrests made by the state police the past few weeks it would appear that every effort is being made to minimize the number of accidents, but judging from the arrests made over the week-end there are many drivers who entertain the idea that they can drive in a manner that suits themselves. A score or more arrests were made and disposition of many of them was made in the Waterford town court today by fines being imposed or by payment of costs or fees in most cases. In the others continuances were granted.

Charles L. Plaskitt, Yantic, was charged with reckless driving. A nolle was recommended by Prosecutor James Floyd and was allowed by Judge Frederick Dimmock. Plaskitt was arrested by State Police Officer Peter Busch.

Fred B. Allen, Groton, was charged with speeding and a fine of $10 and costs was imposed. Allen was arrested by State Police Officer Bernard Kenerson.

Herbert E. Larson, New Britain, was charged with trespassing upon property of Oscar Dimmock, he having removed bars that allowed cows to enter the highway from a field. Larson did not present himself in court and his bond of $15 was declared forfeited. He was arrested by Constable Chester Brigham.

Daniel M. Sanzo, Hartford, was charged with reckless driving and was fined $50 and costs. Sanzo was driving his car on Durfee Hill when he lost control of the steering wheel. The auto left the highway and ascended an embankment, causing his little child to suffer a fractured arm.

Raymond Sheffield, Hartford, was charged with trespassing upon property of Edward Hammond, where he staged a petting party. A fine of $10 and costs was imposed. Sheffield was arrested by Constable Chester Brigham.

Frank Briggs, Quaker Hill, was charged with petty larceny, it being alleged that he stole lumber from property of Frederick L. Goss. A nolle was allowed by Judge Dimmock. Briggs was arrested upon complaint of Goss by State Police Officer Louis Bristol.

Paul H. Phillips, East Longmeadow, Mass., was charged with failure to grant right of way. A nolle was ordered upon payment of costs.

Samuel Bolocfsky, Hartford, charged with failure to grant right of way, was fined $10 and costs.

Andy DePelis, Hartford, charged with driving to the left of a traffic beacon, corner of Broad street and Jefferson avenue, was fined $2. He was arrested by Constable Chester Brigham.

Hugo Pax, charged with failure to grant right of way, was granted a nolle upon the payment of costs.

Guiseppe Simonette, this city, and John Roggerio, Hartford, charged with driving to the left of a traffic signal, were fined $2. Both were arrested by Constable Chester Brigham.

Jeremiah Donoghue, Hartford, was charged with failure to grant right of way. A nolle was allowed upon the payment of officer's fees.

Edwin A. Johnson, South Manchester, charged with trespassing upon property of David Banks, also was allowed a nolle upon payment of costs.

Jacob E. Richman, Hartford, arrested by State Police Officer Louis Bristol, charged with reckless driving; Louis Schwartz, Hartford, charged with reckless driving and arrested by State Police Officer Bristol; Edward V. Wennenberg, Hartford, charged with failure to grant right of way and arrested by State Police Officer Johnson as a result of Wennenberg's auto colliding with a car driven by Frank O. Tyler, this city, near the city line on the New Haven turnpike, and H. Nier, New Britain, charged with failure to grant right of way, and arrested by State Police Officer Bernard Renerson, were continued a week.

James F. Howard, employed at the Riverhead farm, Mystic, was charged with violation of the state law for motor vehicles which prohibits the passing a trolley car while discharging or receiving passengers.

Sergt. Samuel Hick, returning home from duty Saturday afternoon, alighted from a car on Montauk avenue, corner of Blydenburg avenue, and was struck by Howard's auto. The officer was knocked down and sustained bruises and contusions. In court today Howard was fined $50 and costs.

Edward V. Wilson, Brooklyn, N. Y., was charged with failing to obey a traffic officer's signal and, failing to present himself in court, his bond of $10 was declared forfeited. He was arrested Saturday afternoon by Traffic Officer Frank Linehan.

Mrs. Mamer Gorra, 116 Williams street, reported to the police this afternoon that while she was shopping on State street she lost her purse containing 20 bills of $1 denomination and change.

Michael F. Counihan, 41 Federal street, was arrested this afternoon by Patrolman Timothy Sullivan on a warrant charging him with breach of the peace and will be presented in the police court tomorrow.

Jacob Ritvo, Hartford, was arrested this afternoon, charged with parking his automobile in front of the Central fire station. He furnished a bond of $5 for his arraignment in the police court tomorrow.

The dance promoted annually by the New London police department was conducted at Ocean Beach this evening and was attended by a throng of admirers of the department. The event was entirely successful and while a crowd that taxed the capacity of the spacious dance hall enjoyed the many dance numbers, there were hundreds that purchased tickets that did not appear on the floor.

As a result of the heat yesterday, George Coden of Hartford, waiter at the Ocean View hotel, collapsed and was taken to the Red Cross hut, prior to his removal to Home Memorial hospital.

RATS INVADE HOMES ON THORP STREET

NEW LONDON, Aug. 6—Cockroaches and rats and the collection of taxes were the chief topics before the city council this evening. Residents of Thorp street appeared and asked for relief from a pestilence of rats and roaches occasioned by the city dumping garbage on that street. William Hick and David Bradham were the speakers for the parties aggrieved. Mr. Hick said that he was obliged to fight cockroaches and rats for two or three hours a night, sometimes until after midnight. He said he had used disinfectants without obtaining results. He made complaint to the city health officer but hadn't obtained any relief. He called the roaches night-birds and said they appeared after dark. Mr. Bradham stated that he had been forced to vacate his tenement and move to Cedar Grove avenue because of the nuisance. The state health department and the city health officer had been in conference and the council decided to appropriate $250 to exterminate the rats and roaches.

Mayor May inquired as to the amount of back taxes collected and the city manager told him they had not been separated and that he could not give him the exact amount. Mayor May inquired as to what fund the money to pay for an automobile for the tax collector had been taken. He was informed that it came from a general fund representing fees collected by the deputy sheriffs, who are policemen appointed to assist the tax collector. The mayor said he was in sympathy with the movement to collect taxes but he didn't approve of the methods applied. He also asked whether the policemen who are deputy sheriffs appointed by the city manager were to be continued at their duties or to go back to the police department. The city manager told him that when the work was done they were to go back to their police duties. The mayor asked as to whether the salaries were paid for the tax collector and was informed that they were paid out of the fees, $2 being charged for each delinquence. He asked that the amount of back taxes which paid the collector 4 1-2 per cent be supplied at the next meeting of the council.

Mayor May complained that the buses of the New England company in backing into the stand at the railroad station obstructed traffic and created a danger and asked that this be remedied. Mayor May complained of strangers appearing in the streets of the city in bathing costumes. He said the matter was taken care of by statute but suggested that the city manager see that the law was enforced. He proposed the making of North Bank street a one-way highway. Councilor Twomey complained of the condition of sidewalks on Garfield avenue.

He understood property owners on that street were to petition for new walks and said that if they did not do so that the city should proceed to lay walks. The council expressed intention of laying a sewer on Thames street, 255 feet west. The sum of $265 for laying of cement highway on Williams street was voted, state to pay $700. Mayor complained an auto station on Broad street had become an auto hospital and the city manager was appointed to confer with the owner to see whether a change couldn't be effected. The Columbus statue committee was given permission to have a fireworks display on Oct. 12, when the monument is to be dedicated. On motion of Councilor Chappell the city manager is to get an estimate of the cost of widening Main street from Masonic street to State street.

Councilor Whiton asked that an estimate of the cost of placing a fence around the park where the Columbus statue is to be erected should be presented.

There were only five members of the council at the meeting tonight, which lasted until 9:30 o'clock. T. H. Crane made claim for damages for $700 for a fire occasioned by a spark from the steam roller. The claim was referred to the director of law.

ANNOUNCEMENTS

Broadway Theatre.

The Baby Cyclone, "the best thing that George M. Cohan has ever written—and that is saying a great deal." This was the statement of one of New York's foremost critics after having seen the opening metropolitan performance of "The Baby Cyclone" at the Henry Miller theatre. This screamingly funny farce-comedy has been secured, by special arrangement, and will be the offering of the Garrick Players at the Broadway theatre beginning with next Monday's performance and continuing Tuesday, Aug. 13 and 14.

"The Baby Cyclone" has been playing on Broadway for the past season with Grant Mitchell as its star. If a statistical bug were to attempt a computation of the laughs that it had awakened, the figures would run into millions for it is admittedly one of the funniest plays that blase New York has enjoyed in ages. What is more, it demonstrated that modern audiences still enjoy clean, wholesome play when it is handed to them in the form of excentional entertainment.

George M. Cohan's name has come to stand for the best, the most enjoyable form of theatrical entertainment. He has won the title of "the man who knows what the theatregoer wants and gives this to him." He has never more certainly deserved the econicum than in "The Baby Cyclone." The audience is chuckling with merriment before the evening has started and, by the end of the play, it is indeed the pessimist whose sides do not ache from laughter.

Mr. Irving Morrow and Miss Helene Wesley, leading man and leading woman of the Garrick Players, will have two splendid roles in the characters of Joseph Meadows (played by Grant Mitchell, in New York), and Lydia Webster (created on Broadway by Natalie Moorehead). It may well be added that Mr. Peter Ferguson, in the role of Gene Murley, will have one of the finest comedy parts ever written into a play.

The Broadway theatre presentation of "The Baby Cyclone" will be a faithful reproduction of the famous New York hit as given in the Henry Miller theatre. Tickets for all performances of "The Baby Cyclone on sale at the box office of the Broadway theatre on and after Thursday, Aug. 9, at 1 p. m.

Veedol Motor Oil.

A foretaste of 100 mile-an-hour gales and jagged ice peaks and all the grim, bitter romance of an Antartic exploration will be given when Commander Byrd and his crew broadcast Wednesday night, August 8th, at 8 o'clock, eastern daylight saving time.

The "Byrd hon off" hour is given in compliment to the commander of Tide Water Oil Sales corporation in recognition of the fact that he chose the new Veedol motor oil for the planes that will actually fly to the pole, as well as all motor equipment of the expedition.

The members of the crew who will talk are a vivid picturesque group. Besides Commander Byrd, there is Bernt Balchen, his chief aide, companion on his North Pole flight, former lieutenant in the Norwegian army. And Captain Fred C. Melville, master of Byrd's base ship, the Samson, who for 31 years has sailed the seven seas—and now will add the Antartic ocean to the list. And "Ukelele Dick" Konter, who lightened exploration with music on the North Pole trip. All of them—and still other members of the expedition—will broadcast.

Besides being chosen by Byrd, the new Veedol has been chosen by nearly every notable flyer. Martin Jensen, pilot of the Aloha in the trans-Atlantic flight, Eddie Stinson, famous pilot, and Mears and Collyer who ringed the world by ship and airplane in 23 days breaking the round-the-world record.

DeSoto Auto.

Models of the new Chrysler-built DeSoto Six are on display at Kreiger and St. Germain's whose appointment as dealers for Walter P. Chrysler's latest engineering offering was announced recently by C. W. Matheson, DeSoto vice president in charge of sales.

The new DeSoto Six, which is said to be Mr. Chrysler's answer to the insistent demand for a larger, more powerful, more luxurious car in the field of lower priced sixes, was announced nationally August 4th. It went on display shortly thereafter in hundreds of towns and cities throughout the country.

The appearance of the new car everywhere it has been shown has been the signal for manifestations of unusual public interest. Thousands of persons are viewing it and according to officials, it is being greeted with an acclaim similar to that which met the first Shrystler car when it appeared four years ago.

"The refined beauty of the DeSoto Six, the luxurious interiors and typically Chrysler mechanical makeup of the new car have all met with instant and hearty public approval," says Mr. Matheson. "Already the demand exceeds the supply and every possible effort is being exerted at the factory to meet production schedules. Seldom has the public placed the stamp of approval on a new automobile so quickly and in such an unmistakable fashion."

Kreiger and St. Germain express themselves as highly pleased with the reception which has accorded the DeSoto Six in this city. The beauty and smartness of the new models, they say are being widely commented on here.

It takes from five to seven years to grow peonies from the seed.

BLODGETT WANTS TOWNS AND CITIES TO FIND OUT EXISTING TAX LIENS

State Tax Colector William H. Blodgett is prodding up the communities of the state to find out what their existing tax lines are, having just sent a circular letter on this subject to the mayors of cities, first selectmen, town clerks, city clerks, tax collectors, wardens of boroughs, and municipal counsels.

It can be easily understood that the work he asks to have done is a monumental one and as he has no authority to enforce action on his suggestion, compliance therewith rests upon the willingness of any of the interested officers to attempt the task.

His circular letter is as follows:

Or April 27, 1928, a letter was sent to all the property tax collectors of the state, in which it was strongly urged that a careful search of the municipal land records be immediately begun and a catalogue of all undischarged tax liens made.

Chapte 200 of the public acts of 1927, the new tax lien law, requires every tax collector to show on each certificate continuing a tax lien based upon the assessment of 1927 or thereafter, the volume and page of the land records where each undischarged lien of prior date is recorded.

Prior to the passage of this law by the 1927 general assembly the trouble had been taken by the tax commissioner to investigate the tax lien situation in one large municipality and one small municipality. The large municipality was Waterbury. The small municipality was Hartland. So chaotic was the situation in each that it was not a difficult matter to set these two municipalities up as horrible examples. The situation in other towns with respect to old liens we knew to be comparable with that in the towns mentioned.

This last week a letter and a voluminous memorandum of unreleased tax liens were received from the tax collector of the city of Middletown. The presen tax collector of that city is one of the most energetic and capable in the state. His record of collections has been fully or nearly 100 per cent for some years. If there was one municipality in the state, which judged by the present would have a nearly perfect tax lien situation, that municipality would be Middletown. Yet the catalogue of undischarged tax liens in Middletown as given to me is most amazing. I am told that the memorandum sent me is not complete and that it does not contain water liens, assessment liens and certain other liens. Even so, it was found that the land records of Middletown had unreleased liens dating back more than 30 years. It was necessary to use 36 legal-size pages in cataloguing the undischarged tax liens beginning with 1890 and ending with 1923. The total number of liens so shown is found by actual count to be 933, divided as follows:

Tax liens of the Town of Middletown	484
Tax liens of the City of Middletown	236
Tax liens of the Middletown city school district	161
Tax liens of five town school districts	52
Total	933

This list of undischarged tax liens is the first list which has been sent to me by any collector. It is requested that when the collectors of other municipalities finish their work of digging out all undischarged tax liens that they send their findings to me.

In the letter accompanying the Middletown list, it is found that the taxes represented by the undischarged liens shown therein may be divided into three classes:

(1) The most numerous class is made up of taxes which have actually been paid but the liens for which were not released by the collector in office at the time that the tax was paid.

(2) The second class is made up of taxes which were legally abated but the liens for which were not discharged at the time of abatement.

(3) The third class is made up of certain town school district taxes which are believed to have been paid although there is no certainty thereof. The present collector has no books from the old district collectors to show whether the taxes for which the liens in this third class still exist have or have not been paid.

The question is asked of me as to the disposition which should be made of these hundreds of unreleased liens.

If any tax lien cannot be released by the ordinary processes set down by law, it should not be released by the collector upon his own initiative without the written authority of his municipal counsel.

In turning to the law, it will be found that provision has not been made for all the contingencies which may arise. Section 1308 of the general statutes, revision of 1918, provides for the release of a tax lien under two circumstances: (1) The tax having been paid, any tax lien "may be discharged by a certificate of the then collector of taxes recorded" in the land records. (2) Any tax lien which has been recorded for more than 15 years may be discharged by the town clerk, provided no action of foreclosure shall have been commenced. "The lawful keeper and custodian of said land records shall, if no such notice shall have been filed, upon the request of any interested person, discharge such lien of record by noting on the margin of the record thereof the words, 'Discharged by operation of law'."

No provision is made in the statutes for the discharge of a tax lien because of abatement of the tax represented by such lien or of the release of a tax lien by the present collector upon the neglect of his predecessor in office to release the lien at the proper time. Nothing is said in the statutes as to the disposition of tax liens the taxes for which are believed to have been paid but the records relative to the payments thereof have been entirely destroyed.

The tax collector should never forget that he is under bond and that he is liable to the municipality for the faithful performance of his duties. Many of the tax liens which are still on the land records of Middletown should have been released by collectors who have long since been dead. There is nothing in the law which specifically directs the present collector to release a lien which should have been released by a predecessor in office. No such release should be made unless authority in writing has been obtained from the corporation counsel. The same is true of liens represented by taxes which have been abated.

Furthermore, the town clerk should not release liens which have been on the land records for more than 15 years unless specific authority is given therefor by the corporation counsel in writing. This is because the present law relating to the discharge of tax liens through operation of time may not apply to all old tax liens. There have been many changes in the tax lien law in the last 30 years. Some of these changes, considered with validating statutes, are contradictory. No layman should attempt to go through this labyrinth of legislation and assume responsibilities by discharging liens.

Where taxes are believed to have been paid, but the records in the hands of the collector relative thereto are either lacking or scanty, affidavits might with propriety be obtained from the owners to the effect that the taxes in question have been paid. Even so, no tax lien should be released without the approval of counsel. It may well happen that the municipal counsel will not approve of the release of all tax liens, the taxes for which have been paid. If such should be the case, no attempt should be made to release these liens. They should be held until after the opening of the next general assembly when a law may be enacted specifically authorizing the release of such liens as are found to be worthy of release.

The situation in Middletown is simple compared to that in many other municipalities. This is because many of the undischarged liens in Middletown represent taxes which have been paid. In many municipalities tax liens which are on the land records cover taxes which have not been paid. It is doubted if the collector assumes any liability when he discharges a lien for a tax which he knows has been paid. The case is far otherwise when it comes to the release by the collector of a lien for a tax which has not been paid. This is true even though the liens may have been on the records for more than 15 years.

In the letter sent to tax collectors under date of April 27, I urged that they proceed with all possible diligence to search land records for undischarged liens. New liens cannot be filed except as they disclose in positive terms what prior liens exist against the real estate to be liened under the new lien law. I am mindful that collectors, as a rule, throughout the state have not money to spend to search titles for these liens. Therefore, it is necessary that some of them be furnished with competent assistants to go through the land records of their respective towns to catalogue undischarged liens. This is not a labor of love. To straighten up the chaotic condition which exists in the land records with respect to liens is an accomplishment entirely worth while. In no other way can any town expend money to better advantage than to make a thorough and painstaking search to the end that the records ultimately may be clear of liens which should at the earliest possible date be released. Having examined the records and ascertained the volume and page where each is recorded, it is recommended that they be classified as follows:

(1) Undischarged liens, the taxes for which have been actually paid.

(2) Undischarged liens, the taxes for which have been legally abated.

(3) Undischarged liens, the taxes for which are believed to have been paid, although there is no certainty thereof.

(4) Undischarged liens, the taxes for which are known not to have been paid.

I urge upon the selectmen of towns, mayors, boards of aldermen, and common councils of cities, and those in authority with respect to the expenditure of money that this matter be taken up with the respective collectors and that where the situation justifies it the work of searching records for old liens and cataloguing the same under the classifications mentioned be started without delay.

As soon as this work will have been completed, it is respectfully urged that collectors report to me as tax commissioner the results obtained, showing the number of liens in each of the classifications mentioned, together with the amount of tax which was intended to be secured thereby.

MOCK MARRIAGE MADE FEATURE AT SHOWER

A miscellaneous shower was tendered Miss Fannie Safenovitz last week in honor of her approaching marriage to Hymie Chasen of Willimantic. A feature of the evening was a mock marriage in which the Misses Mollie Segal, Esther Glasser, Frances Crumb and Celia Lidofsky participated. Several vocal selections were rendered by little Pauline and Leonor Page. Refreshments were served by the hostesses: Misses Ida Turetsky, Esther Glasser and Sarah Nowick, assisted by Celia Lidofsky, Ida Yoselevsky, Frances and Dorothy Jacobson. The bride-to-be was the recipient of many beautiful and useful gifts. Relatives and friends were present from Woonsocket, R. I., Worcester, Mass., New York city and Willimantic.

1,300 AUTOS IN TWO HOURS OVER PRESTON BRIDGE

Three Fined in Montville Court

Before Justice of the Peace Lewis La Bounte in Montville Friday night three automobile drivers were fined. A fine of $5 and costs was meted out to Peter J. Caron of New London, when he was found guilty of impeding traffic at the Uncasville four corners. He appealed to the common pleas court.

Ralph Conaino of Norwich pleaded guilty to a charge of failure to reduce speed at an intersection and he received a fine of $5 and costs.

John Le Cocq of Worcester is alleged to have driven his automobile past the four corners, cutting in and forcing a truck and another automobile off the road. He pleaded guilty to reckless driving and Justice La Bounte imposed a fine of $25 and costs and remitted $15 of it.

The court took into consideration the fact that Le Cocq had driven an auto only two months and that he was a Salvation Army man.

First Birthday Party

A most enjoyable birthday party was held Friday afternoon in honor of William Lamen, Jr., at the home of his grandmother, Mrs. Catherine Scullion, of No. 55 Union street. Games were played and vocal selections were rendered by the guests, after which cake, candy, fruit and soft drinks were served by the hostess. The surprise of the afternoon came with the cutting of a splendidly decorated birthday cake with one candle in the center designating the age of the boy.

The guests were Ann Kilroy of Meriden, Lenora Wilcox of Providence and Rita Boclair, Kathleen Laman and Master Clifford Lyons of this city. Many pretty gifts were received by William and after an enjoyable afternoon the party came to a close at 4 o'clock, the guests wishing little William all the happy returns of the day.

POETRY

The Witchery of Rain

All day the frolic rain had played
Amid the branches green;
Each leaf its silver fingers made
A twinkling tambourine,
And listening to the elfin tune
Rain-tinkled in the boughs,
My raptured senses seemed to swoon
Straightway I fell a-drowse.

O where was I? I knew not where!
I dreamed a blithe romance
Of Italy, or Spain, or fair
And sunny-storied France;
'Twas distant all that sought mine ear,
In feudal days afar:
Yet, could it be?—it seemed so near—
Was that a gay guitar?

Whose fingers spanned its strings and frets?
I did not know, or care;
It was a girl with castanets
That won my glances there.
But soon a white plume waved between
And flashing lances bright:
Then swiftly changed again the scene
And 'twas a moonlit night,

And I—a troubadour was I
Somewhere in old Provence;
I wished that Time might never fly,
'Twould always be the nonce;
No lady fair could kinder be
Than she who heard my strain—
Then from my dream I wakened me,
For it had ceased, the rain.

And, oh, the East Wind blew so chill
I would I'd stayed awake,
For I began to sneeze, and still
All down my back I ache:
And now 'tis nearly done, my lay,
Its burden, pray you, note —
Don't drowse upon a rainy day,
Or else—keep on your coat.

—Samuel Minturn Peck.

Before the Rain

The blackcaps pipe among the reeds,
And there'll be rain to follow;
There is a murmur as of wind
In every coign and hollow;
The wrens do chatter of their fears
While swinging on the barley ears.

Come hurry, while there yet is time
Full up thy scarlet bonnet.
Now, sweetheart, as my love is thine,
There is a drop upon it.
So trip it ere the storm-hag weird
Doth pluck the barley by the beard!

Lo! not a whit too soon we're housed,
The storm-witch yells above us;
The branches rapping on the panes
Seem not in truth to love us.
And look where through the clover bush
The nimble-footed rain doth rush!

—Amelia Troubetskoy.

ITALIAN SUB F-14 BROUGHT TO SURFACE GAS HAD KILLED THE 31 MEN ABOARD

Pontoons Bought the Submarine to the Surface 34 Hours After It Had Been Sunk in Collision—Rescuers Had Been Forewarned of the Tragedy When During the Afternoon the Submarine Telegraph Signals From the Sunken Craft Had Suddenly Ceased—Salvagers Had Performed Almost a Naval Miracle in Retrieving the Submersible From a Depth of 131 Feet.

ROME, Aug. 7—(AP)—The Italian submarine F-14 with its crew of 31 dead from poisonous gases was brought to the surface of the Adriatic tonight from which it had sunk after a collision 34 hours before.

The weary salvagers, who had performed almost a naval miracle in retrieving the submersible from a depth of 131 feet, peered hopefully into the opened hatches only to find they were gazing into the tomb of their comrades.

They had been forewarned of the tragedy when during the afternoon the submarine telegraph signals from the stricken craft had suddenly ceased. They continued to drive at their task, however, in the hope that the ominous silence meant simply that the crew had withdrawn to a safer part of the submarine, or at worst, that they were simply weakened by the difficulty of breathing in the fouled air. The revelation that all were dead came as a shock.

At least a few of the crew were believed to have escaped the torture of the helpless wait at the bottom of the sea for rescue for the stern compartment of the F-14 was flooded when the sharp bow of the destroyer Giusepne Missori rode over the emerging craft.

Captain Weil and Commander Fasulo were the officers who died in the submarine. Normally craft of the size of the F-14 would carry 25 men but there were several apprentice motorists on board during the battle maneuvers in which the fleet was engaged.

There were many factors in the race against death. Against the rescuers was the weather, which until this evening made the surface of the sea boisterous, and the fact that the F-14 had sunk to a depth almost double that at which she was believed capable of withstanding the pressure. In favor of the salvagers was the fact that the fleet on the spot carried practically every device necessary for the task.

Within an hour after the crash divers had gone down and within a reasonably short time the exact location of the submarine was located by observers in seaplanes circling over the scene. The divers continued at their task, made more precarious by the turbulence of the waters, until they had passed steel cables under the shattered hull. The ends of these were attached to pontoons and the F-14 was slowly raised from the bottom. Until the last moment the salvagers believed that they might win out over the gases which form in a submarine when the Sebastiano Veniero disappeared with its crew of 50 men during naval maneuvers off Sicily and was never found.

The salvage fleet dispersed sadly from the anchorage to which they had clung. Beside the powerful cranes mounted on floating pontoons which had actually raised the F-14, five torpedo boats, two scout cruisers and a number of tugs from which the divers had descended, made up the group which had worked unceasingly.

Admiral Foschini, who had personally directed the attempt at rescue, continued in charge of the salvage work.

BRITISH PILGRIMAGE TO FRENCH BATTLEFIELDS

LILLE, France, Aug. 7—(AP)—The pilgrimage to French battlefields of the British war veterans, with the prince of Wales as its central figure, is becoming a demonstration on a large scale of Anglo-French friendship.

The popularity of the prince is being constantly demonstrated, as for instance at Bethune today. The prince found himself free for 15 minutes after a ceremony and descended to the street with the prefect. As he walked bare-headed around the square he was greeted by a tornado of cheers from the populace while heads were craned from every available space at windows and on roofs.

Pending tomorrow's ceremony when the pilgrims will concentrate at Menin Gate, there was a touching service this morning on the highest point of Vimy Ridge where the imposing lighthouse mortuary and the still uncompleted memorial church stands above the French dead who lie in 34,000 graves about the hillside. A light is always burning at the top of the lofty tower beneath which repose the remains of a vast number of unknown French soldiers.

BODY OF MISSING MAN WAS FOUND IN POND

NORTH BRANFORD, Conn., Aug. 7—(AP)—The body of John Bollog, 33 missing since Sunday night, was found today floating in Max Brandt pond, the face disfigured. The man, who was employed during the winter to cut ice on the pond lived with fellow workers in a nearby shed and authorities are investigating a report that he met with foul play.

Medical Examiner Arthur F. McQueen was called into the case and an autopsy will be held to ascertain whether death was due to drowning or violence. A hearing will be held tomorrow at which friends of the dead man will be questioned. Bollog came here from Dunmore, a suburb of Scranton, Pa.

A man known only to police as "Tony" is being held at the county jail for the coroner incommunicado, without bonds. He is employed as a bush cutter and was working near the scene of Gloyer's reservoir, the spot where the body was found. It is said that he lived with Bollog, who as foreman employed by Max Brandt did lumber and ice cutting.

SAMPLES OF DRUGS WERE NOT UP TO STANDARD

NEW HAVEN, Conn., Aug. 7—(AP)—A percentage as high as 25 of samples of medicinal drugs collected from pharmacists and dispensed by them were found not to be of the substance and quality demanded or the standard required by law, a report just issued by the Connecticut Agricultural Experiment station shows.

This report deals with work under the pure food and drug laws, and cod liver oil was selected for detailed study, in relation of use of it in feeding tests. Portions of the report, which is for free distribution, are of particular interest to physicians and dietitians.

INSPECTING ALL CORN COMING FROM N. Y. STATE

GREENWICH, Aug. 7—(AP)—Six inspectors from the United States department of agriculture have been assigned to the state line at Byram Hill to inspect all corn coming into Connecticut from New York state for evidence of the European corn borer, a bug which is working havoc with the corn crops of New York, New Jersey and Pennsylvania. Thus far three hundred dozen ears have been confiscated.

RASKOB NOT GOING TO RADIO CORPORATION

NEW YORK, Aug. 7—(AP)—John J. Raskob, democratic national chairman, denied today reports printed in the Evening Post that at the close of the campaign he would sever permanently his business connections with General Motors corporation and become identified with the Radio Corporation of America.

PRESIDENT COOLIDGE TO FIGHT FOR ECONOMY

SUPERIOR, Wis., Aug. 7 (AP)—President Coolidge is determined to fight for economy more strenuously than ever at the coming session of congress, exercising his veto prerogative unsparingly on all appropriation bills which shall appear to him superfluous.

Mr. Coolidge is mindful of the appropriations which already have been made by congress for the current fiscal year. He also believes that the tax cut passed at the last session will not result as was the case with previous reductions in larger revenues. The result of these two factors, was shown him by Brig. Gen. H. M. Lord, director of the budget, to point to a possible deficit of about $100,000,000.

For this reason President Coolidge will hold down further expenditures to a minimum. He believes, however, that business conditions in the country are good and that since taxation is now apportioned in a manner to respond directly to the general prosperity of the nation, treasury receipts will be sufficient to wipe out any possible deficit.

President Coolidge feels that the recent tax reduction will not cause larger treasury receipts because it did not affect in its main provisions those taxes whose removal would vitally stimulate business and commerce. Corporation tax earnings, he believes will be virtually unchanged and will only be influenced indirectly by the reduction of corporation tax.

The tax cut, further, left unchanged taxes dealing with capital increases or transfers and therefore will not greatly stimulate more business. Mr. Coolidge believes, increases or decreases in revenues will be practically entirely dependnt, he thinks, on the degree of the country's prosperity.

AIR MAIL PILOT LONG OVERDUE AT HARTFORD

HARTFORD, Aug. 7—(AP)—Pilot Howard Stark, of the Colonial Air Transport company, flying the night air mail from Boston to New York, was more than three hours overdue here at midnight tonight and there was fear for his safety.

The mail was due here at 8.30 o'clock but did not leave Boston until 7.50 o'clock, according to a telegram received at the local post office. No word has been received since then. Since it is the practice of pilots when making a safe forced landing to find other transportation for the mail it is considered possible Stark was forced down in some out of the way place.

MISSING MAIL PLANE LANDED AT OXFORD

WORCESTER, Aug. 7—(AP)—Apprehension over the safety of the Boston to New York airplane, aroused because it was long overdue at the Hartford terminal, was dispelled late tonight when post office officials here reported the plane came down at the Oxford airport and that the pilot, Howard Stark, had brought the mail to the local office. The pilot reported he was forced down by fog shortly before 8 o'clock and he hurried to the post office arriving with two pouches of mail at 8.25.

SENATOR CURTIS TO OPEN CAMPAIGN AT ROCKY POINT, R. I

CHICAGO, Aug. 7—(AP)—Senator Charles Curtis of Kansas, republican vice presidential nominee, will open his active campaign for election at Rocky Point, R. I., on Aug. 23, it was announced at western republican headquarters today.

Senator Curtis, whose official notification ceremonies are set for Aug. 17, sent word today that he had accepted an invitation to make his first campaign speech at Rocky Point, following his speech of acceptance. It also was announced that Senator Curtis would speak at the New York state fair at Syracuse on Aug. 28.

From Aug. 23 to Sept. 10, the vice-presidential nominee will be one of the chief speakers assigned to the eastern speakers bureau of the republican national committee, the announcement said.

CABLED PARAGRAPHS

RHOEN AIRDROME, Germany, Aug. 7—(AP)—Glyer Kronfeld, of Vienna, established a new record for glider flying at this airdrome with a flight lasting three hours and three minutes during which he reached an altitude of 540 meters.

VIENNA, Aug. 7—(AP)—Dispatches from Zagreb said that an unfounded rumor that Stefan Raditch, Croatian peasant party leader, had died from the wounds received in the shooting affray in parliament, had drawn thousands of excited townsfolk to his villa.

COURTNEY AND COMPANIONS HERO GUESTS OF NEW YORK

NEW YORK, Aug. 7—(AP)—Captain Frank T. Courtney and his three companions in the trans-Atlantic flight attempt of the seaplane Whale adjusted differences with the department of immigration today, and set about enjoying their first full day as hero guests of New York.

Attired in pajamas twice his size, Captain Courtney received two immigration officers in his suite at the Ritz Carlton and was told that regulations which would have made his report to Ellis Island because he and his companions had not met inspectors when arriving yesterday, had been waived by Benjamin M. Day, immigration inspector.

"My understanding is that they arrived as temporary visitors and planned to return to England within a very short time," Day said commenting on the "illegal" entry of the airmen. Courtney and E. B. Hosmer, backer of the flight; Hugh Gilmour, radio operator and Fred Pierce, mechanic, were removed at Quarantine from the Minnewaska, which rescued them at sea, to the municipal tug Macon, on which they were taken to the Battery for the start of their reception by the city.

While Courtney and his companions were guests at a luncheon of the British chamber of trade and enjoyed a sight-seeing trip about the city, word came to New York that the Whale, abandoned at sea after fire aboard forced the airmen down, had been picked up. August Hansen company, local agent of the Lloyd Mediterranean line said that the Italian steamer Valprato, bound from Benisafa, Algeria, to Sydney, N. S., had lifted the crippled plane from the ocean. Previously Courtney had said he received word from a steamer that the Whale was still afloat last night.

Courtney and Hosmer would like to try the trans-Atlantic flight again. They said if ships let their flying boat drift unmolested it would have floated to the Spanish coast and be available for another try.

EARLY RETURNS FROM PRIMARIES IN MISSOURI

ST. LOUIS, Aug. 7—(AP)—Returns in the contests for the republican nomination for governor in the Missouri primary tonight after tabulation of 482 out of 4,134 precincts gave Caulfield 13,771; Bennett 11,065; Wieland 3,515; Schneider 2,830; Hodgdon 1,822.

Roscoe E. Patterson, had a lead of nearly 2000 over David M. Proctor for republican nomination for U. S. senator on returns from 350 of the 4,134 precincts. The vote: Patterson 9,775; Proctor 7,863; Atkeson 1,418; Frank 2,116; Bundschu 1,044; Bogy 445.

Charles M. Hay, St. Louis dry leader, was leading James A. Collet of Salisbury, wet candidate sponsored by Senator James A. Reed, more than two to one tonight in the contest for the democratic United States senatorial nomination on the basis of returns from 142 scattered precincts of 4,134 in Missouri. Hay had 7,490 votes, Collet 3,271 and Robert I. Young, farmer candidate 1,267.

POLICE OFFICERS BOOKED ON CHARGES OF MURDER

LOS ANGELES, Aug. 7—(AP)—Two former police officers and two Japanese farmers were arrested and booked on charges of suspicion of murder today following the killing of Gaetano Binetti, alleged bootlegger, and the probable fatal shooting of his wife, Concetta.

Those held were G. F. Watkins and L. R. Williams, ex-policemen, both of Santa Monica, who operate a cafe on the West Side; and G. Lunisawa and H. Okamoto, truck farmers also of the beach city.

Binetti and his wife were shot as they lay in bed at their home early today. Four men entered the house and one was heard to accuse Binetti of stealing some liquor.

Police declared the four men under arrest had been connected with liquor running from ships north of Santa Monica.

CONFESSED MURDER OF HUSBAND WITH BREAD KNIFE

NEW YORK, Aug. 7—(AP)—Glenn Kirkwood, youthful Queens veterinary and radio lecturer, was stabbed today with a bread knife and his wife was charged with the murder. She told the district attorney she inflicted the wounds, more than a dozen, accidentally as she fought for possession of the knife so that she could take her own life.

A patrolman found Kirkwood early today on the floor in the kitchen of his Woodside home while his wife, who was six years his senior, was crying over and over "I've killed my husband, I've killed my husband."

Kirkwood died before he could say more than that he had had an altercation with his wife. Later Mrs. Kirkwood seemingly calm except that she smoked one cigarette after another in endless succession, sat in the district attorney's office and made what he termed a "full confession".

NEW BRITAIN TEACHER VICTIM OF GAS FUMES

NEW BRITAIN, Aug. 7—(AP)—Mary E. Reynolds, a teacher in the English department of the Senior high school, was found dead today on the kitchen floor of her home by her brother, James Reynolds, president and treasurer of Hugh Reynolds Grain and Feed company. The room was filled with gas fumes which flowed from an open jet under the hot water heater. Police said that she either suffered a fainting spell prior to taking a bath or thought that she had the lighter going. An accidental verdict of death was pronounced.

Assures Hoover Of Victory In N. Y. State

Predictions of John Knight, Republican Leader in Empire State Senate.

STANFORD UNIVERSITY, Cal., Aug. 7—(AP)—Splitting up his time between recreation and political conferences, Herbert Hoover today got some new angles on the political outlook and some more reassuring reports on the outcome in November.

Soon after breakfast the republican presidential nominee left his home with a few friends for a long automobile ride in the Santa Clara valley. Returning for a late lunch, he saw a number of visitors, including republican leaders in several states, an editor and several business men. John Knight, republican leader in the New York state senate, the first of his callers, predicted that Hoover would carry Alfred E. Smith's home state by a substantial majority and also stated that the country would elect Hoover.

"I do not think the time has come when the people will elect Smith president," he said.

"Mr. Hoover is a man of great constructive experience. On the other hand Governor Smith has had no business experience except that he has obtained in office holding.

"The governor reached the maximum of his strength in his last race for governor and even granting that all who voted for him for that office vote for him for the presidency, he will fall short of attaining the vote which President Coolidge received in 1924. But I do not believe that all who would support him for governor of New York will cast their ballot for him for president."

Harry Culver, of Culver City, Cal., president of the national real estate boards, expressed his confidence that the republican nominee would carry California, but said his visits over the country indicated to him that there would be a "big battle on in the country at large."

"The thing we have to worry about in California," he added, "is over-confidence. That keeps the voters away from the polls and we should get them out in force."

Other callers at the Hoover home during the afternoon were John E. Pickett, of San Francisco, editor of rural newspapers, and William Marvin, a member of the republican state central committee.

The republican nominee tomorrow will devote more time to the outline of the speech he is to make at his Iowa birthplace, West Branch, on August 21, in which he will deal primarily with the agricultural question.

DEBATED DEM. AND REP. LAW ENFORCEMENT PLANKS

WASHINGTON, Aug. 7—(AP)—The relative merits of the law enforcement planks in the democratic and republican platforms were debated over the radio tonight by Mrs. Franklin D. Roosevelt, head of Governor Smith's advisory committee for women and Mrs. Mabel Walker Willebrandt, assistant attorney general in charge of prohibition cases an da Hoover supporter.

Speaking first on the "voters' service" program of the National League of Women Voters and the National Broadcasting company, Mrs. Roosevelt declared that the democratic law enforcement plank, from her viewpoint as a dry, seemed "much more specific" than the republican plank, and that Governor Smith, while favoring modification of the Volstead act, "would be the first to agree that in changing the law he is powerless unless congress agrees with him."

Mrs. Willebrandt, speaking for Hoover, declared the democratic law enforcement plank did not go as far as the republican, charged that Governor Smith had "scrapped" his party's pledge by his message to the Houston convention, and asserted Herbert Hoover "has a private life and habits of temperance which square with the party's pledge."

GROWTH IN RESOURCES OF NATIONAL BANKS

WASHINGTON, Aug. 7—(AP)—Resources of national banks in the United States, Alaska and Hawaii were $28,508,239,000 on last June 30, the largest amount in history of the national banking system, it was announced today by Comptroller of the Currency McIntosh.

The resources on June 30 exceeded by approximately $350,000,000 the resources of the banks on December 31, 1927, the only other date when the resources reached the $28,000,000,000 mark.

Figures for the bank call of June 30 were reported by 7,691 national banks and exceeded by $934,552,000 the returns shown in reports from 7,734 banks on last February 28 and were $1,926,296,000 larger than those reported by 7,796 banks on June 30, 1927.

Loans and discounts, including rediscounts, on June 30 amounted to $15,144,995,000 an increase of $745,548,000 since last February and $1,189,299,000 more than a year ago.

SIR J. AUSTIN CHAMBERLAIN ORDERED TO TAKE REST

LONDON, Aug. 7—(AP)—Sir J. Austen Chamberlain, British secretary for foreign affairs, has been ordered to take a complete rest in order that he may recover completely from the attack of bronchial pneumonia under which he has been suffering.

This became known today when an official communique was issued designating Lord Cushendun as acting foreign secretary. Lord Cushendun will represent Great Britain at the September meeting of the council and of the assembly of the league of nations. The signing of the Kellogg pact in Paris late this month was not mentioned in the communique but it is thought certain that Cushendun's signature will appear on that document.

HOPE FOR RECOVERY OF G. E. BRENNAN ABANDONED

CHICAGO, Aug. 7—(AP)—Hope for the recovery of George E. Brennan, who has been seriously ill from septic poisoning for more than a week, was abandoned at 6:45 o'clock tonight when the democratic national committeeman lapsed into unconsciousness.

Mr. Brennan suffered a relapse during the day. His recent illness was brought on by an infected tooth. He underwent an operation but septic poisoning developed.

The democratic leader's family has been with him constantly. Last rites of the Catholic church already have been administered.

Steamship In Center Of A Tropical Storm

Message From the Lempira Said Lifeboats Had Been Washed From the Ship.

MIAMI, Fla., Aug. 7—(AP)—The Tropical Radio Telegraph company here received a message at 5:30 p. m. from the steamship Lempira which reported being in the center of the tropical storm at latitude 26.30, longitude 79.40, slightly southeast of Palm Beach.

The message stated that the storm had increased to hurricane force and was practically stationary. The vessel reported the wind velocity at upward of 75 miles an hour and the barometer reading at 28.70.

The message from the Lempira said that lifeboats had been washed from the ship.

EXTENSIVE STORM DAMAGE IN WEST PALM BEACH

WEST PALM BEACH, FLA., Aug. 7—(AP)—Lashed by a tropical storm which seemingly was increasing in intensity, this city and Palm Beach were in darkness tonight as the inhabitants waited for the full force of the blow, expected before dawn.

The center of the disturbance which swept up last night from the West Indies apparently was stationary about 60 miles off shore. Ships near the center reported winds of hurricane force, upwards of 75 miles an hour, while the velocity here was estimated at sixty miles when night fell.

Extensive damage was reported here and in Palm Beach chiefly was confined to trees, shrubbery, small buildings, signs and awnings. Only one person was known to have been injured. T. P. Culbreth, an employe of the Florida Light and Power company was badly shocked when his automobile ran into a broken line.

While few persons ventured across the bridge over Lake Worth that separates this city from Palm Beach, reports were that Ocean Boulevard which skirts the sea appeared to be doomed. The highway was washed out during the hurricane of September 1926, and tonight heavy seas with a swollen tide against menaced it.

The first blow came here this morning when for a few minutes the wind reached a velocity of 60 miles an hour. A lull followed the blast and this afternoon the storm set in again. This was similar to the experience yesterday at Nassau, capital of the Bahamas, where the storm was felt twice during the day.

Barometer readings here tonight were at about 29.62 within a few points of the readings registered during the 1926 storm.

VIOLENT STORM RAGING AT WEST PALM BEACH

ATLANTA, Aug. 7—(AP)—The American Telephone and Telegraph company shortly after 9 o'clock tonight reported all its lines out of commission by the storm between Daytona Beach and West Palm Beach.

The station's operators said they were centering their efforts to keep the vessel from running ashore on the beach.

CROW INDIANS PRESENT TRACT OF LAND TO U. S. GOV'T

BILLINGS, Mont., Aug. 7—(AP)—At the foot of the picturesque Pryor mountains, in the Crow country, famed in Indian lore and legend, Chief Plenty Coos, head of the Crow nation and Nestor of American Indian chieftains, today formally presented the people of the United States a tract of land to be used as a park by future generations of both whites and reds. It has been the aged chieftain's home more than half a century.

Major General James G. Harbord retired, under special commission from the interior department, accepted the gift for the government and voiced to Coos the thanks of the American people. In the picturesque background and with colorful settings—Chief Plenty Coos' braves in their tribal regalia mingled with General Harbord's escort of army reserve officers.

Because of his admiration for General Harbord as a soldier, Chief Plenty Coos adopted the general into the Crow tribe, conferring on him the Indian name meaning "Mountain Eagle" the chief presented General Harbord an elaborate war bonnet and the two warriors smoked the pipes of peace while the young braves of the tribe danced around them.

Presentation of the park, a forty acre tract, 40 miles south of Billings not as a memorial to himself but as a symbol of the peace that has existed between his people and the whites since advent of the latter into the Crow country, has been in the mind of Plenty Coos several years.

Old men of the tribe, said the chief, long have pondered on why the Great Spirit seems to love his white children most. "We have come now to believe it is because we were late in finding the true God."

Judge David D. Hoag, of Joplin, Mo., at the republican state committee headquarters today said he has made a recent survey of political conditions as they affect the national ticket in all of the states west of the Mississippi and was convinced that all of those states normally republican, will cast their electoral votes for Hoover and Curtis.

GOV. SMITH DEMANDS PROOF OF CHARGE OF REV. STRATON

Challenges Pulpit Statement That the Democratic Presidential Nominee "as a Public Man" is "the Deadliest Foe in America Today of the Forces of Moral Progress and True Political Wisdom"—Gov. Smith Requests That He Be Invited to the Clergyman's Church and Given an Opportunity to Be Heard on His Side of the Question.

ALBANY, N. Y., Aug. 7—(AP)—Demanding proof of the charge and the right to reply, Governor Smith today took Rev. John Roach Straton to task for the reported declaration from his pulpit in Calvary Baptist church in New York Sunday that the democratic presidential nominee "as a public man" is the "deadliest foe in America today of the forces of moral progress and true political wisdom."

Smith in a caustic letter to Straton requested "in a spirit of American fair play" that he be invited to the clergyman's church and given an opportunity to be heard on his side of the question. He promised to answer any questions Dr. Straton might put to him regarding his public career.

The letter of the governor to the New York minister was given out by Smith personally to newspapermen, one of whom remarked:

"He'll take you upon that."

"That's what he's getting this letter for," Smith came back.

The text of the governor's letter was:

"Dear Mr Straton:

"The New York Times of Monday, August the 6th, quotes you as saying from the pulpit of your church that as a public man I am the deadliest foe in America today of the forces of moral progress and true political wisdom.

"I do not know why you should make a statement of that kind, but I do know that I never will permit it to go unchallenged. I have spent 25 years in the service of the state in elective office and the record of that service is open to the public. I do not feel that I should charge you with making this statement for any political purpose, as it was made in a church devoted to the teachings of Christ, one of which was 'Thou shalt not bear false witness against thy neighbor.'

"I therefore ask you, in a spirit of American fair play, to invite me to your church at any time that suits your convenience during the week inclusive of and beginning September the 2nd and I ask you to make the same statement in my presence with such proof of its truth as you may be able to advance. I further ask that you permit me to make full reply. In order that you may not be embarrassed I will permit you, if you choose, to conduct the meeting by question and answer. I will be ready to answer any question you may put to me which, in your opinion, will in any degree tend to justify your remarks.

"For eight years, I have been the governor of the state of which you are a resident, and I am firmly convinced that you owe it to me to give me an opportunity to be heard before your own congregation on the statement that you made about my political career.

"Very truly yours,

(Signed) "ALFRED E. SMITH."

Before copies of his letter to Dr. Straton were distributed, Governor Smith read the text to newspapermen. On a table and floor nearby were copies of the New York legislative record covering the years he was in the assembly. From each protruded paper slips marking the parts which dealt with his own votes on social legislation, under attack from William Allen White, the Kansas editor.

Smith disclosed yesterday that he intended to study them in relation to White's charges that he was friendly to the liquor interests but threw no further light today on the uncertainty whether he will make a direct reply to his assailant.

As he handed out the Straton letter with the caution it was for morning papers, the governor told the newspapermen he had another story for them for immediate publication. Then he produced copies of identical letters he had sent to the commissioner of public safety, district attorney and sheriff at Saratoga Springs where a racing meet is on, that if there were grounds for reports that gambling and vice flourished there, and they did not institute a clean-up he would take steps looking to their removal from office.

"I guess that's enough news for one day," Smith remarked as he cut short his press conference, preparatory to holding a hearing, as governor, in an adjoining room on appeals for clemency for four men in the Sing Sing death house.

REV. STRATON ACCEPTS CHALLENGE OF SMITH

NEW YORK, Aug. 7—(AP)—The Rev. John Roach Straton tonight announced he would accept the challenge of Gov. a sermon last Sunday when he said Alfred E. Smith to repeat in the governor's presence his charges made in Gov. Smith was "the deadliest foe in America of the forces of moral progress and true political wisdom."

"I shall certainly give Gov. Smith the satisfaction he seeks," Mr. Straton said in a statement over the telephone from Greenwood Lake, N. J., where he is on vacation.

Mr. Straton suggested that the meeting be held in Madison Square Garden or some other large auditorium, saying he did not think Calvary Baptist church, of which he is pastor, would accommodate the crowd which would want to attend such a meeting. He also suggested that Gov. Smith and he tour the south in a series of debates.

The full text of Mr. Straton's statement follows:

"I have not yet received the letter from Governor Smith but have heard the substance of it given by the newspapers. I am greatly interested in his message. I feel that it is only a matter of fair play to repeat to his face and in his presence and at the time he suggested my sermon of Sunday.

"I am willing to meet him in New York and repeat the charges. However, I believe that the discussion should be held in Madison Square Garden or some other large auditorium. Calvary Baptist church can accommodate one of the largest audiences of any church in the city but it would not be large enough for the crowd of people who would want to hear such a debate. I believe it would be far preferable to hold it in some large hall. But those arrangements can be easily made.

"Inasmuch as my message was a warning to the southern democracy, which I love so well because I at one time lived in the south, I believe it would be appropriate for Governor Smith to swing around the circle with me and debate the issues raised by my sermon in the south."

"I feel so deeply the tremendous danger in which the southern democracy has been placed," he added. "The south has been put in a false corner by the astute political maneuvering of Governor Smith."

Dr. Straton explained that the south was in an embarrassing position because of the "twist away from the prohibition plank of the platform by Governor Smith."

PICKETING ACTIVITIES IN FALL RIVER ABANDONED

FALL RIVER, Mass., Aug. 7—(AP)—Picketing activities at the Lincoln mill and the finishing plant of the American Printing company, where groups of workers declared strikes yesterday, had been virtually abandoned tonight as police patrolled the vicinity of the mills. No other plants in the city were affected.

A demonstration called by the organizers of the textile mills committee for early this evening failed to take place although a large number of workers and sightseers gathered about the "Liberty lot" on Mulberry street where the meeting was to have been held. This lot was recently purchased by the textile mills committee after Albert Weisbord, one of the leaders in that organization had been arrested for trespassing when he addressed a meeting on the property. More than a score of police were on duty at the lot but their only problem was to keep traffic moving. One intoxicated man was arrested.

The quiet that prevailed tonight was attributed by police and others to the action of James Tansey, head of the American Federation of Textile Operatives, in denouncing the strike in a statement issued during the afternoon.

IDA M. TARBELL HOPES FOR ELECTION OF SMITH

EASTON, Conn., Aug. 7—(AP)—It does not augur well for a political party to be in complete control of government too long, thinks Ida M. Tarbell, author and lecturer, of New York and Easton, consequently she is looking forward in the hope that Governor Alfred E. Smith, of New York, democratic candidate for president, will carry Connecticut.

Miss Tarbell who has been appointed to the New York state committee headed by Mrs. Franklin D. Roosevelt, said that she intends to lend some assistance to the Smith campaign, but that she does not propose to be very active, either in New York or Connecticut.

Miss Tarbell said she understands her appointment in New York is to a sort of honorary committee. She does not intend to make any campaign speeches, but she has written several articles on Governor Smith for magazines and other publications.

Years ago Miss Tarbell was a republican, but "not much of a one" she said.

STUDEBAKER TO BACK THE PIERE-ARROW CO.

BUFFALO, N. Y., Aug. 7—(AP)—Two of the oldest manufacturers of vehicles in America became associated today when stockholders of the Pierce-Arrow Motor Car company approved a reorganization of the company in which the Studebaker corporation will have an interest.

Although plans for the reorganization, which already had been approved by the board of directors, do not call for a merger, the Studebaker corporation with its selling organization will back the new company as well as furnish certain rough parts for the manufacture of Pierce-Arrow cars. Allied interests of the two companies will have total assets approximating $200,000,000, making it the fourth largest manufacturing group in the motor industry.

Studebaker will invest $2,000,000 in the new company, Pierce-Arrow directors said. In return it will receive all, or 230,125 shares of the class "B" stock to be issued.

EARNINGS OF RADIO CORPORATION OF AMERICA

NEW YORK, Aug. 7—(AP)—The Radio Corporation of America and subsidiary companies had a gross income during the quarter ended June 30 of $11,690,679.81 and surplus profits of $1,401,905.15. Surplus profits for the six months ended June 30 were $4,524,779.20.

The gross income, the statement of operations issued today showed, was derived from sales, communications, real estate operations, and other sources. To estimate the surplus profits for the three months period $10,288,774.65 was deducted from the gross income for general operating and administrative expenses, depreciation, cost of sales, patent amortization, estimated federal income tax, and accrued reserve for year end adjustments.

ANSONIA GIRL WAS DROWNED OFF MILFORD

MILFORD, Conn., Aug. 7—(AP)—Several hours after she had left her home to go swimming in Long Island sound today, several boys in a rowboat found the body of Catherine Fitzgerald, 19, Ansonia, about 50 feet from shore. Police and firemen worked for over two hours with an inhalator but it was believed that the girl had died of heart trouble or acute indigestion while in the water. Her only survivor is an uncle.

SAYS FINANCIAL DRIVE RESULTS ARE GRATIFYING

(Special to The Bulletin)

WILLIMANTIC, Aug. 7—A gratifying letter on the success of the recent drive for a new industry has been received by President Frank P. Fenton of the chamber of commerce from M. J. Warner of Pine Orchard, one of the principal owners of the Rockville-Willimantic Lighting Co., who with his associates recently purchased the Quidnick-Windham Manufacturing Co. mills. The letter follows: Dear Mr. Fenton: J. F. Ahern called at my office yesterday and informed me of the results obtained through the energy of you and your associates in raising an amount of money which it is hoped will result in the establishment of a new manufacturing enterprise in your city. The results are gratifying in themselves, and it seems to me justify a spirit of optimism as to the future of your city, in which we are all interested. Your success in this matter has demonstrated to the people of Willimantic, that by the exercise of community spirit and co-operation such as shown in this instance, a great deal can be done to improve the economic condition of the city and of every one of its inhabitants. It has been a pleasure to us to co-operate to this worthy end and we stand ready to co-operate further to the extent of our ability, in any worthy enterprise looking toward the betterment of your city

I am glad to have this opportunity to express to you and through you to your associates my personal felicitations and congratulations upon the result obtained in this particular instance.

Believe me, with assurance of my personal regards,

Very cordially yours.
M. J. WARNER.

A committee to boost the local attendance at the annual fall conclave of the 30th Rotary district to be held at the Aspinwall hotel, Lenox, Mass., Oct. 4, 5 and 6, was appointed at the weekly luncheon-meeting of the Willimantic Rotary club held in the Nathan Hale hotel today. The committee, as named by President Raymond A. Parker, follows: Sergeant-at arms, Aime J. Martineau; chairman Ronald M. Cooke; Eugene W. Latimer and James P. Mustard. An invitation will be extended the Norwich Rotary club to participate in a return golf match at the Country club with a joint Rotary meeting in the Nathan Hale hotel at noon. The tentative date for this event was set for Wednesday, Aug. 22, and the committee appointed to make arrangements consists of Louis H. Arnold, chairman; John F. Ahern, Roland B. Jordan and James P. Mustard. In connection with the summer schedule there was no regular program, the entertainment hour being devoted to singing under the leadership of Song Leader Harry W. Standish, assisted by John F. Ahern.

FUNERALS

John Bogacruk

Funeral services for John Bogacruk 13, who was drowned in Franklin Saturday night, were held this morning, with a requiem high mass in St. Joseph's church at 9 o'clock. Rev. Henry E. Quinn was the celebrant, and Mrs. Edmund R. Portelance presided at the organ. Burial was in St. Joseph's cemetery, where Rev. Father Quinn conducted a committal service. NOANK

A local man, who left the village about nine months ago to see the world, with his banjo, for California to enter the movies, found no job for him. He waited in line for four hours and was turned down and the funny man was out of luck and for six months nothing was heard from him. Monday morning a letter came from China that took 19 days to reach this side of the ocean and it was from the local man and his banjo. It was read at the Aunt Sarah Peabody club meeting on Monday evening where 30 members gathered to hear the good news from a member that is far away from home. "Since I left the fishing village I have roamed around the world, trying to get in the movies in Hollywood and failed. Then going on a big steamer from the Golden state to the land of China, I worked my way with the banjo and making them laugh on the steamer and collecting some real United States money. Getting in Hong Kong I ran across some Standard Oil men and talked about God's country, the good old United States. Then I gave a free show, singing and telling jokes, and showed them how the Black Bottom dance was done. It was a real evening spent with the oil men. Learning to eat rice with the chop sticks, I almost swallowed one of them and then I was still hungry. Give my regards to the old gang and I will see them in 1929, when I will return to the fishing village."

Ringing of the school bell on Monday evening was to call the tax payers and voters together for a school meeting in the eighth grade room, with the school committee, George Brown, George Carpenter, Jr., and Mrs. R. Sawyer. The 40 people in the room were asked about the heating of the building, so the pupils can enjoy themselves in the rooms without wearing coats. A standing vote was called for, to put in a new boiler and re-pipe everything, making it a first-class job. The work was given to the J. H. Webster Heating Co. of the village. Work is to be started at once so as to have it done by the time school opens.

Miss Iva Ressiognat of Providence, R. I., is visiting Mrs. H. Park for a week.

The fishing fleet in Block Island grounds after sword fish found the weather on the water cold, while the people on the mainland were suffering with the heat. "We are freezing with the cool air and we are wearing our winter garments and lumber jackets each day," one old salt, Mate George Devine, said. "I have followed the sea since George Washington crossed the river, but never saw such cool weather befors never in the history of the fishing business and in August. The sword fish will not show around, but go where it is warmer."

JEWETT CITY

PARADE WILL PRECEDE MUCH HERALDED GAME

JEWETT CITY, Aug. 7—Everybody is all "het up" waiting for the much heralded ball game Thursday night between the benedicts and the leap-year candidates. A parade is slated to precede the great contest. At six o'clock the Voluntown band will endeavor to put courage into the heart of the umpire, Electrically Lighted Tormey, for he has the sympathy of fans on both sides.

They will give a concert at Postoffice square. The parade will start at 6:15 at Soule street, march up East Main down Wilson, to Ashland Park and the battle will be on. A platoon of police will head the procession, followed by the band. The borough officials will ride in horse drawn vehicles of ancient vintage. Then the two managers Sheik Blake and Beau Brummel McGovern will ride fiery steeds, on which they have been practising for some time, taking several headers, with the usual results. Fatima Czar Bambino Hiscox will drive the ancient town hearse, if it will stand the strain, and pallbearers will attend to any misfortune. Then the apron string men will march bravely to their fate—they are used to anticipating battles, they say. Umpire Tormey will occupy a closely guarded position in the parade, for the American Legion firing squad will carefully surround their buddy with newly oiled guns manned by crack sharpshooters. Stretchers borne by qualified hospital graduates will follow. Then will dance along the way the confident young bachelors, very sure they are of bringing home the bacon. Everybody will be clothed in suitable habiliments—what ever that is—and everybody who has an automobile, horse, donkey, or oxen, will help the affair by joining in the parade.

The married men go to bat first. The umpires on bases are Sol Paquette, Ted Shea and Eli Larue. If the weather rains, then the game will take place on Monday evening. Agent L. M. Carpenter has offered the use of the Ashland Casino for free dancing after the game.

Mr. and Mrs. Maciel Miss, Stanley Miss and Miss Nellie Miss, are home from Westfield, Mass., where they attended a wedding on Monday.

Quinebaug clambake, Sunday, August 12. Band concert 1 to 3.—Adv.

Miss Rose Sharkey has returned from a five weeks' visit in Nantucket.

The Congregational church and Sunday school picnic will be held at Gardner's lake on Saturday, leaving the church at 10:30.

Mrs. Albert Safarz and children of Millville, Mass., are at home after a two week's visit with Mr. and Mrs. Maciel Miss.

There seems to be no inclination on the part of the state of Connecticut to give the towns of Griswold and Lisbon any opportunity for business apathy. Beginning in the near future road contracts that will cost around a half million dollars will be put into operation, right in what properly may be called Jewett City. Two great bridges are to be built, with steel and cement construction work, the like of which has never been known in this section in all its history. Hundreds of men are to be employed. There will be skilled cement workers, highway engineers, steel riveters and the usual manual hands assigned to grading and general labor.

Some of the old timers today were looking over the proposed survey of the new bridge which is to span both the Quinebaug and Pachaug rivers. The time was recalled when, during the flood of 1886, all the area which is to be the site of the proposed new construction, was occupied by a roaring torrent which no local bridge or dam was able to withstand.

Thirty years ago, two local flower hunters discovered that elecampane flourished on two of the several Stonehill cross roads. Today local herbarium makers may add this little known plant to their collections.

Whenever the passer-by along these back country lanes comes upon the great yellow disks of the elecampane blossoms peeping over the pasture walls, he may know that summer is at its height. Hereabouts, in days gone by, local farmers made use of the roots as a remedy of epizootic, and called it horse heal. The botanists say that its name is supposed to be a corruption of ala Campania, and occurs to the frequent occurrence of the plant in that ancient province of southern Italy.

Sunday night Adam Rojeski left one of his cars in the yard outside his garage on Railroad avenue. Monday morning the car was found to be stripped. Everything that could be detached from the car had been taken away.

During that night Officer Viezarde saw a boy just on this side of the Lisbon bridge carrying a load of automobile cushions.

The matter will come under the jurisdiction of the juvenile court. State Trooper Raymond Gordon and local Officer Viezarde went to the boy's home today and recovered a large load of automobile accessories which check up as belonging to the Rojeski car.

Friday and Saturday at 3 p. m. shaded outdoor temperatures were 94 and 96 degrees—and very little activities was going on in the village, except in the swimming holes. The brief storm of Friday night sent people hurrying home, but many responded when the fire siren was called at about 8.30 p. m. for a fire at the former Turnbull farm on Wauwecus Hill, now owned by John Adamsky, a former resident of the village.

It isn't difficult to induce the other fellow to compromise when he realizes that you have the best of it.

WESTERLY

PROBATE COURT HOLDS TWO HOUR SESSION

(Special to The Bulletin)

WESTERLY, Aug. 7—A two hour session of Westerly probate court beginning at 2 p. m. was held on Tuesday afternoon and Probate Court Edward M. Burke disposed of probate matters as follows:

Estate of Robert S. Smith. Inventory received from Washington Trust company, executor, for whom Trust Officer Thomas Perry appeared in court, the same being received, examined, allowed and ordered recorded.

Estate of Robert S. Smith. First and final account of Washington Trust company as guardian, Sept. 6 1924 to June 4, 1928, showing no balance with no objection was received from Thomas Perry and allowed and ordered recorded.

Estate of John Galin. Attorney Herbert W. Rathbun appeared for the estate and reported the claim of Oliver Roi Portelance for $657.56, referred to Lewis Stanton as commissioner appointed by the court, to be a just one and recommended payment and the fee to the commissioner who had submitted a written opinion. Court allowed the claim.

Estate of Hannah C. Crumb. First and final account of the Industrial Trust company, executor from July 19, 1927, to July 19, 1928, presented Trust Officer Lewis Stanton, received, allowed and ordered recorded.

Estate of Ann Taber, alias Annie Taber. Petition received from daughter, Mrs. Lulu M. Smith of Wequetequock and brother, represented in court by Attorney Clarence E. Roche that she be appointed administratrix. Objection presented by Attorney Herbert W. Rathbun, who appeared in court to represent a son, Edward S. Taber of Norwich and sister, with the claim made that there was friction in the family. Following arguments Judge Burke named Mrs. Lulu M. Smith of Wequetequock and Edward S. Taber of Norwich as co-executors. Joint bond was set at $1,00 with surety satisfactory to Clerk Whipple. Everett Barnes was named appraiser.

Estate of Peleg Clark. Closing of this estate of the architect and builder of the Rhode Island hotel block, formerly the Dixon house and recently destroyed by fire, which has remained open for settlement for 28 years, was presaged in the filing by Judge Herbert W. Rathbun of the first and final account of Mrs. F. Virginia Briggs, administratrix, represented by Col. William M. P. Bower of Providence, the same showing a balance being received, allowed and ordered recorded.

Estate of Hannah Louise Crandall. Petition received from Attorneys John J. Dunn, representing Administrator Riley of paternal relatives and Clarence E. Roche appearing for Administrator Murphy for permission to sell personal effects at a private sale. After an extended argument Judge Burke was not disposed to grant the petition and recommended public auction inasmuch as a search of town records showed that the record of marriage appeared for the groom, "John Crandall, parents, Charles and Margery" bride, "Hannah L. Crandall, parents unknown." The case was continued nisi.

Estate of Alphonse Parrollo. Petition received from Salvatore Parollo that Alphonse died a resident of Westerly Aug. 7, 1924, intestate, that he be named administrator. He was so confirmed with bond $1300 with surety. Joseph A. Guarino was named appraiser.

Estate of Caleb Clarke. Petition received from George W. Spiers that Charles P. Clarke be appointed administrator. He was so named with waive of notice and bond of $2,000 with George Spiers surety. Lewis Stanton was named appraiser.

FUNERAL

Mrs. Henry Hughes

Funeral services for Mrs. Henry Hughes were held on Monday morning by Rev. Fr. Cotter with a high mass of requiem at St. Edward's church, Medfield, Mass. Mrs. Hughes was a former resident of Westerly. She is survived by her husband, Henry Hughes, also a daughter, Mrs Kenneth Clark, three grandsons, seven sisters, four brothers, three nephews and one niece.

Four sisters from Westerly, Mrs James Marshall, Mrs. Frank Knight, Mrs. John Holliday and Mrs. Mary B. Schroeder, were among those attending the funeral.

Indian Meeting house on the old Narragansett Indian reservation in the town of Charlestown, R. I., will be the scene of the annual August meeting next Sunday. The services this year will be purely religious in nature, according to the Rev. LeRoy Perry. In some years the annual gathering has taken on the appearance of an Indian pow-wow, with feathers, war paint and other picturesque accoutrements of the aboriginal Rhode Islanders worn by a few of the modern descendants of the Narragansetts.

In a special session of third district court on Monday Danielson McGouran 37, of 61 Oak street, Westerly, was fined $150 and costs by Judge Oliver H. DANIELSON

EDMOND BERNIER FOUND DEAD AT HIS HOME

(Special to The Bulletin)

DANIELSON, Aug. 7—Edmond Bernier, 47, for a number of years a resident of this town, was found dead this morning in the kitchen of his home, apparently a victim of heart disease. According to a statement from relatives of the deceased, Mr. Bernier had been in the custom of remaining in the kitchen of his home reading evenings until a late hour before he retired. When last seen, Tuesday evening, Mr. Bernier was reading a newspaper and was thought to be in good health.

This morning he was found lying on the floor and had been dead for many hours. Mr. Bernier is a native of Canada, but for the past years has resided in Danielson, working here as a laborer and a mill hand in several of the local textile plants. He is survived by six brothers, Napoleon, Wilfred, Anseleme, Alfred, Alphonse, Joseph and Hector.

Forces of the state department of health will soon come to Danielson for a well child conference, which will be in the interests of all children of the town who will enter school in the fall. Preliminary work, relative to a house-to-house canvass, is now being done under the direction of Mrs. Alfred L. Reed of Reynolds street. Mrs. Reed's work is for the purpose of interesting parents and obtaining their co-operation in bringing the children to the conference on Aug. 14.

At the conference, children will be examined by Dr. Elizabeth Ingraham of child's hygiene department of the state department of health, assisted by a nurse. Examinations for defects of the teeth and other defects that may be corrected before the child begins schooling will be sought. Teeth will be cleaned and other hygiene work will be done by Dr. Ingraham and her assistant free of charge.

Every mother in the community is asked to co-operate and see that their youngsters are present at the conference to be held at the high school on Tuesday, Aug. 14, when the health survey of the children of Danielson will be made.

At the special town meeting held Monday evening, a petition for sewer extensions on Broad street northward from Academy to accommodate property owners there and on Reynolds street was introduced. Through some agreement with the petitioners, the bill was withdrawn and action upon it was passed up for an indefinite period.

Recently Chief of Police John MacFarland has been troubled with broken electric lights, both on the streets and on private dwelling houses. The broken bulbs are said to be the work of young vandals and an investigation of the matter is now being conducted by the police of the borough in an attempt to crack stone flingers. In past years boys have gathered on the streets after sunset and have spent part of their evenings in making certain sections of the community dark by destroying the electric lamps. In a few instances the youths were discovered at their folly and were made to pay for their pastime. Chief MacFarland said today, the same method will be used now if the modern Davids are apprehended in the act.

With part of Danielson's military groups already in camp at Niantic, the remaining soldier body, the Service Battery, will leave town on Aug. 13, when the advance detachment leaves for Tobyhanna, Pa., under the command of Lieut. Anthony Sutherland. The advance detachment will consist of about one-half of the company. They will leave Danielson with eight of the large army trucks, headed for Hartford and Danbury, on Saturday, Aug. 18, the remaining half of the motor company will leave for Tobyhanna. They will go by way of Norwich, under the command of Lieut. Ernest Dyson. At Norwich they will board a train and will join the rest of the regiment along the route.

Lieut. Gordon J. Gale, at present commanding officer of the company, since the resignations of Captain Armington and Lieutenant Bitzood were tendered, will leave for camp on Saturday, but will not join his command until he reaches Tobyhanna.

James Nolan of Norwich, who has been at his home in that city for several weeks, recovering from illness, has returned to Danielson. Mr. Nolan has regained his health and has resumed work in a local drug store, where he was employed before taken sick.

State Trooper Donald E. Geddes, stationed at the state police barracks here, is to leave this week for Canada, where he will spend part of his annual vacation.

Franklin Jones, 10, son of Rev. and Mrs. J. Rees Jones, is recovering from a broken arm sustained while playing on the lawn of the rectory at St. Albans church.

Chief A. P. Woodward of the fire department was in Norwich today, attending the funeral services of William E. Young, former head of the Lee & Osgood Co.

The state firemen's convention to be held in Greenwich, Conn., this month, will be attended by delegates from the local fire companies. Representing the "Captain Put" engine company is Walter Purvais. The other companies have not as yet delegated a representative to the gathering of the Connecticut fire fighters.

Today it was noted, the remarkable progress being made by builders on the Brooklyn Savings bank building now being erected on the corner of Main and Academy streets. In the past few days the brick terra cotta walls have begun to move skywards and one may obtain a mind view of what the beautiful piece of architecture will be when completed. Wagoners were engaged this morning in hauling from freight cars the large marble tiles that will add a mark of beauty to the building's exterior portions.

The attention of scores in the business section, was attracted to the passing of a large motor car, this morning, loaded with five Chevrolet cars. The truck was similar to the vehicle that met with mishap this spring when it capsized on Hampton hill, with its quota of passenger vehicles. This method of transportation is something entirely new, supplanting the freight car manner of hauling the merchandise to various points.

CHAPLIN

Rev. Florence Jones of Mansfield Center supplied the pulpit Sunday and gave the congregation an inspiring sermon. A pleasing feature of the service was a solo, a fine arrangement of Jesus, Lover of My Soul, impressively sung by Mrs. Robert S. Purvis of Westfield, N. J., a summer visitor. Mrs. Purvis was accompanied on the piano by Miss Flora Purvis. Mrs. Purvis has kindly consented to sing again at the morning service next Sunday.

Mr. and Mrs. Arthur Williams and three children of Englewood, N. J., are at Mrs. J. Wilbur Lanphear's.

Mr. and Mrs. Robert Purvis and two children, Mrs. Thomas Purvis and Miss Flora Purvis are spending some time at their summer home on Bear Hill.

The Ladies' Aid society meet Wednesday with Flora Stevens.

Rev. Florence Jones is expected to supply the pulpit again next Sunday.

The boating and bathing in the Natchaug river by the Goodell bridge are enjoyed these hot days by many, some coming from out of town.

Charles Perry took down his barn and erected it again east of the new concrete road in time to store his crop of hay. He harvested in good shape.

Robert Chapman and sister, Betty Chapman, visited the past week in Middletown.

The Christian Endeavor society has accepted an invitation to attend the meeting at the chapel at South Chaplin Sunday evening, Aug. 19th.

PLAINFIELD

The many friends of Mrs. Albert Rundell were shocked to hear of her death on Friday morning, Aug. 3rd at the home of her daughter, Mrs. Charles H. Barber at Plainfield, after an illness of two days.

Lucy Freelove Davis was born in Plainfield, April 18, 1865 the daughter of Allen E. and Sarah Ripley Davis. She received her education in Plainfield where she spent most of her life. She attended Packer Baptist church and Sunday school, taking an active part in all the social life of the church. On July 6th, 1887 she was united in marriage with Albert L. Rundell of Packer in Providence, R. I., and lived there a few years. Her husband and four children survive her, Allen E., Charles D., Marion E., (Mrs. Charles H. Barber), Ralph J., and there are two grand children, Doris Mildred and Raymond Charles, children of Charles L. and Mildred Davis Rundell.

Mrs. Rundell was a woman of many fine qualities, a loving mother with great love for native town and her old home which was burned a few months ago. Her devotion to her church was unusual and she was active in all things connected with the Congregational church of which she was a member at the time of her death. Her children have the sympathy of the community.

The funeral was held at Packer, Sunday, with a large attendance. The services were conducted by Rev. Mr. Higgins who is an old friend of the family. The many beautiful flowers were silent tribute from many friends. Mrs. John Brailford and Sydney Mathewson sang Beautiful Isle of Somewhere and Nearer My God to Thee. She was buried in the church yard at Packer.

GALES FERRY

ANNOUNCE RETURNS FROM ANNUAL COMMUNITY PICNIC

(Special to The Bulletin)

GALES FERRY, Aug. 6—The returns from annual Community picnic of July 31 are announced by Chairman C. E. Colver: Receipts to date, $222.60; expenditures, $89.18; balance for church budget, $133.42; Ladies' Aid and Long Cove branch, $76.35; Noyes B. Allyn permanent fund $2.30; flower fund, including gift of $2 from George T. Meech, $12.15; total, $224.22.

The thanks of the picnic committee are extended to all who contributed in any way in making the day a success.

"The Ever-Present Saviour," St. Matthew 28:21 verse—Lo, I am with you always, even unto the end of the world—was the theme of the Rev. Jerome Greer at Sunday morning service in the M. E. church. Rejoice in the Lord (J. B. Calkin) was the offertory selection sung by the quartet, Miss Grace A. Chapman, soprano; Mrs. Amos Main, alto; J. R. Povey, tenor; C. E. Colver, baritone; Mrs. Eugene LaFontaine, organist.

A meeting of the official board of the church preceded the church school at noon.

O, Jesus, I Have Promised was the old familiar hymn which, following the new order, opened the church school at noon, played by Mrs. Jerome Greer. Assistant Supt. D. C. Perkins extended the contest which he is promoting in the school to the last Sunday in August.

"Pioneers in Christian Adventure— Frances E. Willard," was the subject of the Sunday evening service with Mrs. E. E. Tubbs leader and the service concluded by the Rev. Mr. Greer on the subject.

The Sunday evening services will be discontinued the next two Sundays in August in the M. E. church, during camp meeting week at Willimantic.

Mr. and Mrs. E. B. Lewis, Jr., of New York city, with Miss Van Duser of Warwick, N. Y., and A. C. Risdon, with son, Charles S. Risdon, also of New York, are at the summer residence of Mr. and Mrs. Risdon in the village for a visit of some days.

The attendants for the month of July at the Gales Ferry public library, were Miss Laura A. Perkins, Mrs. Fanny A. Molthron, Miss Caroline B. Freeman, Miss Adelina S. Povey.

Dr. Edgar Ross and Mrs. Ross and young child, of Brooklyn, N. Y., were overnight guests at the M. E. parsonage Wednesday of the Rev. and Mrs. Jerome Greer.

Miss Elizabeth Smith of Norwich was the recent overnight guest of Miss Em Beth Bennett, at her home here.

Mr. and Mrs. George Ballon of Norwich had as their party to motor to motor to Gorton Long Point, Mr. and Mrs. J. Otis Winchester and Mrs. Charles H. Manchester of Perkins place Sunday morning.

Miss Natalie K. Gibbs returned Friday, after spending a month at Onset, Mass.

Mrs. T. C. Denman and Mr. and Mrs. Walter Malo, of South Willington, the latter a daughter of Rev. and Mrs. Denman, the former a pastor of the local M. E. church some years ago, motored here Sunday to attend the morning service at this church.

Mr. and Mrs. Wilmot Benn of Hartford were guests last week of their aunt, Mrs. Joab B. Rogers here and she enjoyed a boat trip and motored with them over Long Island to New York. They returned here with her, motoring back to Hartford.

Mr. and Mrs. R. Irving Hurlbutt, Mrs. Charles F. Bartlett and Harold, Ruth and Jean Hurlbutt, attended the recent farm bureau picnic at Waterford. Mrs. Hurlbutt is the leader of the local 4-H club of girls.

The New Haven Railroad Co. has caused notices to be placed at either approach to the overhead railroad bridge in the main street of the village, limiting the capacity of weight in crossing the bridge to 12 tons.

Those who are to attend school in Norwich or New London are requested to notify Mr. Walter M. Buckingham, a member of the school board of the town of Ledyard, who will arrange for transportation.

A naturalist found 500 different species of insects in his back yard, near New York city.

PUTNAM

GOBEILLE REPORTED TO HAVE BEEN SEEN IN QUEBEC

(Special to The Bulletin)

PUTNAM, August 7—Positive information received here today states that Eugene Gobeille, missing contractor, who abandoned road construction work in Danielson and Clinton, Ct., several weeks ago, passed several days in St. John's, Quebec and left there for some other point on July 27, according to the information received from Worcester authorities.

The report received by the Worcester police was from Chief of Police Turgeon of St. John's, who was not aware of Gobeille's actions when he was in St. John's.

Suspicion first began to brew when Gobeille cashed a check for $11,000 in a Hartford bank and later disappeared from his work on the highways.

When the discovery of the new clue authorities endeavoring to locate the missing man have disposed of the theory first advanced, relative to Gobeille meeting foul play, supplanting that of his voluntary disappearance.

Gobeille, according to the report received here was staying at a house on Notre Dame street in St. John's, directly opposite the St John's jail and it was also said that his large automobile was with him at the time he was seen.

Gobeille left the house on July 27, leaving word that he would return but did not state any specific time, and accordingly has not returned yet.

He said, according to the information, he was to visit relatives on an Oklahoma ranch, which police believe is of little value to determine his present location, as he was not heading to his stated destination with any speed.

A few men are about the road daily keeping vigil over the abandoned machinery and tools that were being used on the job. At present it is not known just what action towards completion of the road, will be taken.

A petition, containing the signatures of over 250 Putnam ladies, relative to abandoning Putnam's compulsory vaccination rule, before a child will be allowed to enter school, was presented at the regular meeting of the town school committee held Monday evening in the law offices of Torrey and Geissler. The petition read as follows: "We the undersigned, do hereby respectfully request that the members of the Putnam school board, do show their earnest desire to co-operate with the parents, guardians, and friends of the school pupils in matters pertaining to the welfare of those pupils and do change the wording and meaning of the compulsory vaccination rule, to optional, in order that the parents and guardians may use their own judgment in regards to the practice of vaccination and inoculation for immunization."

Recently, a leading member of the signers of the paper informed Mrs. W. R. Barber, secretary of the town school committee, that in the event the petition was denied, the signers would send their children to school in September unvaccinated, boycotting the rule of the school board. Many other threats similar to this, have been directed to the board. After a careful consideration of the subject, the members of the board voted to grant the request as asked for in the petition, and an act was passed where the compulsory vaccination rule would be rewritten, so as to be in harmony with the petition.

The committee at this meeting, also elected two new members to the high school faculty to succeed two, who resigned at the close of the spring term in June. Miss Belinda Snow of Reynam Center, Mass., was elected to succeed Miss Nancy Judkins, resigned as head of the Latin department at the high school. Miss Snow is a graduate of Brown university. She received her Phi Beta Kappa degree during her junior year of study. For the past two years she has been a paid assistant Latin instructor, working for A. M. degree, which she recently received.

The board also approved of the application of Miss Jeanette Jacques of Worcester, Mass., to succeed Mrs. O. J. White, resigned, as head of the French department of Putnam high school. Miss Jacques is a graduate of Worcester Normal school, Worcester, Mass., and while in college majored in the study of Parisian French. Since her graduation she has had a few years experience in the art of her chosen profession and comes to Putnam with a number of recommendations. She speaks French fluently and is well qualified to assume the position at Putnam high school.

Both new teachers will commence their new duties at the opening of the fall term in September. Ernest M. Farrin, newly elected superintendent of schools, was present at the meeting of the board last evening. Mr. Farrin stated that he had not obtained a suitable residence in Putnam yet, and would remain at his present location until he secured the desired place. He informed the board, he would be in Putnam a few days a week, and hoped to move his family to Putnam before the opening of school in September.

The Fresh Air Fund committee is most happily encouraged by the generous responses received during the past few days from residents of northern Windham county. So far the appeal has been answered by several gifts of money and more are expected before the children from New York arrive in Putnam. An initial list was mailed to New York on Monday, inviting 59 children to this city for a two weeks vacation.

With additional funds subscribed this week about 15 more children can be cared for. Statistics indicate that ninety children were entertained in Putnam last year, and the committee feels that this record will be broken by an additional response from the public.

Many of these children will be boarded in outlaying towns. Mrs. Harry E. Torrey, chairman of the welfare workers, directing the movement, will be glad to have volunteer drivers with automobiles for this work when the New York youngsters arrive. Members of the Catholic council, Cosmos club and Red Cross chapter have arranged for a luncheon to be served the kiddies, at the Israel Putnam school.

So far the committee has received the following amounts from various towns and orders sponsoring the movement: Abington $115, solicited by by Mrs. Adrianna Hutchins. Of this amount Mrs. T. Morris Murray donated a sum of $100. From Pomfret came a check amounting to $100. The town of Thompson subscribed a total of $128, and from Woodstock came a total of $51.

Individual donations in Putnam came from St. Mary's church. The Putnam lodge of Elks and the Quinebaug lodge of Masons and the Anselm Mavotte post of American Legion, making the total funds received to date $756.93.

Mrs. Harry E. Torrey, said this afternoon that the subscribed amount to date will provide for 81 children, nine less than the previous year. Those desiring to entertain any of the Fresh Airs, should communicate with Mrs. Torrey at an early date, so all children will arrive in Putnam on August 16.

A small sedan driven by Armand Bellerose, a driver in the service of the Pepin taxi company of this city figured in an accident with a Chrysler coupe, owned and operated by Leonard H. Mellor, superintendent of the National Rhea company, Monday evening. The accident happened at the northern junction of South Meadow street. Neither Mr. Bellrose or Mr. Mellor were injured as the result of the collision. The crash of the cars was investigated by Sergt. George Liard of the Putnam police, but no arrests were made.

Road construction of the state highway at Attawaugan was considerably furthered today, as one half of the highway is nearly completed. The concrete now extends over the mile and a quarter stretch, and traffic is allowed to move over the new portion of the road. M. A. Gammino, contractor of the work, stated today that the other half of the work will be completed this week. In North Grosvenordale the state highway there is nearly reaching a point of completion and soon will be opened to the public giving traffic nearly two miles more of concrete highway.

The first series of new cars of the Ford type have been received at the local telephone plant has arrived in Putnam. It is a roadster model and is being used by Charles T. Thayer, superintendent of the tree trimming division of the company.

Miss Anna Murphy and Miss Grace Bulger of Farrows street, left Monday for a two weeks visit with relatives in Northampton, Mass.

Mr. and Mrs. Frank Whitman, Miss Hazel Winterburn, George Whitman, Philip and Robert Wheaton of Mechanics street, left Saturday by automobile for an extended trip to York Beach, Maine and other points in the Pine tree state.

Patrolman and Mrs. Benoi Durand and family spent Sunday at Ocean Beach in East Greenwich, R. I. Patrolman Durand returned to duty this morning.

Howard Tourtellotte of Farrows street, returned Sunday from a three weeks' visit to New York city, where he visited with friends.

SOUTH KILLINGLY

William Potter of Auburn, R. I., has been spending a week with Mr. and Mrs. Byron Place.

William Barlow has an infected toe, caused by an injury to the nail.

Beatrice Coffey was one of a party to enjoy bathing in Killingly pond Thursday afternoon.

Mr. and Mrs. Charles Spaulding of Auburn spent the week end at the Spaulding cottage.

Harvey Fortune spent the week end with friends at Oakland Beach.

Stanley, Marjorie and Mildred Place, Ernest Barlow, Virginia and Denton Gates and Betty Slater were among the little people who enjoyed Junior Chautauqua in Danielson Friday afternoon.

Albert Phillips and family spent Sunday at Rocky Point and Oakland Beach.

S. A. Douglas entertained Edward Lyman of Danielson Sunday.

Marjorie and Mildred Place are spending this week with relatives in Providence.

Among those attending the Danielson Chautauqua last week were: Mrs. Edwin Kelley and daughter Mildred, Mrs. A. E. Phillips and son Earl, Mrs. Herman Barlow, Mrs. William Barlow, Mrs. Byron Place, Mr. and Mrs. A. A. Tillinghast, Mr. and Mrs. A. E. Hall, Luther Cole and family, Mrs. P. H. Coffey and children. The program was fine and much enjoyed by all.

Beatrice Coffey was the guest of Alice Young of Danielson two days last week.

Mrs. Willis Hill and daughters, Athalie and Audrey, of Central Village spent Sunday with Mr. and Mrs. George Slater.

James Salisbury, Francis Coffey and Albert Whitaker were in Moosup Sunday.

HANOVER

Mrs. Tuttle of New York has returned to her home after making an extended visit at the home of her brother, Mr. Merton Brownell.

Mr. and Mrs. Angus Park are sojourning at Bethlehem, N. H., stopping at the Highland house.

Arthur Lucy in company with Zack Babbitt and family has been spending his vacation at Old Orchard, Me., and Edward and Mrs. Tucker have been taking theirs in touring through New Hampshire and Maine.

J. P. Cavanaugh of New York has been a recent visitor at the Alexander home in Fullertown.

Fred Eadie spent the week end with Frederick and Mrs. Eadie at St. Johnsbury, Vt.

Deacon Henry B. Hazen spent the week-end at White River Junction and Hartford, Vt.

Mr. and Mrs. Frederick Lebourveau with Eunice and Allen Lebourveau made a trip across the Connecticut river Saturday last, calling on local boys at Camp Hazen.

Mrs. Dwight C. Stone has left the Backus hospital, and is now being cared for by her sister, Mrs. Dwight W. Avery at Norwich Town. She hopes to be able to return to her home in Hanover soon.

Ten Hanover young ladies were among the passengers aboard the motorship Nelseco II in its excursion to Block Island Sunday last.

Rev. Dwight C. Stone was called to Chester last Saturday to attend the funeral of a former parishioner, and to Mystic Wednesday of this week to officiate at the marriage of his former Stonington parishioners.

Reports from Miss Gertrude Ladd indicate that she is enjoying her work at the Columbia summer school notwithstanding the intensity with which it was carried on during the severe heat of last week.

Mr. and Mrs. William Campbell have been entertaining Mr. Campbell's nieces, the Misses Mary and Jane Waters of Norwich Town.

James Morrill is taking his vacation by driving through the north part of New England with his family.

THE RADIO ON PLANES

While there are as many aviators who set out on flights across the ocean without radios as there are who do, the frequent demonstrations of the value of such equipment carry conviction as to the need of such protection.

It may be said that certain of the fliers seem to be rescued quite as surely and quickly when they have no radio as do those who have such equipment. There are cases where that is the case, yet it is a matter of good fortune for the most part for it can be readily recalled that too many aviators have disappeared on attempts to cross the Atlantic when some knowledge of what happened to them might have been conveyed had they carried and used wireless.

Writing to the New York Herald-Tribune, Donald MacMillan, a master mariner, considers that even though he failed on his flight Captain Courtney proved "that if one chooses one's weather within the limits of modern forecasting, in a machine designed to float and possessing an efficiently manned radio set, and also plans to fly over shipping lanes, considerable confidence may be felt in a rescue even if the very worst happens."

He considers that Courtney and his companions owe their lives to the radio and the ability of his machine to float, but in connection with the lost plane that is calling for help by means of radio he makes the suggestion that those going to its assistance would be greatly aided if a kite could be sent up. That would increase the visibility and make it easier for the searchers. This is a point that is well taken for while the aviator might have difficulty in indicating his exact location, his continued calls would be reinforced by a flying signal which would be observed at a much greater distance than the eight miles at which a floating seaplane might be seen.

There are not many that would refuse to spend the necessary time in effecting a rescue at sea whether from a sinking ship or a disabled plane, but whatever can be done to reduce the time involved in the search and in eliminating uncertainties as to locality is no more than the situation requires.

SEEKING BLACKMER

All possible obstacles were placed in the way of the government when it undertook to prosecute those who were involved in the oil cases. For the most part the government was able to overcome them. It succeeded in bringing about the appearance of principals and witnesses before federal courts and convicting the accused, but there was a defiance on the part of Henry M. Blackmer which appeared insurmountable. He took himself out of the jurisdiction of this government and remained there. He was not the only one that packed up and went to Europe when it looked as if there was going to be trouble. Along with him went James E. O'Neil, also involved in the famous trading company. O'Neil relented however and made restitution but Blackmer never has and never intends to if he can prevent it. His refusal to respect subpoenas has resulted in $200,000 worth of his securities being seized as penalty, but he stays in Europe.

Under the ordinary processes it has been impossible to dislodge Blackmer. By a different method there are now hopes of bringing about his extradition. He is required to file federal income tax returns and through his failure to do so and the filing of federal tax liens covering taxes, interest and penalties in New York city and Denver a presidential warrant has been issued for his arrest and return to this country to face an indictment of perjury in connection with a charge of defrauding the government. Blackmer is in France. There hasn't been any question as to that but hitherto it was impossible to force him to return. Perjury is an extraditable offense and it is hoped that through the warrant he can be brought back. There remains to be seen what view France is going to take, for Blackmer will put up the hardest kind of a fight, but it is the purpose of this government to make Blackmer face the music for his part in the oil scandal if such a thing is possible. His success in keeping away hasn't made the government inclined toward leniency.

WHERE PAROLE FAILS

While a parole system cannot be judged entirely by its failures it is inevitable that they have their detrimental effects. When those who are extended its benefits fail to show an appreciation of the chance that is being given them their cases are bound to be pointed out as showing the weakness of such a system and thus making it harder for those who would really appreciate parole and are trying to get a chance to prove it.

Back in 1917 Leslie Homer was convicted of burglary and sentenced to 10 to 20 years in the reformatory at Indianapolis. He received two temporary paroles and a transfer within three years. It was in 1927 that he was finally paroled after having served his minimum sentence. From all indications that appeared to be a sufficient signal to him that he was at liberty to return to his old practice. He went right back to his old haunts, began stealing automobiles and holding up stores about as fast as he could operate and all within the year during which he was expected to make regular reports as to his conduct while on parole. It was possible because of the system for him to either make these reports and have them tell nothing or else he neglected it altogether. Those connected with the parole system had no idea but what he was a model citizen.

But Homer had no idea of reforming. He had not profited by the years he spent in the reformatory. He had not become convinced that it was a mistake to try to make a living through crime. He was ready to accept parole, but only for the purpose of going back to his old business. He demonstrated that he was thoroughly saturated with the criminal instinct and to give him his liberty was to set him loose to prey upon the public. He was operating in a state, however, where it appears that about one quarter of the paroled prisoners do about as he has done. This creates the impression that there is a weakness in the parole system of that state and that public interest requires better protection for the people rather than continued leniency for the many prisoners who are still criminally inclined.

FINE INSPECTION WORK

What must be looked upon as timely action in behalf of prevention and protection is that which has been taken in the state of Rhode Island by the state police. Investigation of several summer hotels resulted in finding that they had faulty fire prevention equipment. There was a lack of fire escapes, fire alarm systems, exit signs and lights and in some instances the fire escapes that did exist ended on high piazzas instead of on the ground.

When hotel keepers had their attention called to the conditions and were told that they were violating the law they expressed a willingness to see that the situation was immediately changed. Such an attitude is only what should be expected. It is conceivable that there are many times when attention is not given to such matters because of a lack of knowledge concerning requirements. Yet that doesn't offer a proper excuse in case an emergency condition develops.

One of the greatest causes for satisfaction is to be found in the fact that these conditions in Rhode Island have been disclosed and remedies will probably be applied without being forced through an appalling sacrifice of life. Too frequently is it the case that conditions of this character are revealed after a building has been burned and an injury has been gotten under way.

The Rhode Island state police prove that they are on their job and doing valuable inspection work. It means much to the hotel proprietors as well as to their patrons. The summer hotel calls for adequate provisions for fire prevention and for every facility to escape that is possible in case of fire. An ounce of prevention is still worth a pound of cure.

LOWDEN'S SILENCE

Not a little interest is being displayed in the course that Frank O. Lowden is going to pursue in the present campaign. Mr. Lowden was a candidate for the presidential nomination at Kansas City under the ground of agricultural relief. That was he was concerned in and it was made clear that he stood unflinchingly back of the McNary-Haugen legislation.

Mr. Lowden failed to make a very big showing but nothing has since been heard from him. He is disappointed, has gone back home and is said to be tending strictly to business. Some might say that he is sulking, for while those who backed him and those who have been fighting for farm relief have declared their intentions one way or the other, he has said nothing. That may express his attitude henceforth as far as giving help to one side or the other.

There have been inferences that Mr. Lowden was going to talk it over with the democratic nominee and come out in his support. That isn't generally believed. Whatever chance there was for that seems to have been eliminated by the statement of the democratic candidate for the presidency who has declared with all proper emphasis that he is not for the equalization fee which provision was the one thing upon which Mr. Lowden made his fight. Thus there is no comfort to be obtained by turning to the democratic standard. He must know that there is more to expect from republican policies and he knows that much which the farmers seek would now be in operation had a different attitude been taken by them during the last session of congress. What Mr. Lowden is going to do, if anything, will continue to interest until he does or says something. Possibly he is waiting to hear the acceptance speeches.

THE MORNING SONG

"Sweet Adeline"—scrape, scrape—"For you"—scrape—"I pine."

Certain sounds issuing from the tiny bathroom of her apartment told Mollie Parthmore that Ted's shaving was proceeding well and that he had not yet nicked his chin. When he did "Sweet Adeline" would be rent by a thunderous "Damn!" and there would then be complete silence save for the splash of water.

Mollie hacked viciously at the core of the grapefruit and waited, longingly although half ashamed, for the nick that would stop Ted's singing. It seemed a shame that nothing but bloodshed could put an end to that ghastly racket, but if that were the price she hoped it would be paid soon.

How she hated it! Of course, Ted didn't have a voice, but that wasn't the chief trouble. For some reason singing in the early morning got on her nerves. And Ted always did it. Every morning, as soon as he had rinsed the soap from his eyes and lathered his chin, some song came drifting out of the bathroom. Somehow she had got through previous ordeals without committing murder. But today she felt herself near the breaking point.

Singing seemed a little thing to be making a bride of only three months unhappy, and Mollie, as she dried the breakfast dishes after Ted had hurried to make the 7.54, wondered what was the matter with her. A month or so ago the thing had started bothering her. For a while she rather smiled, but as the winter wore on and she arose in the cold half light to hear that same noise from the bathroom she could no longer smile. She resolved to speak to Ted tonight and tell him he must stop it. If it went on any longer she believed it would make her stop loving him. Ridiculous? She knew it was. But she couldn't help it.

She set about the morning's tasks with a heavy heart. There was the ironing to be done, but she didn't mind ironing and she was half finished with her task when the telephone bell rang. She picked up the receiver and uttered a half-hearted "Hello!"

"Mollie?" It was Ted's voice, sounding rather excited. "Say, dear, I've got bad news. I must go up to Milwaukee right away, and won't be back until late tomorrow. I won't even have time to come home and pack anything. It's urgent business for the company."

"That's too bad." Mollie tried to make her voice sincere, but a little thrill of relief was running through her. Tomorrow morning there would be no singing!

"Do you realize, Mollie," Ted's voice was pitched low, "this will be our first night apart since we were married?" She said that she did realize it, and that she was sorry. A minute later Ted hung up and Mollie went back to her ironing. Oddly enough she was humming "Sweet Adeline" as she finished the last of his white shirts.

She had dinner alone that evening, and she had liver. Ted didn't like liver, but she had been hungering for it for weeks. After the dishes were done she walked three blocks to a motion-picture show, but for some reason the picture didn't interest her. It was early when she returned home, but she was almost afraid to enter her small apartment alone in the dark. She tried to read, but her magazine seemed dull and stupid. Her one consolation was the thought that there would be no alarm clock to wake her and that there would be no singing to listen to while she was getting breakfast.

She slept until almost 9 and got up with a light heart. She set the table for one, put the coffee on and started to cut the grapefruit. And then, strangely enough, as she cut around the core she found herself tense—listening. Suddenly she remembered. No singing today! She laughed gayly to herself. Yet somehow something was missing from that greatly anticipated breakfast.

Ted came home that night, tired out and in no mood for talk. The next morning he was up early and as Mollie put the coffee on she waited for the usual notes from the bathroom. They did not come. She heard him splashing, heard the running of the water that told her the was shaving. Still no song. She stood it for several minutes, then impulsively walked into the bathroom.

"What's wrong, Ted?" she asked. "Why aren't you singing?" Her young husband smiled crookedly through the lather.

"Aw, heck," he said. "I cut myself on the first stroke."

"Oh, I'm sorry," said Mollie in a choked little voice, "but please sing anyway. I like to hear it."—Chicago News.

Little Talks on Thrift

SENSIBLE VACATION A GOOD FORM OF THRIFT

There is a great difference between leisure and idleness.

We are now in the midst of the vacation period, when millions of our people who ordinarily are very industrious and busy are giving themselves over to various forms of diversion.

It is just as thrifty to spend a reasonable amount of time in recreation as it is to work hard during the rest of the year. Days or weeks given over to recreation when we are in good health may save us the loss of a far greater amount of time in the future. It is not an unwise plan to utilize time in conserving one's health and energies and preventing the inroads of disease.

Nevertheless, it is to be borne in mind that one of the worst forms of thriftlessness is to be idle. If it were possible to secure data on the subject, it probably would be found that there is no form of waste which runs into bigger figures and creates more havoc in the world than waste of time.

An important educational and social welfare organization has undertaken a survey of how people spend their idle time. The object is to make recommendations which, it is hoped, will lead to the advantageous employment of leisure hours.

It was through the rightful employment of spare time that Lincoln acquired an education, and men like Carnegie, Hill and Edison worked themselves up from positions of minor importance. Lindbergh, too, has shown the value of thrift of time, for it has been his custom to spend his spare hours in study and research instead of wasting them in the pursuit of idle pleasure as so often is the case with young men of his years.

Thomas Jefferson made it a rule always to keep a good book within reach and whenever he had even a few moments of spare time he utilized them in helpful reading.

There is good thrift in diversion from work at times, but sheer idleness is entirely inexcusable.—By S. W. Straus, President American Society for Thrift.

YOUR HEALTH

HEAT STROKE OR SUN STROKE

(By Carroll Eugene Cook, M. D., Chicago)

Heat stroke and sun stroke, although commonly regarded as separate ailments, are identical. They differ only in that sun stroke occurs in the open air under the sun, while heat stroke takes place usually in hot confined rooms.

One would expect this sickness to be more common in the south, but the converse is true, as the Southerner has become acclimated, whereas the Northerner during the hot months falls a ready victim. Men, by reason of occupation, furnish most of the cases.

The consideration of this illness brings up the discussion of the heat balance of the body. Heat is generated in the body by the chemical use of food. The heat produced is dissipated by radiation and during hot weather particularly by sweating. Certain foods such as meats, fats, and alcohol increase heat production tremendously. Likewise heavy muscular work, such as plowing, planting, hoeing, harvesting, stoking, and digging, produce a rise in the body temperature. If the atmosphere is cool, dry, and circulating, this extra heat is carried away. If the outside temperature is high, the body cannot lose heat by radiation. Likewise, if the humidity is high, loss of heat by evaporation does not occur and the body temperature rises. If in addition no breeze is blowing or if the individual wears heavy non-porous clothing or many articles of clothing a layer of highly humid hot air collects around the person and no loss of body heat can take place. The aggregation of the above points leads to heat stroke or sun stroke.

The attack is usually ushered in by the falling of the individual to the ground in total unconsciousness. Occasionally it may be a slow stupor accompanied by nosebleed. However, following the onset, heat stroke takes two forms, one with a high fever, and one with a temperature below normal. In the type with high temperature, the patient is unconscious, hot and dry to the touch, the pulse 100 to 150, full and bounding. Occasionally convulsions occur and these may be followed by a period of deep unconsciousness.

In the other type, the patient is cold, blue, and exhausted, the fingers and toes are cold. The temperature ranges from 95 to 96 F. The pulse is weak thready, and around 100. No convulsions are found, but instead total collapse.

Prevention is the best treatment. During the hot weather, meats, fats, and alcoholic beverages should be taken in minimum amounts. Food should consist chiefly of vegetables, bread, potatoes, fruits, and small amounts of meat. Large amounts of water or cool liquids are beneficial to promote perspiration. Light porous clothing is advantageous and few pieces should be worn. Natural or artificial breezes aid in circulating the air. The humidity should be kept low and, if this is impossible, work should be stopped temporarily.

The Fright the Twins Got

Fear you'll very often find
Is nothing but a state of mind.
—Mrs. Lightfoot.

The pond of Paddy the Beaver lies deep in the Green Forest. It is Paddy's very own pond, for he made it. Before Paddy visited that part of the Green Forest for the first time there was no pond there. The Laughing Brook passed through there, but that was all. It was from the Laughing Brook that Paddy made his pond. He did it by building a dam across the Laughing Brook, so that the water was stopped from running and gradually set back, making first a big puddle and then a teeny, weeny pond, and then a little bigger pond, until finally it was big enough to suit Paddy.

Buster Bear often visited it

But that was long ago. Many of the little people of the Green Forest have forgotten that there was ever a time when there was no pond there. They liked that pond, did the people who lived in the Green Forest. They would have missed it sadly had it disappeared. Buster Bear often visited it, Lightfoot the Deer and Mrs. Lightfoot drank there. Jumper the Hare came over there often. So did Peter Rabbit when he was in the Green Forest. Yowler the Bobcat and Puma the Panther went that way now and then to see what they might see. Honker the Goose, with his flock, stopped there twice a year on their journeys north and south. Mrs. Quack had nested there. So, you see, Paddy's Pond was a popular place.

When Mrs. Lightfoot led the twins out on to the shore of the pond they at first didn't know what to make of it. They stood motionless, staring with all their might. The pond was perfectly still, for there was no wind blowing. It was like a mirror. Standing on the very edge of the water, the twins discovered what they took to be two other little spotted fawns staring at them. Of course, it was their own reflection. Presently there was a sharp whistle on the other side of the little pond. The twins looked up and across. There stood Lightfoot the Deer. How handsome he was! To be sure, those antlers of his, those wonderful antlers, were but half-grown. But his coat was in the beautiful summer reddish color, and he was slim and trim and graceful.

"That's your father," whispered Mrs. Lightfoot to the twins, and waded a little out into the water, not once looking toward Lightfoot. She simply was pretending that she didn't see him.

Out farther and farther into the water waded Mrs. Lightfoot. She plunged her head wholly under water and brought up a lily-root and began to munch it. The twins stared in round-eyed wonder. Mrs. Lightfoot turned her head toward them and encouraged them to wade out. But they were timid. This water was a new thing to them. They ran back and forth along the shore. They went out a little way and then ran back. Little by little they were getting acquainted with it.

Presently one of them gave a startled little snort. His mother turned to see what had startled him. He was gazing intently out on the water. Mrs. Lightfoot looked.

"It's all right, my dear," said she. "That is only Paddy the Beaver. He will not hurt you. He is quite harmless. You haven't a thing in the world to fear from Paddy. No one fears him. In fact, we are all fond of Paddy the Beaver, for were it not for him we would not have this nice pond."

The twins were still suspicious, as babies are apt to be in the presence of strangers. But they knew that Mother knew, and so presently they stopped watching Paddy and began to gambol on the edge of the water. Then right into the midst of their play there came a sharp, loud crack—a most startling sound! It frightened the twins almost out of their wits. They bounded into the woods with little bleats of fright. Their mother bounded after them.

"It's nothing, my dears," said she. "There's nothing to be afraid of. Paddy the Beaver simply slapped the water with his big, broad tail. I suspect he did it to scare you. I'm glad you've heard it. Usually, Paddy sees or smells some danger when he uses that signal. Whenever you hear it, be ready to watch. Be suspicious. If, after he has slapped the water, Paddy disappears, you may be sure that there is danger of some sort near."

Disease Germs Carried by Flies

Flies Must Be Killed If Infection Is To Be Prevented.

Eminent health authorities say that the ordinary house-fly reeks with filth and germs of dread diseases. These flies' bodies are covered with fine hairs that are saturated with unspeakable matter. They drag their contaminated bodies over food intended for human consumption. Flies taint everything they touch.

Science has developed a pleasant way to banish this most dangerous insect. Send a cloud of FLY-TOX mist high into the air and envelope and stifle flies crawling on ceilings, resting on lighting fixtures or hiding behind hanging pictures.

Have the sprayer handy, filled with FLY-TOX; and when those winging insects such as flies, mosquitoes, moth-millers and other bugs invade your home; or spiders appear with an unsightly web, a few strokes of the sprayer ends the invasion with death.

FLY-TOX is a clean, pure, fragrant, liquid which is stainless and harmless to people. It was developed at Mellon Institute of Industrial Research by Rex Research Fellowship.

ARREST FOLLOWS CRASH ON WEST TOWN STREET

After an automobile collision early Tuesday evening on West Town street a short distance south of the schoolhouse, Cyril Ashworth, 22 of Pawcatuck, was arrested by State Policeman Busch on the charge of reckless driving and having improper markers on his machine.

At the point where the smashup occurred the highway is narrow alongside the trolley tracks and it is claimed that Ashworth, who was driving toward the city, turned out to pass a car ahead of him and ran into the Chandler sedan of Dr. J. J. Donohue which John R. Bowman, Jr., was driving with Dr. Donohue and Dr. Boris Sohn on the back seat. They were on their way to Colchester to see a woman who had been hurt in an automobile accident about ten days ago.

Dr. Donohue had a shoe torn off his foot, ankle sprained, wrenched knee and cut on head. Dr. Sohn had a tooth knocked out and a bruised hip, while Mr. Bowman's left elbow was injured.

Ashworth had his wife and child with him. The child was thrown out and both Mr. and Mrs. Ashworth were cut by broken glass. Both machines were considerably damaged.

NEW LONDON PASTOR'S RESIDENCE FIRE DAMAGED

(Special to The Bulletin).

NEW LONDON, Aug. 8—Fire of suspicious nature this morning damaged extensively the residence of Rev. Chester H. Howe, 11 West street, pastor of the First Baptist church. The fire was discovered at 12:10 o'clock in the rear of the building and had apparently originated from the outside. It had gained great headway when discovered and an alarm was sent in from Box 27, corner of Broad and Williams streets. When the firemen arrived, the flames had made their way to the interior of the building and it was with difficulty they were extinguished. The police are making an investigation with Deputy Chief Calvin Edmunds, in an effort to determine the origin of the fire.

Carl C. Johnson threw a sack of popcorn at Judge Francis Borrelli of the municipal court in Chicago. This incensed the judge to such a degree that he struck Mr. Johnson in the eye.

PROBATE COURTS MUST MAKE GENERAL INDEX

Through an act passed by the 1927 legislature all probate courts in the state are required to have a complete general index of their records made on or before July 1, 1929.

Compliance with this legislative order is to cost the Norwich district $7,100, according to an estimate secured by Judge Nelson J. Ayling, from a Boston firm which is to make a card index of the years from 1748 to 189; From the latter year on, while Judge Ayling has been presiding in the court, there is a satisfactory index but the records for the years preceding that are to be covered, and it will keep four girls from the Boston office about five or six months working in the office here to collect the material, which will then be taken to Boston where a big office force will finish the work.

The act passed by the legislature is as follows:

"The judge of each probate court in which there is no general index of the probate records shall appoint a competent person to make such an index under the supervision of the examiner of public records, and the expense thereof shall be paid upon the order of such judge by the town or towns composing such district in proportion to their several grand lists last perfected. Such general index shall be completed on or before July 1, 1929."

The Norwich probate district includes the towns of Norwich, Preston, Griswold, Voluntown, Lisbon, Franklin and Sprague.

It is understood that about 65 per cent of the expense will fall on the town of Norwich.

PROPOSE HALF DOLLAR ASSESSMENT ON POLICE

NEW BRITAIN, Aug. 7—(AP)—The annual convention of the Connecticut State Police association unofficially opened here this evening with a meeting of the executive committee at the Shuttle Meadow club. The convention will officially open tomorrow morning with the report of officers followed by elections.

At the meeting today an assessment of 50 cents was proposed on the 2,000 members of the association on the death of a member. Of this amount $500 would go to the now existing death benefit fund and the remainder towards a new fund which would establish a payment of $1,000 to the beneficiary. An increase of salary will be recommended at tomorrow's session for the secretary, president and treasurer.

Those who will seek the offices are: Garret J. Farell, chief of Hartford, president; Philip T. Smith, chief of New Haven, vice president; John B. Brennan, chief of Stamford, recommended as secretary declined and offered Charles Wheeler's name, chief of Bridgeport; William C. Hart, chief of New Britain, re-election for treasurer.

The acting executive committee chiefs likely will be: Joseph McLean, superintendent of Waterbury; William E. Nevin, Torrington; John H. Slocum, superintendent of Winsted; Ernest T. Belden, Bristol; George Linton, Norwich, and Charles Wheeler, Bridgeport.

At 2:30 o'clock Tuesday afternoon the funeral of William B. Young was held at his residence, No. 10 Huntington place, with many relatives and friends attending. The services were conducted by Rev. Alexander H. Abbott, pastor of the United Congregational church.

Burial was in Maplewood cemetery, where a committal service was conducted by Rev. Mr. Abbott. The honorary bearers were Calvin Frisbie, B. P. Bishop, Roy D. Judd, Nathan Gibbs, Frank L. Woodard and J. C. Henderson. The active bearers were James L. Case, Walter F. Lester, Dr. Hugh B. Campbell, Judge Nelson J. Ayling, Archibald Torrance and Harold A. Peckham. There were many beautiful floral remembrances.

Undertaker C. A. Gager was in charge of the funeral arrangements.

Brought Before Judge Williams

(Special to The Bulletin)

WESTERLY, Aug. 7 — Charles Serra, 49, of 19 Perkins avenue, was brought before Judge Oliver H. Williams tonight at 9 o'clock by Chief T. E. Brown, charged with an assault upon Serra's wife, Nunziata, on Monday afternoon.

The accused claimed that he seized his wife by the throat in self-defense, but later told the judge, "Guilty, do what you like to me."

His wife and daughter testified that when sober he was all right, but when intoxicated acted like a crazy man.

Judge Williams said he did not believe fine or imprisonment would do much good in this particular case and allowed the man to go.

Elected President

According to an announcement issued from the Hartford Electric Light Company, Charles G. Bill has been elected to the presidency of the Union Electric Light and Power company of Unionville to fill the vacancy caused by the death of the late Judge Edward H. Deming of Farmington. The Unionville company was recently merged by an exchange of stock with the Connecticut Power company.

Mr. Bill has been in full control of the Union Electric Light and Power operations for many years and will continue to conduct the affairs of the company in his new office of president.

CONFERENCE OVER SIGNS FOR NORWICH STREETS HELD WITH MAYOR ROBBINS

The publicity committee of the Norwich chamber of commerce was in conference Tuesday afternoon with Mayor Lee Roy Robbins in the mayor's office at the court house when the subject of directional road signs for the benefit of motorists was a special subject for discussion. The committee informed the mayor that it had a sum of money available which it was willing to use to pay for the signs if the city will put them up and keep them up. What part the state highway department would take towards supplying the signs was also discussed and there were favorable reports made of the prospects of progress. Mayor Robbins has already indicated at one of the council meetings that he felt there ought to be more and better directional signs in the city.

On the publicity committee are Max Hanover, H. H. Vignot, A. L. Peale, H. F. Hanigan, Harold Foote, and Rudolph Henschel, who attended the conference, accompanied by Secretary Walter H. Pilcher.

Considering Babson Recommendations

Consideration of recommendations made in the Babson report on Norwich is to be taken up at a meeting this (Wednesday) morning at 10 o'clock by a consolidated committee of the chamber of commerce consisting of the members of the original industrial survey committee and the executive committee of the merchants bureau. Charles W. Taggart, chairman of the industrial survey committee, will preside, and a group of citizens has been invited to meet with the committee. Those invited are the following:

Harvey M. Briggs, William G. Park, Arthur M. Brown, James L. Case, Shenard B. Palmer, Adelard Morin, F. Russell Smith, Joseph C. Worth, Nelson J. Ayling, Charles J. Twist, John J. O'Rourke, Abner Schwartz, John B. Caron, J. Fred Fleming, John P. Lyston, Glen R. Marvithew, Clyde E. Fitch, Walter E. Gilbert, Burton Young, Frank J. Aubrey, C. Edward Smith, L. M. Carpenter.

Round Table Conference

A round table conference on various phases of the industrial development situation in Norwich and vicinity is to be held Thursday morning at 9:30 between the industrial survey committee, the executive committee of the Merchants bureau and the group of citizens already mentioned.

Successful methods and practices making for constant industrial expansion from within and from without will form the two major considerations of the conference.

PUTNAM WATER BOARD RESIGNS IN A BODY

(Special to The Bulletin.)

PUTNAM, Aug. 7—The resignations of Water Commissioners Alexander Gilman, Herbert J. Smith and Chester E. Elliott were received by the common council and were unanimously accepted at the monthly meeting held here tonight.

As the board of water commissioners resigned in a body the following statement received from them was read in open council:

Aug. 7, 1928

To Honorable Charles A. Richards, Mayor of the City of Putnam and Members of the Common Council:

We herewith submit our resignations as water commissioners of the city of Putnam and wish immediate acceptance.

We cannot force ourselves to become part of carrying out such a project as prepared by you towards improvement needed in our water system. We believe that to take from the water department every dollar it has in reserve is a menace to the city and without justification in sound business principles. We do not wish to be forced to be a part in doing anything that is entirely against the wishes of the large majority of our citizens.

To ignore the wishes of the people is violation of the basic principles of our government whether applied to a municipality or to the nation.

Signed,
ALEXANDER GILMAN,
HERBERT J. SMITH,
CHESTER M. ELLIOTT.

The firm manner in which the members of the board of water commissioners expressed themselves in their letter informing the city council that they are no longer in the service of the water department brought forth little comment from Mayor Richards or from any member of the council. Since the water controversy originated the commissioners have always been steadfast against the plans of the common council and their statements rendered tonight indicated they fought until the end.

The water question and the task of appointing a new board of commissioners was not discussed at this meeting but it is thought a new board will be appointed by Mayor Richards at an adjourned meeting to be held on August 21.

A number of petitions were read from property owners asking for permits to erect a number of buildings in the city limits. These were all granted including an oral petition from Supt. Ralph E. Thurston of the Eastern Connecticut Power Co. who wished a permit for the erection of a 15,000 gallon storage oil tank on the company's premises on Arch street. As chief of the fire department Mr. Thurston favored the action and the permit was granted.

The report of the captain of police showed a total of 17 arrests for the month of July and were for the following offenses: Intoxication, 3; assault, 1; breach of peace, 2; motor law violation, 6; larceny, 2; liquor violation, 2; trespassing, 1. The cases were disposed of as follows: Committed to jail, 2; released by captain, 1; case continued, 2; paid fines and costs, 8; placed on file, 2; judgment suspended, 1; discharged, 1. The fines and costs for the month amounted to a total of $492.64.

With the reading of the municipal bills for the coming month a motion was passed to adjourn the session until Tuesday evening, Aug. 21.

NEW JOBS ARE ADDED TO HIGHWAY PROGRAM

Contracts for three more pieces of highway work to supplement the already very large program of construction and reconstruction now under way throughout the entire state will be received at the office of the Connecticut highway department in Hartford on Aug. 13, according to an announcement made by Highway Commissioner John A. Macdonald. These contracts include the reconstruction of one 12-foot concrete bridge in the town of Canaan on the Canaan-South Canaan road; the completion of about 12,886 feet of water-bound macadam on the Clinton-Deep River road in the towns of Clinton and Westbrook; and the completion of about 7,051 feet of bituminous macadam on the Danielson-South Killingly road in the town of Killingly.

ARRESTED ON CHARGE OF FALSE REPRESENTATION

Charged with false representation regarding a note for $50, John Dougherty, 33, of this city, was arrested on Tuesday morning by Officers John Carroll and Patrick Murphy. It is alleged that Dougherty tendered the note to the Hudson-Essex company in purchasing a used Overland car and stated that it had been signed by him but upon investigation it was learned otherwise. The accused appeared in court in April this year charged with embezzlement, but his case was continued so as to allow him an opportunity to make good the loss to the complainant. Dougherty is locked up at police headquarters awaiting trial in the city court this (Wednesday) morning.

PASSED TRAFFIC LIGHT IN WESTERLY SQUARE

(Special to The Bulletin)

WESTERLY, Aug. 7—Passing a red traffic light in Dixon square tonight caused the arrest of Manuel Barrados, 6 Minor street, New Haven, owner and operator of a Ford coupe. His companion, Joseph Armoran, of the same address, was also detained. They were on the way from Fall River to New Haven and when stopped by Lieut. G. H. Champlin were both found to be without operators' licenses.

ACCIDENT KEEPS DUNDEE FROM LAWN PARTY

Due to an unfortunate accident Joe Dundee, world's welterweight champion, was unable to be the guest of St. Patrick's parish at its annual lawn party held Tuesday evening on the grounds in the rear of the Knights of Columbus home on Broadway. The announcement was made by Thomas E. Donohue of New London, state athletic commissioner, from the ring soon after the final exhibition bout had been staged and came as a disappointment to the unusually large crowd that had come to the party to witness the world's champion in action.

Commissioner Donohue announced that Dundee's party had left Baltimore at daylight Tuesday morning for Norwich, but due to an automobile accident they were only able to get as far as Greenwich, where train connections could not be made to bring them to this city until a late hour, possibly after 1 o'clock. It was learned from Commissioner Donohue that he had received a telegram at his home in New London earlier in the evening stating that Joe Dundee and his manager, Max Waxman, had arrived in New York at 8 o'clock, from Baltimore having been delayed by an automobile accident. The telegram continued with: Have started for Norwich. Hold crowd until we get there.

Commissioner Donohue immediately left New London for Norwich to inform Rev. John J. Reilly of the bad news. Some time later a phone call was received from Dundee at Greenwich to the effect that the party would be unable to get there owing to the lateness of the hour. As Commissioner Donohue was introduced from the ring he was greeted with a loud cheer, but he then warned the crowd that they would not be in such happy spirits after they had heard his announcement. He said that he was very sorry that Dundee was unable to appear in an exhibition bout, but promised the people that at the next lawn party he would bring to Norwich two or three celebrities of the ring. It was agreed by the many present that it was too bad that the champion could not be at the party, but it was through no fault of his, as he made every effort to get here.

Early in the evening groups of people were seen wending their way over the various streets leading to the grounds, where long before the evening's programme started a goodly number had congregated. The various booths gaily decorated with vari-colored paper and streamers with electric lights strung about the tops of the booths offered a pretty sight. In front of the K. of C. building lights of different colors were attached to the trees and to the flagpole situated almost in the center of the lawn. By 11 o'clock the grounds were packed with people, making it difficult to navigate and with the barkers crying out their wares it reminded one of a fair or circus. The booths did a rushing business throughout the evening and by closing time only a handful of articles remained from the large stock.

The chief attraction of the evening was the exhibition bouts, bringing together the best of the Rose of New England and a fighter each from New York, New London and Boston. The first melee had Eddie Mack of this city, representing the Duwell A. A., throwing the punches with Eddie Adonis of Boston, one of the leading welterweights in New England. Mack, who is an amateur, was no match for Adonis, but he was willing and swapped punches with the Boston man at a rapid pace, receiving the majority of the blows. Adonis had his hands full for a time, but toward the end of the bout it was easily seen that he was holding back and taking pity on the Norwich boy. He could have let loose and given him severe punishment. There was action in this set-to.

In the second bout Wilbert Pavy and Kid Alberts, both of this city, were matched for the three rounds. Pavy knocking out Alberts in the third round. In this round Pavy literally swamped Alberts with punches and in the latter part of the round let one loose that took Alberts off his feet and landed him in a heap in the corner. Alberts seemed to be afraid in the ring, but now and then wrapped a few blows around Pavy, stinging pelts that made Pavy go into him with a vengeance. Alberts remained in a stupor for some time after the third round, but he recovered and smiled his way out of the ring.

Jimmie Quinn and Geno Pecheenie, both well known boxers, were corded for the third go. There was plenty of action in this bout, which was a corking good exhibition, both fighters going into each other with rights and lefts landing solidly. Quinn showed a world of cleverness with his mitts, socking Pecheenie in the head with some hard blows. But Quinn didn't get away without receiving a few sound belts to the face and neck. Pecheenie showing up nicely, a big improvement over his previous fights.

Fred Besade fought with Al Koziol, both of this city, in the fourth affair. Both fighters took many heavy blows, neither of them minding them very much. Besade's reach was an advantage to him, keeping Koziol from hitting him many blows about the face. But, nevertheless, this advantage did no good when Koziol tore into him like a bull with his head down and his mitts aswinging. This, too, was a corking good bout and created much talk from the side lines.

Two youngsters, Bill Plant and Frank Donovan, both of Norwich, stood toe to toe for the fifth bout, each fighter tearing into the other at the command of the fans on the side lines.

Tommy McCarthy of Norwich fought Irish Joey Duggan of New London in the last bout. Both boys went at it tooth and nail, and served up plenty of action at times. Duggan gave the Norwich boy some solid rights to the chin, receiving a number in return.

Barney Keenan was referee and Jim Sheridan announcer of the bouts, which were of three rounds two minutes. Announcer Sheridan introduced Bobby Mays of New London during the fights.

During the evening an unusually fine program of music was given by the Baltic band, which marched through center of the city previous to the opening of the evening's programme and back to the grounds. It was the largest attended lawn party ever held by the parish and a neat sum was realized. All those taking part in the success of the affair deserved considerable credit for their work.

No More Gas In Stomach and Bowels

If you wish to be permanently relieved of gas in stomach and bowels, take Basimann's Gas Tablets, which are prepared especially for stomach gas and all the bad effects resulting from gas pressure.

That empty, gnawing feeling at the pit of the stomach will disappear; that anxious, nervous feeling with heart palpitation will vanish, and you will again be able to take a deep breath without discomfort.

That drowsy, sleepy feeling after dinner will be replaced by a desire for entertainment. Bloating will cease. Your limbs, arms and fingers will no longer feel cold and "go to sleep" because Basimann's Gas Tablets prev

THREE TOWNS WILL SEND BOXING TEAMS FOR DUWELL AMATEURS

The entries of four teams, two from Danielson, one from Jewett City, and another from Westerly, were received yesterday for the Duwell Amateur boxing show to be staged at the Duwell field Friday night.

A number of the old time favorites in addition to several newcomers are now registered for the first and only outdoor A. A. U. boxing show in the state this summer. Included in the Jewett City contigent, the most recent to sign up, are Benny Salinski, featherweight flash, the hard hitting Benny Dempski, Al Gauvin, flyweight, whose home really is in Taftville and several others whom Jack Potts, the Jewett City handler has brought along recently.

Young Chape, Toney Morretti, Frank Bruno, Al Spasato and Frankie Rita are named as the Westerly color bearers with five men representing each of Danielson's two stables operated by Young DeForest and Bennie Peloquin, father of Rene Peloquin, former simon pure who recently turned pro.

As a result of the flow of entries received yesterday, the committee in charge of the coming bouts, now, has about as an attractive array of talent to pick from as has ever collected here before. Together with the local boxers whose names will be announced Thursday and the crack team from the New England Association of A. A. U. whose entries had not as yet been received late last night, the four mentioned teams brings the total number of entrants for the bill to over twenty. As has been the custom in the past, the boys will be matched according to past performances, the bill to be composed of five headline attractions and many novice bouts.

Work on the erection of the arena will be started tonight, the Junior league games originally scheduled for the Duwell field to be transferred to Hollyhock Island on Wednesday and Thursday.

The advance sale of tickets which started Monday, was reported very good last night, every indication pointing to a record breaker for the first outdoor bill.

This Fan Asks How Come?

To the Sporting Editor:

After reading the article on the sporting page of the morning paper that Manager Troland has assumed charge of the recreation field, known as Hollyhock Island, may I ask where and from whom did he receive this privilege and how much is he to pay for same.

As a taxpayer of the city and town, I feel privileged not only to ask the above question, but also to state that I thought Hollyhock Island was a recreation centre for all the sporting element of our city, not for financial gain for any individual?

Did our city fathers, when they voted down the $5000 at the last city meeting that was asked to erect bleachers, have an insight that some individual was going to make a financial proposition out of Hollyhock Island?

Out of fairness to the taxpayers of Norwich, members of the Recreation committee, let us hear from you through your chairman in regards to Hollyhock Island.

Signed, TAXPAYER.

The Truck Driver

I believe Champion is the better spark plug because of the way Champions stand up in hard truck service.

Champion is the better spark plug because it has an exclusive sillimanite insulator specially treated to withstand the much higher temperatures of the modern high-compression engine. Also a new patented solid copper gasket-seal that remains absolutely gas-tight under high compression. Special analysis electrodes which assure a fixed spark-gap under all driving conditions.

PIRATES TAKE BOTH GAMES FROM ROBINS

BROOKLYN, Aug. 7 —(AP)— The Pirates ran their winning streak to six straight here today when they defeated the Robins in two close games, 4 to 3 and 3 to 2. The second clash went twelve innings before Hill, second Pittsburgh pitcher, pulled out the decision over Elliott, third Brooklyn boxman, on singles by Adams and Paul Waner mixed with Lloyd Waner's sacrifice.

In the first game, Burleigh Grimes won his fifth straight and his twentieth of the season, the first major league pitcher to reach so high a total. Paul Waner launched the winning rally for the Pirates with a home run in the third inning of the opener. Other hits followed giving Grimes three runs and a margin which he never thereafter relinquished.

The second game was a pitchers' battle between Fussell and Doak until Grantham started the scoring with a home run in the eighth. The Robins came back with two in their half, and both starting pitchers disappeared for pinch batsmen.

BLUE'S HOME RUN IN NINTH WINS FOR BROWNS

ST. LOUIS, Aug. 7—(AP)—Lu Blue's second home run of the game broke a tie in the ninth inning, enabling the Browns to defeat Boston 6 to 5 today, and to take their third voctory out of the four game series.

It was Pitcher Sam Gray's 17th victory of the season against eight defeats. Blue's first round trip wallop, coming in the fifth with Kress on base, put the Browns back in the lead. Ed Morris, relieving Russell in the ninth, was charged with the defeat although he pitched to only two batters. MacFayden started for Boston.

BENTON PROVES TO BE MASTER OF THE CARDS

NEW YORK, Aug. 7—(AP)—With Larry Benton in superb form, the Giants humbled the league-leading Cardinals, 10 to 1, here today to even the series and reduce the margin of the Red Birds to five and one-half games. It was Benton's eighteenth victory and his twenty-first complete game in twenty-four starts. He yielded only six hits.

Flint Rhem, starting St. Louis pitcher, was hit hard, but the Giants scored only in the first and the eighth. Welsh and O'Doul, the first two men up in the first, both walked and scored on Lindstrom's single. The home team bunched seven hits and two passes for a parting volley of eight runs in the eighth, Lindstrom capping the attack with a triple with the bases filled.

Frank Hogan got four hits in as many times at bat.

YANKEES HAVE BIG FIRST INNING TO BEAT CHICAGO

CHICAGO, Aug. 7—(AP)—A first-inning rally for five runs clinched the verdict for the Yankees over the White Sox here today in a game which the champions finally won behind Herb Pennock, 6 to 3. The Yankee victory coupled with the defeat of the Athletics in Detroit, 4 to 1, enabled the Hugmen to add a game to their lead, which now is four and a half games.

Ted Lyons was the victim of the Yankee assault in the first, yielding seven hits, including doubles by Ruth and Meusel. George Cox then held the visitors scoreless until the ninth, but the home team could do little against Pennock, who usually was tight in the pinches.

The victory gave the Yankees a record of six won and ten lost in the west, the first time in two years that they have fallen below a .667 pace in any engagement against the western clubs.

TIGERS GET EVEN BREAK WITH ATHLETICS IN SERIES

DETROIT, Aug. 7 —(AP)— Detroit gained an even break in the series with Philadelphia today, taking the final game 4 to 1. It was Owen Carroll's thirteenth victory of the season and the former Holy Cross hurler not only held the onrushing Macks to five hits but drove in what proved to be the winning run in the seventh, when he tripled with Tavener on. Harry Heilmann continued to hit, getting two out of three, one of them a double.

CALIFORNIA IMPRESSIVELY BEATS ITALIAN CREW

By FRANK H. KING
(Associated Press Sports Editor)

SLOTEN, Holland, Aug. 7—(AP)—California's eight-oared crew made another impressive showing today in the Olympic rowing regatta, beating the picturesque Italian outfit by four lengths. Ken Myers, Philadelphia single sculler, also rang up a victory for Uncle Sam, trimming Candeveau, of Switzerland. By winning both entered the semi-final round in their respective classes.

The Italian's strange head dresses consisting of brightly colored handkerchiefs closely bound to their heads made them look like a pirate crew as they chased the burly California eight along the Sloten canal, with big crowds from Amsterdam looking on. When the Italians finished they keeled over backward as one man, so great had been their effort to catch the powerful American collegians.

The eight from Italy hit the almost unbelievable pace of 49 to 50 strokes to the minute and maintained it for the full distance. The Italians row the highest stroke of any entered in the regatta but against the powerful pulling of Ky Ebright's men their short chaun stroke served unavailing.

AMERICAN ATHLETES SWEEP THE INTERNATIONAL MEET AT COLOGNE

By ALAN J. GOULD
(Associated Press Sports Editor)

MUNICIPAL STADIUM, Cologne, Germany, Aug. 7—(AP)—A strong United States track and field team, many of its members performing more sensationally than in the Olympics, swept the international meet here today, winning nine out of 15 events.

Three German records were surpassed—in the 400-meter hurdles, high jump and javelin—and world's records were menaced in at least half the events. Sweden and Hungary each won two events and France and Germany each one. The lone Teuton triumph came when Emil Hirschfeld won John Kuck at shotputting.

An enthusiastic crowd of more than 25,000 sat on the stepped slopes of the picturesque sunken oval and stayed until dark as the officials used matches to read the tape in measuring javelin throws.

Charley Borah of the United States showed a sensational return to form in winning the 100-meter dash in 10 7-10 seconds.

Borah won by a head from an 18-year-old German, Jonath, with Henry Russell of the United States third. Lloyd Hahn, also of the American team, won the 800-meter run in one minut , 52 2-5 seconds, beating the German, Bocher, in a great stretch drive by five yards after Byiehn, Swedish star, had quit.

Two American victories were won in the field events when Charley McGinnis captured the pole vault with 4.08 meters or 13 feet 4 5-8 inches, with Barney Berlinger third, and Bud Houser won the discus throw with a toss of 46.39 meters, Eric Krenz placing second.

The 400 meter hurdles went to Sten Pettersson of Sweden in the near world's record time of 52 2-5 seconds after Frank Cuhel of the United States, who was leading, collapsed five yards from the tape and did not finish. Adelheim and Peltzer, both of Germany, were second and third, respectively.

In the 110-meter hurdles, Leighton Dye beat Hugo Leistner by inches in 15 2-5 seconds after a spectacular duel between the two Californians.

The 400-meter run was won by Barst of Hungary with Neumann of Germany second and Emil Snider, U. S., third, in 48 3-5. Henry Russell, U. S., won the 200 meters in clean-cut fashion, pulling away from the German pair, Jonath and Koernig, and winning by three yards in 21 3-5. The Germans were tied for second and Fred Alderman, U. S., was fourth.

Emil Hirschfeld of Germany obtained revenge on the new Olympic champion John Kuck, U. S., in the shotput by heaving the weight 15.64 meters, while the best Kuck could do was 15.14.

Jules LeDoumegue of France spread-eagled the field in the 1,500-meter run, winning by 50 meters from Krause of Germany and Sid Robinson, U. S., who was third. Walter Gegan and Johnny Romig, two other American starters, were distanced. The Frenchman was given an ovation by the Teuton spectators as he was clocked in the sensational time of three minutes 52 and 4-5 seconds, which is faster than the Olympic record.

SENATORS BLANK INDIANS IN FINAL GAME OF SERIES

CLEVELAND, Aug. 7—(AP)— The Washington Nationals squared the series with Cleveland today by taking the final game 8 to 0. The visitors pounded George Uhle and Joe Shaute for 16 of their 17 hits in seven innings while Sam Jones held the Tribe in check over the entire route, allowing them only eight safeties. Bluege connected for four successive hits. Joe Judge was the only National who failed to get at least one safe smack.

LOWLY PHILLIES HUMBLE CUBS IN CLOSE GAME

PHILADELPHIA, Aug. 7—(AP)—The tail-end Phillies gave the Chicago Cubs another severe setback today by taking the third straight 4 to 2. The Phils clinched the game by rapping Carlson for 3 runs in the fifth inning. Virgil Davis home run with one on base accounted for two of the tallies.

SPECULATION AGAIN EFFECTIVELY CHECKED BY HIGHER CALL MONEY

NEW YORK, Aug. 7—(AP)—Higher call money rates again proved effective today in checking speculation for the advance on the New York Stock exchange. The reaction set in after an opening rally in which a number of issues were lifted to new high records. A flurry of buying in the mail order shares brought about a partial recovery in the last few minutes of trading, but final quotations were irregularly lower, with a number of losses running from 1 to 6 points.

Call money renewed unchanged at 6 per cent but the rate was advanced to 8 1-3 and thence to 7 as banks called $30,000,000 in loans. Wall street apparently was taken by surprise by this sudden stiffening in rates, but banking authorities indicated such fluctuations were normal at this time, and that easier conditions probably would prevail from the 10th to the 25th when the month-end demands begin to make themselves felt. Time money and commercial paper rates held firm.

The recent improvement in growing crops was advanced by Wall street today as another "bull" factor to help explain the recent rise in stock prices. It was pointed out that big crops invariably foreshadow high industrial activity and increased purchasing power. Commodity prices, however, continued to decline, wheat dropping about 2 cents a bushel, while cotton yielded 20 to 50 cents a bale.

One of the most interesting business developments of the day was the publication of the monthly steel ingot report of the American Iron & Steel Institute showing record-breaking production of 23,674,456 tons in the first seven months, as against 27,011,522 in the corresponding period last year. July production of 3,204,135 tons in 1927 was smaller than the month before, indicating that the current trend was upward as contrasted with the downward trend at this time last year.

Oil shares ran into profit-taking today after the brisk advance based on expanding earnings and higher gasoline prices. The Standard Oil Co. of Nebraska declared an extra dividend of 25 cents today. Some of the selling in the oils may have been influenced by private estimates of an increase in crude production last week, and the reported discovery of new fields in Texas and California.

Motors also turned reactionary with General Motors dropping from 193 1-8 to 187 1-4 on a revival of rumors that no extra dividend would be declared at Thursday's meeting. Montgomery-Ward again showed special strength, rending up more than 8 points to a new high record at 197 1-4 and then easing to 195. Sears Roebuck touched a new top at 121.

Rails showed signs of life for the first time in about a month, but the early gains of 1 to 4 points were not fully maintained. Heavy buying of Western Maryland issues attracted attention.

A spectacular rally of nearly 25 points in Spanish pesetas on the announcement that a credit had been arranged for the Bank of Spain to help stabilize the peseta, which was quoted around 16.66 cents, featured the foreign exchange market. Other European rates were mixed, with sterling cables holding fairly steady around $4.85 1-2.

LEGAL NOTICES

LEGAL NOTICE
Proposed Ordinances of the City of Norwich

TO ALL PERSONS WHOM IT MAY CONCERN:

This is to give you notice that at a regular meeting of the Court of Common Council of the City of Norwich and State of Connecticut, held on Monday, August 6th, 1928, at seven P. M. (s. t.) in the Council Chamber of said City, the following were proposed and offered as Ordinances of the said City and consideration thereof and action thereon was, as required by law, postponed until an Adjourned Meeting of the Court of Common Council to be held on the 4th day of September, 1928, at seven o'clock P. M. (s. t.), eight o'clock P. M. (d. s. t.), in said Council Chamber, and a public hearing will be had thereon.

"BE IT ORDAINED BY THE COURT OF COMMON COUNCIL OF THE CITY OF NORWICH THAT SECTION 15 OF CHAPTER 6 OF AN ORDINANCE OF THE CITY OF NORWICH CONCERNING FIREWORKS ADOPTED NOV. 4, 1901 IS HEREBY AMENDED TO READ AS FOLLOWS:

"Section 15: No person or persons shall sell or offer to sell, or have for sale, or give, or distribute to any person of persons within said City, any fireworks, rocket or rockets, firecracker or firecrackers, without the written permission of the Chief of Police and the payment to said City of $15.00 for permission to sell at wholesale, $5.00 for permission to sell at retail, and $20.00 for permission to sell at both wholesale and retail. No person or persons shall within said City give or sell any gun powder to any minor under the age of fourteen years, unless by the written order of his parents, master or guardian. Every person violating the provisions of this Section shall for every such offense forfeit and pay for the use of said City a fine of $5.00."

"BE IT ORDAINED BY THE COURT OF COMMON COUNCIL OF THE CITY OF NORWICH THAT SECTION 3 OF CHAPTER 21 OF AN ORDINANCE OF THE CITY OF NORWICH CONCERNING THE CEMETERY TRUST FUNDS, ADOPTED NOV. 4, 1901, IS HEREBY AMENDED TO READ AS FOLLOWS:

"Section 3: Hereafter such funds so given shall immediately upon their receipt by the City Treasurer be deposited in a Savings Bank in the City of Norwich. A separate deposit book, in the name of the person or persons for whose benefit the trust is created, with the City named as Trustee of said deposit, shall be taken by the City Treasurer for each individual account so received. No sum of less amount than $50 shall be received or any trust account opened by said Treasurer for any smaller amount. The City Treasurer shall open on the books of the City an account with each trust so created, stating the purpose thereof, the amount given and the bank where such fund is deposited."

The above is a true copy of the said proposed Ordinances and is published by me as directed by the said Court of Common Council and required by the Charter of the said City of Norwich.

Dated at Norwich, Connecticut, this 6th day of August, A. D. 1928.

Attest:
WESTON C. PULLEN,
City Clerk and Clerk of the Court of Common Council for the City of Norwich, Connecticut. 2t aug8

GROTON CENTER FARMER CHARGED WITH THEFTS IN NEW LONDON

(Special to The Bulletin)

NEW LONDON, Aug. 7—Tony Muscarella, 45, a farmer, residing at Groton Center, evidently has a mania for stealing anything he can lift, no matter what the nature of the plunder. He was arraigned in the police court today for the wholesale theft of articles from yards or verandahs. His case was continued three months. Muscarella has been in the habit of late of coming to this city and collecting garbage. He paid his greatest attention to making his collections in East New London and the vicinity of Winthrop street and Crystal avenue. Watching his opportunity, Muscarella stole anything in sight, it is said, even to baby carriages, scooters, bicycles, in fact anything that he thought he could make use of either by personal use or converting the articles into cash. Suspicion of the neighborhood pointed to Muscarella as the thief and complaint was made to Sergeant Henry Albright, Groton state police barracks, who assigned Officers Arthur Whitmarsh and William Visokay to make an investigation.

The officers became satisfied that Muscarella was the thief and went to his farm where it was proved that their suspicions were well founded, for many of the articles reported as having been stolen were found. Muscarella was brought to New London and although his case in court was not disposed of, the continuance granted will probably bring about the ending of the thieving.

One drunk was sentenced to jail for 10 days for he is an old offender. He was arrested on John street last night by Patrolmen George Cockell, Michael Dorsey and Edward Riordan. Another man, arrested on Howard street, was given suspension of judgment.

C. A. Chapman, 333 Vauxhall street, was charged with driving without a license and judgment was also suspended in his case. He was arrested yesterday by Patrolman Patrick Sheehan.

Michael F. Counihan, 41 Federal street, was charged with breach of the peace and his case was continued two months. Counihan went to his home Sunday and created such a disturbance that his conduct aroused the entire neighborhood. Counihan finally left his home and did not return and the following day Mrs. Counihan complained to Prosecuting Attorney Daniel M. Cronin. He issued a warant for his arrest. Counihan was arrested several weeks ago charged with non-support, but his case was disposed of recently by nolle, after he had assured the court that he would properly support and care for his wife and children.

The dance conducted by members of the New London police department at Ocean beach last night and which was attended by throngs of young people, proved a huge financial success for the department treasury will be increased $1200. The profits derived from the enterprise will be used in defraying the expense of maintaining the police gymnasium, which was equipped a year ago at a large expense.

FUNERAL
Leon Tuthill

The funeral of Leon Tuthill, formerly of Pleasant Valley, Groton, was held this afternoon at 2 o'clock at No. 15 Masonic street, the services being conducted by Rev. Henry W. Hulburt, pastor of the Groton Congregational church. Burial was in Starr cemetery, Groton.

OBITUARY
John J. Pfeiffer

John J. Pfeiffer, Sr., 61, for many years employed by the town of Groton as street commissioner, died this morning at his former residence, No. 4 Broad street, Groton, following an illness of a week of cerebral hemorhage. He is survived by his wife, two sons, John J. Pfeiffer, Jr., Groton and William C. Pfeiffer, Mystic. A brother, Joseph D. Pfeiffer, Norwich, also survives. Mr. Pfeiffer was born in Preston, the son of the late Sebastian and Margaret Pfeiffer but had resided in Groton a long time. He was one of the best known residents of the borough and his work in handling the task of keeping the streets in repair, had brought him much praise.

Traffic Officer Frank Linehan was painfully, but not seriously injured this morning when he was kicked by a horse that had fallen in traffic and it was while assisting in getting the animal back on its feet that the officer received his injuries, which comprise severe bruises and contusions of the right leg. Officer Linehan was directing traffic at the corner of State and Main streets, when a truck driven by Morris Lampert, North Bank street truckman, was passing through State street.

The truck contained a heavy load and at the intersections of the street, either because of the slippery condition of the pavement or by stepping on the trolley tracks, the animal slipped and fell. The horse was unable to regain its foothold and Lampert and Linehan attempted to get the horse up. In doing so the animal in struggling on the pavement kicked Officer Linehan on the lower part of the leg. With the horse on its feet Officer Linehan was taken to the office of a physician where the injuries were treated, after which he went to his home. Officer Linehan will be incapacitated several days. During his absence from his post, Officer Louis Tooker will assist Officer Clyde Murphy in directing traffic.

Mrs. Jack Jann, 261 Huntington street, a patient at Lawrence-Memorial Associated hospital, was discharged today.

Mrs. Helen Gilmore, Maple avenue, and employed in the office of the director of finance, Carey Congdon, municipal building, is enjoying her annual vacation of a fortnight.

Daisy Clark and Florence K. Crandall have renewed the lease of Morris Mallove, proprietor of the state at 111 Bank street. The new lease is for a term of five years and Mr. Mallove will pay an annual rental of $1200.

Silas Maxson Jr., has sold a house and lot on the easterly side of Montauk avenue to Charles E. and Lillian Sandgren.

Rose M. Dunn has sold to Albert Beach, a building lot on Linden street, and Mr. Beach has quit-claimed a one-half undivided interest in the tract to his daughter, Frances Beach.

James J. and Lena Gilmartin have sold to Max and Amy Roxoff a building lot on Colman street.

Commissioner of Motor Vehicles Robbins B. Stoeckel today ordered the suspension of the driver's license of Clarence F. Edge, a member of the crew of the U. S. S. Ericsson. Commissioner Stoeckel also ordered the return of the driver's license of John J. Leitkowsky, No. 44 Lincoln avenue, which was recently suspended.

The condition of Fred Stone, well known actor and summer resident at his estate, Plant Hill, East Lyme, who was seriously injured several days ago when his airplane crashed at Poquonoc, continues to show vast improvement, a fact that is highly encouraging. At Lawrence-Memorial Associated hospital today it was stated that all danger of Mr. Stone suffering the amputation of the right leg, which received a double fracture, had passed and that Mr. Stone's condition was improving daily, although it will be several weeks before he is able to return to his home.

Announcement was made Sunday of the engagement of Miss Frieda Hendel of this city to Edward Cohen of New Haven. The engagement was announced at a party held Sunday evening at the home of Miss Hendel's brother, William Hendel of 35 Linden street. Guests were present from this city, New Haven, New York and Jersey City. A social time was enjoyed by all.

Parents of Miss Virginia Lynch, entertained recently in honor of her 9th birthday, at their residence, No 579 Bank street. Dancing, music and games made up the entertainment for the evening. Those present at the affair were Agnes Douchette, Dolly Lynch, Mary Bane, Louise LeBlanc, Mary Starr, Virginia Lynch, Junior Medling, Alfred Dion, John Callahan, Milton Medling, Donny Bane, Danny Callahan, Louise Douchette, Henry Bane, Gladys Reinman, Mr. and Mrs. Heineman, Mr. and Mrs. D. Miss Jane Fitch, daughter of Mrs. Homer K. Underwood, acted as hostess Monday night to a group of friends at a bridge party held at her home in Hemstead street. Three tables were in play and winners of prizes for high score were Miss Virginia David and Broughton Pendleton. Guests present were Miss Eleanor Bowen, Worth Foster Jr., Miss Jean Foster, Eugene Grieshaber, Miss Virginia David, William Gorman, Dorothy Andrews, Roger Langdon, Ruth Chandler, Clarence Matthewson, Jane Fitch and Broughton Pendleton.

WEDDING
Estey-Doyle

Parents of Miss Frances Louise Doyle, announced today her marriage on July 30 to Thomas Cushing Estey, Jr., of Schenectady, N. Y. The bride is the youngest daughter of Professor and Mrs. William B. Doyle of this city and Nantucket, Mass. The ceremony was performed in the Second Congregational church this city by the Rev. J. Beveridge Lee D. D. The father of the bride is a professor at Connecticut college, and she is a graduate of Amherst college, class of '27. Mr. Estey's father is dean at Amherst.

Miss Alice E. Grane, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Augustus B. Grane of 342 Jefferson avenue, has been appointed assistant bacteriologist at the Yale Medical school, New Haven. She will leave this city next Tuesday to assume her new duties.

A group of friends tendered Miss Angeline Tudisco a surprise party last night at her home, 9 Frost street. Games and exhibition dances formed the feature program of the evening. Those present were Abbie Sullivan, Angeline Tudisco, Collett Sheehan, Catherine Sullivan, Elizabeth Kiely, Jane Sullivan, Loretta Ahearn, Gertrude Godfrey, Ellen Sullivan, Dorothy White, Catherine Gentilellia, Florence Lazerow, Nicoli Pescatella, Hilda Lazerow, Margaret Tudisco, Mildred Briggs, Cecil Godfrey, Steven Tudisco, Verdi Leandri, Henry Nizzelli, Frank Alferro, Frank Della, John Della, William Brown, Joseph Castagna, Richard Kieley, Benjamin Robeno, Thomas Resipi, Michael Resipi, Joseph Robeno, Louis Lazarow, Ross Godfrey and James Conioto of Rochester, New York.

Two petitions of nominations for members of the city council were received today by the city clerk. They were in the name of Henry H. Coozan and David B. Seamon. A petition nominating William L. White for the position of selectman was also received. Papers circulated by John E. White, Edwig Mann and Albert C. Woodruff also delivered a petition, nominating Ezekiel Spitz as a member of the board of school visitors.

The body of John Barton of New York, who died here Sunday, was sent to his home today from local undertaking parlors.

Last night around 6 o'clock, a young woman, while watching a fisherman at the end of the beach pier, was seriously injured when the fishing tackle came in contact with her person. She was standing at the end of the pier and when the fisherman pulled in his line preparatory to a more lengthy cast, the hook and sinker struck the girl. The hook fastened itself in her hair while the sinker gave her a slashing blow that opened her left cheek about one inch below the eye. The girl was taken to the Red Cross hut at the beach, where her wounds were dressed by Captain Jarvis of the life savings corp.

Traffic in this city reached a new peak Sunday afternoon, when more vehicles passed through Bank and State streets than ever before in the history of New London. The rain of yesterday and today, however, apparently has put a damper upon local touring, as traffic has slackened up so suddenly that both of the city's chief streets have almost appeared deserted.

When We Say Service

We've had something to say about service in recent advertisements. Everybody in the tire business talks service these days but not everybody is clear on the meaning.
Service means two things—a complete stock of new fresh dependable tires on hand all the time—we offer you Goodyears. And secondly, making it easy and economical for you to get every last mile out of your tires.
Therefore, we have a modern clean store located convenient for everyone.
Drive-in service—lots of room—no fender scraping, no waiting.
Curbstone service went out of date long ago.
A machine to check wheel alignment.
Up-to-date grease racks—done while you wait if you wish.
Anything you want—when you want it.
And, oh yes—a service car in case of road trouble. A phone call brings you instant assistance.
The next best thing to Goodyear Tires is
GOODYEAR SERVICE
We have both—try us!

ANNOUNCEMENTS

Broadway Theatre.

All the trouble in "The Baby Cyclone" is a fluffy pup. He causes it; it literally revolves, at top speed, about him; he is the personification of the nth degree of trouble. And the more trouble there is, the funnier it becomes from the audience standpoint. This latest George M. Cohan success, "The Baby Cyclone," will be the offering of the Garrick Players at the Broadway theatre on Monday and Tuesday of next week, Aug. 13 and 14. Tickets for all performances are now on sale at the box office of the theatre.

The action of this gorgeously funny Cohan farce-comedy, that has been running for months at the Henry Miller theatre, deals with the troubles of two young couples—one married and the other about to be married. The motif de guerre (if the expression may be pardoned) is a dog—and a little dog at that.

Joseph Meadows, a peace loving bachelor, is on his way to take his fiancee, Lydia Webster to an "affair" when he hears a woman's scream. Joseph makes the inevitable male blunder. He butts in between man and wife. Their argument is over a dog. The wife screams lustily. The husband swings for Joseph's eye— lands and disappears. The first thing Joseph knows, he has said wife, Jessie Hurley, in his home, presumably on the verge of a nervous collapse. All of this trouble is due to the fact that friend husband—name Gene Hurley—has sold his wife's pet bow-wow because he is tired of playing second fiddle to the animal.

The husband shows up. So does Miss Webster and she is carrying a dog she has purchased; a dog that Mrs. Hurley recognizes as her property when she comes down stairs. But there is no use in telling you more of the story and spoiling the pleasure of seeing it. Suffice it, therefore, that what you have read is only a suggestion of the beginning with much merriment, and then much more merriment to follow.

"The Baby Cyclone" has been running for months at the Henry Miller theatre, with a distinguished Broadway cast under the George M. Cohan banner. Local theatregoers owe Manager M. J. Levinson a vote of thanks for bringing that famous farce-comedy success to the Broadway theatre at so early a date.

Palace Theatre.

"Ladies of the Night Club," which brings Ricardo Cortez at the head of a cast including Barbara Leonard, Lee Moran, Cissy Fitzgerald and Douglas Gerrard to the Palace theatre today is a story of the Broadway that's not in the guide books. It's a story of the legs that ache and the hearts that break to make night time a play time for those whose purses are fat enough to get them through the gilded doors of a night club.

One of these rich play boys is George Merrill, who loves the things that money can buy and who has always found that it could buy him anything he wanted. But that was before he met Dimples Revere—a cute and saucy trick who could sing. "I've got a kiss for everybody, has anybody got a kiss for me?" and sing it as though she really expected an answer. But she didn't—and that was where George made an error that was natural, but, as the unfolding reels prove, not fatal.

Most of the action of this Tiffany-Stahl production takes place in a night club while its entertainment is in full swing. There is an elaborate revue, some fun by the inimitable Lee Moran, and a love story.

As the title indicates, it has to do with the World war, though there is considerable to the story that touches upon American incidents. The producers were unusually meticulous in observing accuracy in the war detail; so much so that they engaged Sergeant Arthur Guy Empey especially to supervise the war portion of the picture.

Breed Theatre

"The Shepherd of the Hills," brings the strange, primitive people of the Ozark mountains of a generation ago to life on the screen, with a thoroughness neve approached by fiction. This is the screen version of Harold Bell Wright's most famous novel, produced by Charles R. Rogers for First National Pictures.

Even this big drama of the Arkansas-Missouri backwoods, however, coming Friday and Saturday to the Breed theatre, cannot bring to the ears of spectators unfamiliar with the region, the language of its people. It must be heard to be appreciated. However, here are a few bits of Ozark dialect, which provides a puzzle to linguists and scholars who are striving to trace its origin and growths:

"You-uns come to see we-uns soon. We all gets a right smart lonesome."

"Pap's feelin' peaked, an' maw ain't peert neither."

"Hit's too bad. What kind uh miser they got?"

If you were a grocery clerk, and someone asked you to "put that pone in a poke," would you know what to do? In Ozark dialect, that means, "Put that loaf of bread in a sack."

Alec B. Francis plays the title role in "The Shepherd of the Hills," which Al Rogel directed. Other principal characters who step from the pages of the great author's Ozark novel to the silver sheet are portrayed by Molly O'Day, John Boles, Matthew Betz, Roxaine Fielding, Otis Harlan, Joseph Bennett, Maurice Murphy, Marion Douglas and John Westwood.

Finn Theatre, Jewett City.

John F. Barnett, manager of the Finn theatre, has, by a streak of good fortune, been able to secure Jean A'lussier, the man who made himself famous by performing the daring feat of going over Niagara Falls in a rubber ball.

In a circuit of some of the larger eastern cities, an open date was secured by Mr. Barnett.

Not only will A'lussier be here in person, but the great ball will be on exhibition on the stage. It is considered the wonder performance of the age.

TAFTVILLE

The second annual reunion of the Adams Family association was held Sunday at the Scotland Road Social club and was attended by about 60 members. Those who make up the membership of the association are the children of Mrs. Esther Adams of School street, with their families. A permanent organization was effected this year, Mrs. Adams being named as president, Albert Adams the secretary and Adelard Adams the treasurer.

There were sports and games of various kinds during the day, and a baseball game between the married Adams and the single Adams, which resulted in a victory for the former. At noon there was a chowder, and about 4:30 an appetizing clambake was served under the trees in the grove surrounding the hall.

Those present included Mrs. Esther Adams, Mr. and Mrs. Edward Adams and their children, Philippe, Armand, Orea, Cecile, Marguerite, Oscar, Esther, Edna and Robert; Albert Adams and his daughters, Eveline, Eglantine and Leona; Mr. and Mrs. Edmond Adams and their children, Ovila, Blanche, Adelard, Edmond, Florence and Arthur; George Adams and his sons, George, Jr., and James; Mr. and Mrs. Adelard Adams and their children, Beatrice, Napoleon and Blanche; Mr. and Mrs. Alfred Adams, Mr. and Mrs. Delcy Adams and their children, Roderic, Jeanette, Raymond, Charles and Anita; Mr. and Mrs. Henry Adams with their family, Elsie, Edward and Louis; Mr. and Mrs. Oliver Carignan and their children, Leo, Andrew, Elise and Georgette; Mr. and Mrs. Edmund Bissonnette, Mr. and Mrs. John Urick and son, John, Jr.

Warren S. Sharples of North Second avenue has been in Boston this week.

Mrs. Catherine McNamara of Hartford has been a recent visitor in town at the home of her uncle and aunt, Mr. and Mrs. E. W. Yerrington, and family of South Second avenue.

There was a serious shortage of ice in Taftville over the week-end, and people who owned cars purchased ice in other places and brought it home strapped to running boards and bumpers.

During one of the recent electrical storms the house of Peter Delisle at Riverside grove was struck by a bolt of lightning and several clapboards ripped off, but no fire resulted.

Miss Isabel Thompson of South Second avenue, who is spending the summer at Ayer, Scotland, is to sail for New York on Sept. 1.

Adelphi Dubreuil of South Third avenue has returned from a short visit in Arctic R. I.

Mrs. Herman Davignon of South B street is spending the summer with relatives in Marion, Mass.

Mrs. John Fox, who has been spending the past few weeks with her parents Mr. and Mrs. Albert Widmer, of Norwich avenue has returned to her home in Chicago, Ill. Mrs. Widmer has accompanied her for an extended visit.

Mr. and Mrs. Paul Verville have sold their house on McKay street to Mr. and Mrs. Sylva Collin of South Third avenue, who plan to occupy it in the near future.

Recent campers at Giant's Neck were Albert Airey, his sons, Albert, Jr., and Herbert, and his daughter, Miss Phyllis Airey, of North Second avenue.

When the members of Peter Gallan post, American Legion, entertained the members of their Junior baseball team at a weenie roast at Pleasure Beach, the trip was made in the automobiles of the members, who were assisted by the Legion auxiliary.

Arthur DeRoy of Oakland, R. I., spent the week-end with friends in the village.

Mrs. Sam Robb and her little son, Jack, of South Manchester are guests of Mrs. Robb's parents, Mr. and Mrs. Thomas Crowe, of South A street.

NORWICH POLICEMEN ARE TO ATTEND STATE CONVENTION

Sergeant John T. Casey and Officers John K. Quinn and Clifford L. Crary, delegates from the local police association, are to leave this (Wednesday) morning for New Britain, where they are to attend the state police convention, beginning today. Chief of Police George H. Linton attended the meeting of the executive committee there on Tuesday and during his absence Capt. Thomas P. Murphy will be in charge of his post.

Postoffice Men on Vacation

William Wallace, William Hartle, Patrick Hinchey and Frank Sterry of the local postoffice are enjoying their two weeks annual vacation.

BRIDGEMAN CO. STOCKHOLDERS ARE TOLD OF COMPANY'S PRODUCTION

The progress made by the Bridgman corporation, manufacturers of machines for making paper boxes, which has its factory off North Main street, near the so-called tannery, was explained to a group of the more prominent local stockholders at a meeting held Tuesday afternoon in the office of Judge Nelson J. Ayling. President Bridgman and Vice President Smith were here from New York and told of the exceedingly favorable reception which the company's machines are receiving in the trade.

The company has already completed and delivered machines which are now working and for which payment will soon be received as the trial period will soon expire. The machines referred to amount to $21,000 worth. It was explained that there have been many changes to make in the machines to meet different conditions and different boxmakers in order to produce a machine that would take all kinds of paper, such as porous, glazed, flint, etc., as well as taking the glue equally well on all kinds of paper, instead of having a different machine for each kind of paper. This problem has now been solved, but the finding of the solution has occasioned a delay, of many months in production.

In connection with machines that have been sold and are working special mention was made of the Hood Rubber company which is well pleased with its $10,000 investment in these new machines. The installation recently made in the Schrafft candy company has been very successful and the machine is turning out perfect work. It took only a few hours to instruct the candy factory employes in the use of the machine and the prospects are that the company will require three or four more machines to fill its needs. These and other installations in Pennsylvania, the officers said, give a very encouraging outlook for the company.

In order to take the yearly inventory and at the same time provide a vacation for the employes, the plant is to be run on a short shift for the next two weeks, after which business will go on as usual. Charles S. Eaton has been engaged to audit the books and the local stockholders have been called upon to signify their preference for a local director to represent them on the board. This has been taken under advisement by local representative stockholders and a definite announcement concerning this will soon be made.

President Bridgman stated that while most of his time had been taken up with installation, he expected to be able soon to devote more of his time here in building up the manufacturing end of the business. Vice President Smith, who has charge of advertising and sales and has been a heavy financial backer of the company, expressed himself as highly pleased with the future prospects and the indications of approval which the machines received at the recent convention of the National Paper Bag Makers association in New York, where the Bridgman company gave a practical demonstration of making paper boxes in a show room every day of the convention.

MODERN INDUSTRY GAINS BY RESEARCH METHODS

The success with which many New England manufacturers are using research methods in developing new products and new uses for old ones is shown in the first of a series of reports on "Applying Research to Production" issued by the policyholders' service bureau of the Metropolitan Life Insurance company, in co-operation with the research committee of the New England council, and made public Tuesday.

The recent survey of the uses of research in New England industry by the Metropolitan company in co-operation with the council disclosed the fact that many New England manufacturers have been alive to the importance of research in developing established products and in introducing new ones.

Examples are presented under the headings "Improving Present Products," "Utilizing Waste Products," and "New Products for Today's Demands."

One striking instance is furnished by the Winchester Repeating Arms company, of New Haven, Connecticut, which maintains physical, chemical, metallurgical and ballistic laboratories and an experimental development department.

The problem of utilizing waste products, New England manufacturers interviewed in this survey reported, often can be solved through research. The Rumford Chemical Works, Providence, Rhode Island, discovered that by-products of phosphoric acid production could be made into excellent plaster building blocks. The Acme Wire company, New Haven, Connecticut, found out that short lengths of wire, previously discarded, could be used as lead wire in radio condensers. The Graton and Knight company, Worcester, Massachusetts, through the use of research, has been able to utilize 75 per cent. of its scrap. In the Winchester Repeating Arms company all waste and scrap material and equipment is routed to a central salvage department.

A large number of New England manufacturers have used research methods in developing products to keep up with current market conditions. The Bigelow-Hartford company, Thompsonville, Connecticut, through research, changed its products to keep up with the changing fashions in the rug industry, introducing also the first mats for "table throws." The Stovil Manufacturing company also introduced side lines which have increased the business volume of the company and have afforded steady employment.

MARRIAGE CEREMONY IS PERFORMED IN HIGHWAY

A couple eager to enter the hall of matrimony received a jolt Monday evening at Nadelson's Spruce lodge in Fitchville when they were informed by Justice of the Peace John J. Sweeney of Bozrah that the marriage license which the bridegroom had secured in Norwich did not permit him to join them in wedlock there. He explained that as the marriage license was issued from the Norwich town clerk's office he was unable to perform the ceremony in Fitchville, which is in the town of Bozrah. Miss Rhea Diamond and Harry Rittmeyer, both of New York city, were the couple involved.

This sudden setback in their plans did not frame the prospective husband and wife, who immediately secured two automobiles and drove to the city line, where they were married on Otrobando road just over the Norwich town line. The ceremony took place in the glare of the headlamps with Saul Lippman and Lillian Turner of New York city as attendants, and Justice Sweeney officiating to tie the knot. The unique service came to a close with the duet, "O Promise Me," sung by Saul Flash and Sanford P. Cheswick.

The couple returned to Spruce lodge, where 200 guests had gathered for the wedding ceremony and the entertainment to follow which was then carried out as planned. Mr. and Mrs. Rittmeyer are to spend their wedding trip in Atlantic City.

Both bride and groom reside at 496 East 139th street, New York city, the groom being a steward and the bride a stenographer.

SUES INSURANCE COMPANY TO COLLECT $4,500 JUDGMENT

Suit in the superior court, returnable in September, has been brought by Ida M. Maynard of Bozrah for $5,000 damages against the Fidelity and Casualty Company of New York, insurers of Peter Sablowski of this city. Sablowski has refused to pay a judgment of $4,500 which Mrs. Maynard secured in the superior court in February, 1928, for injuries she received through negligent operation of an automobile by Sablowski. Now she sues the insurance company which carried his risk.

VETERAN PLUMBER HAS REACHED 87TH BIRTHDAY

GIVEN COMPENSATION FOR DEATH OF HER HUSBAND

A workmen's compensation award made by Commissioner Albert J. Bailey gives Mrs. Irene Bolz of 22 Grove street, widow of William Bolz, compensation for 312 weeks at $17.78 per week for the death of her husband who was a machinist employed by the United States Finishing company. The insurance company covering the risk disputed the claim that the death of Bolz was due to an infected thumb which was hurt while he was at work in April making repairs to a stoker.

The respondents (employer and insurance company) claim that Bolz gave no one a definite history of an injury received while working; that the alleged injury was received outside the course of his employment; that in failing forthwith to notify the employer-respondent after receiving his injury, the respondent-employer has sustained prejudice within the meaning of Section 5347 of the compensation act; that the claimant has failed to sustain the burden of proof that the decedent's death arises out of and in the course of his employment.

Comissioner Bailey in a memorandum of decision on the matter says in part: Although the decedent in this case was not definite in his statements to representatives of the employer as to just when he received the injury which resulted in infection and ultimately caused his death, I attribute that to the fact that it was such a slight cut or "barking" of the flesh at the time that he said no particular attention to it and kept on working right up to Thursday night, then suffering much pain during the night, and having considered the wound of a minor nature it is plain to me that when he reported at the first aid room Friday morning he did not state definitely when he received the injury, but from all the evidence there is no question in my mind but what he received the injury as described either Tuesday or Wednesday, and that this injury and the subsequent infection was the cause of his death.

Dr. Brophy showed conclusively in his testimony that he did not wish to be pinned down to stating accurately just how many days prior to his first seeing him this small cut or abrasion was received, but stated positively that it could have been received on Tuesday but not as probable on Wednesday, yet he did not state that it was impossible for the injury to have been received on Wednesday.

FOUND "WOLF STONES" IN LANTERN HILL CEMETERY

In the "Old Timer's" column in the New Haven Register, he relates meeting a former Montville man, John D. Lathrop, now of Perth Amboy, N. J., who told him of finding some so-called wolf stones in an old cemetery at Lantern Hill.

The "Old Timer" writes of Mr. Lathrop as follows:

While on his vacation, Mr. Lathrop made a trip to look for the "wolf stones" in a cemetery of his forebears on ancient Lantern Hill in New London county. Lantern Hill is the high point back of Watch Hill, Rhode Island, where colonists used to build fires to warn the populace when pirates, and later on the British, were approaching from the sea. Lantern Hill in the early days was much like our own Beacon Hill in New Haven, only possibly more important.

Mr. Lathrop, who is an elderly man, has a strong fancy for antiquarian affairs, and his friends said that he had one or two matters which he was to bring to the attention of Henry Ford. He would not talk about this, but what he did say was that he had been to Lantern Hill to try to discover the "wolf stones" in the cemetery of his ancestors.

When he was asked what wolf stones were, Mr. Lathrop answered that they were used to protect the dead of the first settlers in their graves from the ravages of the wolves which then infested this country.

"A wolf stone," said Mr. Lathrop, "is a large, square, flat stone which was laid over graves in those days to protect corpses from the depredations of wild beasts. They were used for many years in our early history.

"I found two of these stones in Lantern Hill cemetery, buried deeply under blackberry vines and thickets, and covered with moss. They are shell-like and of great area, being fully eight feet long by six feet wide, and bearing the marks of cutting with a stone chisel.

"I shall undertake to secure one or two of these stones later on, if I can make arrangements with the man who owns the property."

Asked whether he had made any other interesting discoveries in the antiquarian line while on his trip into old Connecticut, he said, "I have been into several of old New England country houses here and I find among other things that in the crockery line there is a total lack of the 'cup plate' which our ancestors used to rest their tea cups on when they poured out their tea in saucers to drink it.

"I find a total lack of the moustache cup—that affair with an earthernware bridge across its top to rest our moustaches upon when we desired to drink. I suppose this is because the drooping moustache has practically vanished.

"I find that local trains have been practically eliminated in favor of the bus. This shows how wonderfully everything has changed in the way of rail transportation.

"I found a huge fireplace in the Whipple house at Lantern Hill, with the crane, pot hooks and trammels, which were the main stay of the household before cook stoves were dreamed of.

"I found some wooden bottles, sometimes called 'runners,' which reminded one of what a blessing it was when glass became common. They used to drink toddy from them.

"I found a choice selection of toddy and flip glasses, all of which I have shipped to Perth Amboy. Also some wooden trenches, dishes and spoons and some smoke-splotched jars which are samples of Connecticut pottery of before 1800. Men had no rubbers in those days, and they wore top boots."

TENNESSEE GOVERNOR SHOWS SOUTHERN HOSPITALITY

An example of southern hospitality is shown in a letter from Governor Henry H. Horton of Tennessee to Secretary Walter H. Pilcher of the Norwich chamber of commerce who is to be in Nashville in October in order to receive his graduation diploma from the National Secretarial school. The letter to Secretary Pilcher follows:

Tennessee Executive Chamber,
Nashville, Aug. 1, 1928.

My dear Sir:

Bill Manier, manager of the chamber of commerce, my friend and your friend, tells me that the National Association of Commercial Organization Secretaries will hold its 1928 meeting in Nashville during the week of October 21st.

He also advises me that the meeting will be held in the hands of representatives in the state capitol. This necessarily means that in going to and from your meetings you will have to pass my office door, and I wish to say to you that it will be a real pleasure to me to have an opportunity to meet you personally while you are in the city, and I will be glad if you will drop in and say "hello" to me, and give me an opportunity to shake you by the hand.

The chamber of commerce is prepared to give you an old-fashioned southern welcome—a welcome that Nashville knows how to give you at least as well as or better than any other city in this country. Come and see us; stay as long as you can; make yourself at home, which we want you to do; and I am sure whenever in the future another opportunity presents itself to visit us, you will avail yourself of it, and it will be a pleasure to us for you to do so.

Yours very truly,
HENRY H. HORTON, Governor.

Lost and Found at Beach

Saturday was a day of losses for one family visiting Ocean beach. The family was that of Francis Sullivan of 100 Fifth street, Norwich. One member of it left a pocketbook with a considerable sum of money in it in one of Rudd's bath houses and went back later with not much faith in recovering it but found the pocketbook and its contents awaiting her call at the office.

Later Mr. Sullivan made report to Policeman Albert Iverson of the loss of a basket containing two thermos bottles, two children's bathing suits and towels and a Brownie F-A Kodak folding camera.

Paid for Parking Violations

For parking their automobiles in restricted territory Monday Frank M. Gifford and Joseph Gannotti of Rhode Island were assessed $2 each in the city court Tuesday morning.

MONTVILLE MAN AND WOMAN ARE ACCUSED

Charged with a statutory offense, Arthur Scott Dart and Mrs. Etta Beebe Loper, both of Montville, were arraigned before Justice of the Peace J. Y. Miller in that town Monday night, pleaded guilty and were bound over to the September term of the criminal superior court in bonds of $500 each. Dart was able to furnish the bond and was released from custody. The woman, however, was unable to do so and was committed to the county jail in New London.

Dart, father of six children, whose wife is an inmate at the Norwich State hospital and the Loper woman were arrested by Sergeant Henry J. Albright and Trooper Louis Bristol of the Groton barracks, and, when questioned, are said to have admitted the charge. It is alleged that the woman is not divorced from Jerry Loper of Montville, whom she married on May 12, 1926, and Dart is said to have been married in 1912.

NEW SUITS BROUGHT IN COMMON PLEAS COURT

New suits brought in the common pleas court for this county and returnable in September are the following:

On the common counts Clara Stahr, alias Clara Neiderman, of New London, seeks damages of $1,000 from John and Clara Denig, both of New London. The complaint states that on June 25 last the Denigs were indebted to the plaintiff in the sum of $850.

The Quaker Hill Paper Co. of New London is made defendant in a $500 damage action brought by the Pitchburg Duck Mills of Fitchburg, Mass. The complaint is based on the common counts and states that on June 25 last the defendant owed the plaintiff $219.38.

Damages of $250 are sought by the Anex Chocolate Co. of Cambridge, Mass., against S. Patterson, Inc., of New London. The suit is based on the common counts and alleges that the local concern owed the Cambridge company $213.31 on May 28 last.

On the common counts Lena Winaker of Salem seeks damages of $300 from T. R. Chappell, doing business as the T. R. Chappell Dairy of Waterford. The complaint alleges that on June 19 last the defendant was indebted to the plaintiff in the sum of $250.

APPROVAL GIVEN TO COMPENSATION AGREEMENTS

Workmen's compensation agreements as follows have been approved by Commissioner Albert J. Bailey:

Bozrah Electric Co., Bozrahville, employer, and Paul Bruso, of 51 Thames street, Norwich, employe. Fractured leg on June 29, 1928, at rate of $16.50.

American Railway Express Co., Norwich, employer, and George F. MacFarland, of 612 Boswell avenue, employe. Lame back, chest and right arm and cut on head on July 21, 1928, at rate of $14.13.

Central Coal Co., 156 Bank street, New London, employer, and John L. Sullivan, of 13 Thompson street, New London, employe. Abrasions and contusions of both legs on July 10, 1928, at rate of $15.25.

Seeks Injunction Against Seller

An injunction hearing was held Tuesday afternoon at the office of Judge Charles B. Waller of the court of common pleas in New London, brought by Morris Lubchansky against Hyman Tannenbaum, to restrain the latter from violating a clause in the contract entered into when Tannenbaum sold a delicatessen store at Ocean beach to Luchansky, and promised not to re-enter business there for five years.

POETRY

The Doctor

The doctor is a useful man
He tells you what to do.
And if you do not do it
Why, it is up to you!
He strives to cleanse your system
Of everything that cloys,
And he is apt to interrupt
Your gastronomic joys.

Mince-pie and lobster newburg
He does not recommend,
To pork, and veal, and terrapin
He is no ardent friend.
Pigs' knuckles and hot doughnuts
He cannot well advise,
And there are other things, he says,
To eat, which is not wise.

The doctor takes—confound him!—
A very narrow view,
"Eat not the things you want," he says,
"But what are good for you."
And when he gives you good advice,
He gives it with a smile.
I wish I were allowed to fix
His diet for a while!

Symbols

Green grew the reeds and pale they were,
And all the sunless grass was gray;
The sluggish coils of marsh-water
Dripped thickly over root and stone;
In the deep woods there was no day,
No da, within them, shine or sun—
Only the night alway.

And evermore the cypresses
Against the cold sky rocked and swung;
The lurching of the high, black trees,
Their sprawling black tops tossed and flung
Against the sky. She made a hut
Of dripping stone and wattled clay,
And the small window-space was shut
With woven reeds, green and gray.

The comet stars paced soberly
In the blue gardens overhead.
And morn and eve the housing sky
Shifted in blue and gold and red;
But she who dwelt in the stone hut
Knew not these things; on gathered knees
She hid her face, her thick hair shut
Her from the stars and trees.

HUMOR OF THE DAY

Browne—What made Ernest marry Ethel?

Baxter—Ethel, of course.—Answers, London.

Doctor—Do you sleep with your mouth open?

Patient—I dunno, but I'll have a look tonight.—Sydney Bulletin.

Wife—Doesn't it seem strange, John, that after all these years I've never thought of a pet name for you?

Husband (meekly)—Yes, dear. Why not "Job"?—Exchange.

Wife—But, my dear, no woman wants to look dressed as though she came out of the Ark.

Hubby—Huh! You women aren't so averse to looking as though you came out of the Garden of Eden, I notice.—Boston Transcript.

"Have you any green-edged notepaper?"

"No, madam, we have only the usual black mourning edge."

"I'm afraid that won't do. You see, I'm a golf widow."—Humorist.

Jobbing Gardener (with large shears)—Morning, mum! Trim your grass, mum?

No, thank you.

Clip your brushes, mum?

No.

Bob your hair, mum?—Exchange.

A woman in an Indiana town was knocked over by an automobile, and though her head struck the pavement a violent blow she was saved from injury by a old-fashioned coil of hair.

At first blush this sounds like a powerful argument in favor of long hair. And then one reflects that if she had worn short hair she might not have been knocked down at all; she might have been riding in a speedy sport car that knocked someone else down.—Detroit News.

Maud reached for the telephone and demanded a number. "Is that you, Edward?" she asked as a man's voice answered the call. "Speaking," he replied. "That you, Maud?"

"Shall I ever forget it?" replied Edward.

"Well, we have decided to move, and I thought you might like to know our new address."—Liverpool Mercury.

HURRICANE RAVAGED 200 MILE STRIP OF THE EASTERN COAST OF FLORIDA

Persons Who Have Come From the Stricken Territory Report Wide Desolation—75 Per Cent of the Buildings at Stuart and Fort Pierce, Cities of 5,000 and 8,000 Respectively, Were Unroofed or Damaged by the Winds—Unestimated Damage Was Done From West Palm Beach North to Titusville—Reports Indicate No Loss of Life—The West Coast of Florida is Apprehensively Awaiting the Coming of the Storm.

JACKSONVILLE, Fla., Aug. 8—(AP)—The Florida west coast prepared tonight for the advent of the West Indian hurricane that has ravaged a 200-mile strip of the east coast before turning inland toward the Gulf of Mexico.

Approach of the disturbance was heralded in the south central interior by falling barometers, rain and sudden gusts of wind. With what intensity the storm will strike on the west side of the peninsula was not known, but emergency warnings were broadcast to the interior and shipping held to harbors on the prediction of 40 to 50 mile gales.

Unestimated damage was done along the east coast last night from West Palm Beach north to Titusville, with three cities, Stuart, Fort Pierce and Vero Beach, bearing the brunt of the toll with estimated property damages of $5,000,000. West Palm Beach and Palm Beach escaped the full force of the storm but suffered considerable loss of trees and shrubbery.

Available reports indicated there was no loss of life and few persons injured. The Florida section of the American Red Cross took steps to ascertain whether there was any suffering, but no reports of need were received up to late today.

Shipping in distress along the east coast last night had recovered with the cessation of the hurricane winds and reported no progress toward their destinations. Among these was the Mallory liner Algonquin which messaged today that it had rescued five men from a disabled small craft last night. The Algonquin, with 300 passengers, en route from Galveston to New York, was menaced last night when it lost its bearings while in the hurricane center.

Persons who came out of the stricken area today reported wide desolation, with trees stripped of fruit, lines of communication down and electric power disrupted for a distance of 125 miles along the coast because of the breaking of high tension power line. This left a score of cities, towns and communities between Titusville and West Palm Beach without lights.

First definite news of the hurricane's destruction was brought to the outside world by Edward A. Minninger, editor of the Stuart News who drove 75 miles over debris-littered roads to take his story to the Associated Press.

Minninger estimated that 75 per cent of the buildings at Stuart and Fort Pierce, cities of 5,000 and 8,000 respectively, had been unroofed or damaged by the winds. Vero Beach, with 5,000 population, experienced damage to 50 per cent of its buildings. Rain ruined store stocks and the furnishings of many homes. The streets were littered with signboards and awnings.

Wind velocities varying from 50 to 110 miles an hour were reported from the stor mterritory. In Osceola county where the hurricane was reported central after leaving the coast, wind velocities of 25 to 30 miles an hour were reported, virjng rise to hopes that the storm is rapidly diminishing in force and will strike the west coast with lessened intensity.

NOTED FRENCH FLIER KILLED IN PLANE CRASH

ORLY, France, Aug. 8—(AP)—Another attempt to fly from Paris to New York ended in disaster today before it had even begun.

The giant tri-motored Azare en Ciel "Rainbow," crashed on the landing field at Orly aerodrome late this afternoon, killing the mechanic, Lannett, fatally injuring the pilot, Maurice Drouhin, noted French flier, and injuring two others, Gianoli and Manuel.

The big plane, designed by Rene Couzinet, and built entirely of wood, so constructed that all of its essential machinery would be accessible during flight, was a complete wreck.

"The Rainbow" was being put through its final test preparatory to a start across the Atlantic next week when the accident occurred. One of Drouhin's legs was broken and almost wrenched from its hip socket. Lannett and Manuel were both to have been part of the crew on the Atlantic flight. Gianoli was one of the two youthful French engineers who designed the plane.

Drouhin was the second to die as a result of the crash of "The Rainbow," the mechanic Lannet having been killed almost instantly. The fourth man in the plane, Manuel, is understood not to be seriously injured. Gianoli had lapsed into coma this morning.

"RADIO MOVIES" SENT FOR FIRST TIME IN HISTORY

PITTSBURGH, Pa., Aug. 8—(AP)—A radio Utopia, when motion pictures will be sent through the air to homes in all parts of the world, was visioned today by radio's most conspicuous leaders when "radio movies" were sent for the first time in history during a demonstration at the East Pittsburgh plant of the Westinghouse Electric & Manufacturing Co.

Leaders in the radio world and newspapermen attended the demonstration and saw the movies sent through the air to a screen 30 feet from the transmitting apparatus.

While still in the laboratory stage, the process was described as successful and having great possibilities. It was pointed out by engineers that although the movies were sent only a short distance, the engineering principle is the same and they could be sent across the continent just as easily.

DISAGREES WITH STRATON IN HIS ATTACK ON SMITH

ATLANTA, Aug. 8—(AP)—The chairman of the board of trustees of Calvary Baptist church in New York city, Justice William Harlan Black, said here today that he was with the pastor of his church, Dr. John Roach Straton, "in everything but his attitude toward Governor Smith."

Justice Black, who is visiting in Atlanta, said "I do know that I would not be so profoundly interested in Governor Smith's success if I had not known him intimately for 35 years and if I did not know that he is the cleanest, most loyal man in politics today. He is easily the most progressive record before the American electorate. In every subject he has been far in advance of his party."

Mr Black made this statement in asking sharp issue with Dr. Straton, who had attacked Governor Smith as the "deadliest foe in America today of the forces of moral progress and true political wisdom."

BANCITALY OFFICIAL ACCUSED OF THEFT

NEW YORK, Aug. 8—(AP)—Cornelius Callahan, a 28-year-old assistant secretary of Bancitaly corporation was under arrest tonight in Montreal accused of the theft of nearly $500,000 for stock market speculation.

He was indicted today by a New York grand jury charged specifically with the theft of $21,600 from the corporation. Bank officials said, however, the loss would total $496,685.

Callahan, who was unmarried and lived with his mother in Queens borough, was on a vacation with three friends in Montreal when the loss was discovered. He had been a trusty employee of the bank for six years.

WET AND DRY CONTEST CLOSE IN MISSOURI

ST. LOUIS, Aug. 8—(AP)—The prohibition issue ushered in a heated race for the republican United States senatorial nomination to the forefront after most of the major contests in the Missouri primary election Tuesday had been settled late today by decisive votes.

Roscoe C. Patterson of Springfield, United States district attorney at Kansas City, and Nathan Frank of St. Louis, a former congressman, locked for first place but after closing to the front from third place, Frank relinquished the lead.

A tide of St. Louis wet votes sweet Frank to the top of the field of six, ebbed after a few hours and with the St. Louis vote virtually complete and approximately 1,000 of the 4,140 precincts to be tabulated Patterson's lead was swelled hourly, mainly by rural districts in some of which his early lead was gained.

Patterson had a lead of 2,277 when returns from 3,127 precincts were tabulated. His vote was 91,480. Frank had 89,203. David M. Proctor of Kansas City, who held second place until the St. Louis wets brought Frank from third to first past the two dry candidates, had 74,110.

The preference for Frank in St. Louis was shown by these virtually complete figures of the city vote: Frank 57,095; Patterson 10,233; Proctor 11,715.

MARINE, HARTFORD MAN, KILLED IN NICARAGUA

PUERTO CABEZAS, Nicaragua, Aug. 8—(AP)—One American marine was killed and three others were wounded in an encounter with rebels 60 miles from Bocay on the Coco river on Tuesday. Ten insurgents were killed and three wounded.

Myer Stengle of Hartford, Conn., was the marine killed.

The wounded men were brought to Puerto Cabezas by plane for medical treatment. It was stated that they would recover unless complications developed. They were:

Thomas Paine, Roxbury, Mass.

Ruscell Schoenberger, South Charlestown, W. Va.

Melvin Mosier, Topeka, Kas.

The men were members of a patrol of 50 operating under Captain Edson of Burlington, Vt.

PIERRE S. DUPONT IS TO SUPPORT NOMINEE SMITH

PHILADELPHIA, Aug. 8—(AP)—The Philadelphia Record in its issue tomorrow will publish the following dispatch from its correspondent in Wilmington, Del.:

Pierre S. duPont, chairman of the board of General Motors, will tell his associates tomorrow afternoon that he intends to give active support to Governor Smith. He will then offer to resign as chairman, and, if necessary, quit the directorate should there be any objection to his expressing an opinion on the presidential campaign.

ITALIAN NATION MOURNS SUBMARINE DISASTER

ROME, Aug. 8—(AP)—The entire Italian nation mourned today a new catastrophe—the sinking of the submarine F-14 and the death at their posts of its crew of two officers and 25 men.

Coming as it did on the heels of the dirigible Italia's disaster, the F-14 tragedy has made a deep imprint upon Italy.

The submarine, held to the surface by a large pontoon, rested tonight in the harbor at Pola, where were located also the bodies of those who had died aboard it. Preparations were under way to give these a funeral with national honors befitting their tragic end.

BOY FATALLY INJURED BY AUTO IN TOLLAND

ROCKVILLE, Aug. 8—(AP)—Edward Grantz, 10, son of Gustave Grantz of Tolland road, this city, who was struck by an automobile near the North cemetery, Tolland, early this evening, died at Hartford hospital at midnight. Both legs and his skull had been fractured.

The record price of $75,000 was paid at Saratoga Springs, N. Y., for an unnamed yearling colt by Whiskbroom II. out of Pavement, a daughter of All Gold. The colt was bought by C. V. B. Cushman, listed as chief stockholder in the Eastland Farms syndicate.

M. Milonas, former under secretary of finance of Greece, who was held a captive by a party of brigands has been liberated by his captors. The brigands, however, kept Constantino Melas, former deputy, stating that they would not release him until a large ransom which they had demanded from the government is paid.

Japan Takes Steps To Retain Manchuria

Warns Chinese N[illegible] Government t[illegible] Negotiations W[illegible]churia.

TOKY[illegible]—(AP)—Alarmed by report[illegible]churia was about to be [illegible] the Chinese nationalist gov[illegible] at Nanking, Japan today warn[illegible] province not to take that step a[illegible] told Nanking that "suitable measures" would be initiated unless the nationalists recede from their attitude toward the special rights of Japanese citizens in China.

Baron Tanaka, prime minister, told today's cabinet meeting that he had reliable information that Chang Hsueh-Liang, military governor of Manchuria, and Chiang Kai-Shek, nationalist military commander in chief, have worked out the draft of an agreement to extend the Nanking sway into Manchuria.

Japan understands that this agreement grants complete automony to Manchuria in its domestic affairs but gives Nanking control of foreign relations of the province. It is this latter aspect of the situation which has aroused Tokyo to action, Nanking having already notified Japan of its abrogation of commercial treaties granting extra territorial rights to Japanese. Japan's claim that this abrogation is illegal has been ignored by Nanking.

Without the protection afforded by the present treaties, Japan fears that its supplies of raw industrial materials from Manchuria will be cut off and that the property and lives of its citizens in that province and other parts of China will be endangered.

The tentative agreement also is understood to provide that political committees of the Kuomintang, the nationalist organization of the nationalist movement, will be excluded from Manchuria but that Chang Hsueh-Liang will accept the political principles of Sun Yat Sen and that the nationalist flag will be hoisted in Mukden, capital of the province.

Belief that the agreement is near, even if it has not already been consummated, is strengthened by reports that the nationalists have cancelled all troop movements against Mukden and that Chang is preparing to withdraw his fighting Mukdenites from the Shanhaikwan front.

START OF EMANCIPATION OF WOMEN IN PERSIA

NEW YORK, Aug. 8—(AP)—The beginning of the emancipation of women in Persia was brought about by the combination of an ancient new year custom, a Mullah's anger at the thought that eastern women were wearing European clothes into a mosque, and the Shah's rage at what he considered an insult to his queen, Mrs. F. Evelyn Schoepflocher, of Montreal told the Associated Press today.

Mrs. Schoepflocher, who returned from Persia on Sunday, has traveled through 54 countries in the past five years working for the welfare of women and for universal peace, which she said is the basis of the Bahai movement, in which she is actively interested.

She went to Persia as a representative of the International Council of Women and it was just at the time of her arrival that the incident occurred which she believed marked the birth of woman's emancipation in that country.

"It is an old superstitious Persian custom," she said, "to discard black for an hour or two on New Years eve. At a mosque attended by the queen she that date the women in the balcony dropped their veils, being entirely hidden from the congregation, and one of the mullahs thought he caught a glimpse of some European clothes. He publicly denounced the wearing of such apparel into a mosque and the queen considered his remarks insulting, though he was not even aware of her presence.

"She told the shah, Riza Khan Pahlevi, of the happening and he was so incensed that he rushed into the mosque in his boots and spurs, something that had never happened in Persia before and unprovoked the mullahs so fiercely that they quailed before him. If they had opposed him I believe he would have struck them down but they were completely dominated by his fury. There was no need for him to resort to physical violence, striking them with his sword as I have been erroneously reported as having said he did.

"I do not know what the shah's opinions are about feminism, which he has never publicly embraced, but the action he took in that mosque marked the beginning of woman's emancipation in Persia. When I held meetings of women I met no opposition from any quarter and the shah's own daughter attended a conference."

TWO WOMEN INJURED IN COLLISION OF SEDANS

DARIEN, Aug. 8—(AP)—Miss Elizabeth Delafield, 19, daughter of Edward H. Delafield, wealthy retired New York broker, now resident in Darien, lies on the danger list at Norwalk hospital as a result of injuries which she received when the sedan she was driving late this afternoon collided with a small sedan at the intersection of Leroy and West avenue. In the same accident, the Delafield family governess, Miss Sarah Brown Pentland, 35, was also seriously hurt. She also is on the danger list at Norwalk hospital.

The sedan, after locking with the smaller machine in the collision, shoved forward and was nearly demolished upon bumping into a telegraph pole. The dash board was so badly bent it was impossible to turn off the ignition switch.

7-YEAR-OLD GIRL KILLED BY AUTO IN NEW HAVEN

NEW HAVEN, Aug. 8—(AP)—Virginia Del Vecchio, 7, was killed tonight when she stepped into the path of an automobile in front of her home. She was rushed to the New Haven hospital by Lester C. Reed, the driver, where hospital surgeons pronounced her dead. The girl had been visiting at the home of Vincent Di Crosti, her uncle, and was on her way to her own home with him when she bolted across the street and was killed.

SEVEN HEAT PROSTRATIONS REPORTED IN MILWAUKEE

MILWAUKEE, Aug. 8—(AP)—With seven persons treated for heat prostration, Milwaukee sweltered through the second hottest day of the year and the hottest Aug. 8 since 1900. Starting at 7 early this morning mercury climbed steadily to the maximum of 93 at 3 p. m. On July 5, the city experienced its hottest day of the year with 94 degrees.

Ship-to-Shore Air Mail Over Atlantic

Liner Ile De France is Carrying a Large Catapult Airplane.

HAVRE, France, Aug. 8—(AP)—The steamship Ile de France, which will attempt to establish a regular ship-to-shore air mail service over the Atlantic, sailed for New York today.

On the upper deck under a specially built windproof tent, the liner carried a large catapult airplane which will be hurled into the air with its burden of mail, when the ship is twenty-four hours sailing from New York. A similar experiment will be made on the return off the European coast and regularly thereafter when the weather permits.

On this trip, the plane will carry mail only but subsequently it was expected that service would be offered passengers with the idea of bringing Paris within five days travel of New York.

The letters destined to be taken off the steamer by plane bore ten francs additional postage and to those marked to continue the journey westward from New York by the American air mail another two francs was added.

15,000 BRITISH VETERANS AT MEMORIAL SERVICE AT YPRES

YPRES, Belgium, Aug. 8—(AP)—With tears for regret, flowers for remembrance and hymns for praise of sacrifice and example, 15,000 British veterans and their women folk today held a memorial service here for the host of comrades who died in Flanders fields in the World war.

"Oh Valiant Hearts" sang the pilgrims, at least as many of them as could make their voices overcome their sobs. Other hymns and old war time songs were attempted but hearts were too full of emotion and memories of the gallant dead were too poignant and the singing was not much for volume.

"Was it worth while?" asked the Archbishop of York, who is to become primate of the Church of England this fall, in addressing the throng. He answered his own question thusly:

"Yes, a thousand times, yes! Through the sufferings and sacrifices of the war there has been won as never before in human history, a settled will to 'seek peace and ensure it.'"

The service was held under the shadow of Menin gate. The pilgrims gathered around this massive monument to the heroism of the soldiers of the British empire, coming by train, automobile or on foot along the familiar roads of the great battlefields.

SEES PROHIBITION AS REAL ISSUE OF CAMPAIGN

WASHINGTON, Aug. 8—(AP)—Prohibition was singled out today as the foremost issue in the campaign by Senator Edwards, democrat, New Jersey, who said that religion could not be made a "real issue" and that a squabble on the tariff was out of the question.

Senator Edwards, a staunch advocate of modification of the dry law, predicted that his state would be "overwhelmingly for Smith."

"If Mr. Hoover in his acceptance speech next Saturday does not openly declare himself as running on a bone-dry platform," the senator declared, "he will lose every large industrial state of the east. If he straddles the liquor issue his cause will not only be hopeless in the south and southwest, but he will lose thousands and thousands of votes in the corn belt area.

"If the farmers vote as they are now talking, the republican nominee will be defeated in Illinois, Wisconsin, both the Dakotas, Montana, Nevada, Arizona and possibly Michigan."

While Senator Edwards contended that religion "cannot be made a real issue in this campaign," he referred to what he described as a "religious whispering campaign" being directed against the democratic presidential nominee.

THREE CHILDREN AND THEIR FATHER DROWNED

COVINGTON, Ky., Aug. 8—(AP)—Three children and their father were drowned in the Licking river here today while the mother, with a baby in her arms, looked on. The dead are:

Rollie Yelton, 38, Cold Springs, Ky., the husband; Esther and Clifford Yelton, both 12, and Evelyn, 7.

The tragedy occurred when Yelton and the elder children tried to save Evelyn.

The family had gone to the river for an outing. Yelton had strung several fish lines into the stream, near the place where the stream is deepest. Evelyn caught sight of a mussel shell and in her eagerness to get it stepped off into deeper current and was swept away.

Esther went to her aid and soon sank below the surface. Clifford dove in after his sisters but he was soon gone. Then Yelton followed. As the body of Evelyn came to the surface, Mrs. Yelton started toward the water, but Yelton, fearing she would drown, swam back and ordered her away.

Sticking with determination to the almost hopeless attempt to rescue the youngsters, Yelton finally became exhausted and sank.

REPUBLICAN NOTIFICATION CEREMONIES REHEARSED

STANFORD UNIVERSITY, Cal., Aug. 8—(AP)—A dress rehearsal of the republican notification ceremonies with Herbert Hoover in the star role, was held today in the university stadium. Although some of the props were missing, the action moved with precision and it was announced that everything was in readiness for the start at 3.30 p. m. Saturday of California's big show.

Accompanied by officials of the university, the republican presidential nominee went to the vast bowl early in the day and spent more than an hour looking over the ground and testing out his voice on the loud speakers which have been installed on a high platform directly above the speaker's platform.

U. S. SERGEANT KILLED WHEN AIRPLANE FELL

WILLIAMSBURG, Va., Aug. 8—(AP)—Sergt. Sidney Hawkins of Broadnax, Va., was killed, and Lieut. James F. Walsh of Farmer City, Ill., was probably fatally hurt, when their Vought plane of the Air Corps Tactical school, Langley field crashed today near Williamsburg.

COUNSEL FINDS ACCUSED BROKER WATKINS COCKY

Visited His Client in Jail, Where Former Hartford Broker Asserted His Innocence of Wrong-Doing—Alleged Defaulter Declared He Would Fight the Charge of Embezzlement of $167,000—Watkins Claimed That There is Only a Shortage of About $17,000 in His Accounts.

HARTFORD, Aug. 8—(AP)—Attorney William E. Egan found Roger W. Watkins rather cocky when he visited him at the Hartford county jail today.

To his lawyer the former Hartford broker asserted his innocence of any wrongdoing and declared that he would fight the charge of embezzling $167,000 from stockholders and investors in the National Associated Investors, Inc. He refused to consider any suggestions of compromise and said he would not be satisfied without a trial to vindicate his position.

Toward his wife, Mrs. Margaret E. Watkins, who has been in jail since May 18, Watkins is reported to have said that he has a kindly feeling and that he did not desert her.

"I have a very kindly feeling toward my wife," his lawyer quoted him. "I did not desert her and had no intention of deserting her. I was confident that every day would see her release from jail."

Mr. Egan said that he would seek an interview with State's Attorney Hugh M. Alcorn late this week, as the initial step in a move to have Mrs. Watkins released from jail on a very substantially lower bond. She is now held in the jail in default of a bond of $100,000 on the charge of being an accessory to the embezzlement.

In denying the charge against him, Watkins is said to have declared that there is only a shortage of about $17,000 in his accounts with the National Associated Investos, Inc., for which his company, the R. W. Watkins and company, was the fiscal agent.

GOV. SMITH AWAITS REPLY FROM THE REV. STRATON

ALBANY, N. Y., Aug. 8—(AP)—Until Governor Smith receives a letter from Dr. John Roach Straton accepting his challenge for a close range and free discussion of his political career, the democratic presidential nominee intends to say nothing more about the proposed debate.

In a letter to the pastor of Calvary Baptist church in New York city, Mr. Smith yesterday took exception to Dr. Straton's declaration from the pulpit that the governor was the "deadliest foe in America today of the forces of moral progress and true political wisdom."

He called on the minister to repeat the assertion to his face in his church and to give him an opportunity to reply, and proposed that the meeting be held during labor day week.

Dr. Straton announced that the debate was a go, but suggested that it be held in some large New York auditorium instead of his church. He also proposed that the nominee and he engage in a series of joint debates through the south.

Today, at the outset of his daily conference with newspaper men, Governor Smith was asked for his reaction to the clergyman's counter-proposal. He replied that he would not comment, adding:

"I will have nothing to say until I receive a reply from the reverend gentleman."

COTTON PRICES ROSE $8 A BALE IN NEW YORK

NEW YORK, Aug. 8—(AP)—Cotton prices soared $8 a bale on the New York cotton exchange today when the government crop estimate was announced as 14,291,000 bales, conservatively estimated as a full half million bales less than the trade generally had expected, but lost about half the gain.

Wild trading in tremendous volume set in at the close of the brief intermission granted to permit publication of the government report. October contracts, which had been selling at around 19.07 cents a pound, quickly climbed to 20.75 cents, a gain of 168 points. December soared from 19.05 to 20.33 and other months showed gains in proportion.

The wide advance attracted considerable profit-taking, with selling by Wall street and southern interests particularly heavy and prices quickly receded about $4 a bale. December broke to 19.65 cents, then rallied to 20.07 and closed at 20.03 against 19.23 yesterday. October closed at 20.04 as against 19.34 yesterday and January at 19.28 against 19.15 yesterday.

WARM WEATHER AT THE SUMMER WHITE HOUSE

SUPERIOR, Wis., Aug. 8—(AP)—Everyone else at the summer white house suffered today from temperatures which for the first time this summer equalled those at Washington, but President Coolidge apparently unmindful of the heat, went on his usual fishing expedition on the Brule river.

Under the shade of his ten gallon hat, the president was the only member of the presidential family and party to carry out his usual vacation routine.

With temperatures above ninety, the immediate staff of Cedar Island lodge and the office staff here virtually were inactive, accomplishing only that work which was absolutely necessary.

The president was accompanied on his fishing trip by his veteran Indian guide, John Larock, who was unable to take the chief executive on his angling expeditions for almost a week because of a sprained back suffered while cranking a car.

CLUE TO THE SLAYER OF MISS JENNIE CONSTANCE

CHICAGO, Aug. 8—(AP)—A blood-stained iron pipe wrapped in a paper napkin, was the clue by which the police sought to trace the slayer of Miss Jennie Constance, 42 year old teacher of Peoria, Ill., whose battered body was found beneath a hedge in Evanston this morning.

A milk man stumbled over the woman's body just before dawn. Her skull was crushed and her tattered garments gave evidence that an attack had followed the fatal beating.

Near the body lay the iron pipe on whose paper wrapping, a napkin smudged with rouge, was faintly scratched with pencil the name "Peaks" and the letter "L." It was in the front lawn of George H. Peaks, a few doors from the home where Miss Constance resided that she was found.

FRATERNAL ORDER OF EAGLES ELECTS OFFICERS

COLUMBUS, Ohio, Aug. 8—(AP)—Edwin J. Ryan of Philadelphia was elected national president of the Fraternal Order of Eagles late today without opposition.

Raymond Malone, Portland, Me., was chosen grand conductor, and John M. Hogan, Lowell, Mass., grand inside guard.

"BUTCHER BOY" NOT THE SLAYER OF MRS. MELLUS

LOS ANGELES, Aug. 8—(AP)—The slaying of Mrs. Myrtle L. Mellus here last Sunday became today a murder mystery of the first magnitude when police announced that bloody fingerprints found in the bathroom of the palatial Mellus home in the Wilshire district, where she was found dead, were not those of Leo "Pat" Kelly, handsome "butcher boy" accused of the crime.

Kelly, who, according to evidence and police findings, was for five years the woman's sweetheart and companion at many drinking parties, stoutly maintain his innocence. He has admitted he was at the Mellus home on the afternoon Mrs. Mellus was found dead, and that he was in love with the woman and had been drinking with her on the day of her death.

Despite his denials, Kelly was indicted by the county grand jury today on a murder charge, and his trial date was expected to be set for Aug. 20.

Meanwhile, following the discovery of fingerprints other than Kelly's, police worked on the theory that someone else may have knowledge of the killing and summoned for examination several persons who knew Mrs. Mellus well, including her husband, Frank, prominent in sports and fraternal circles. Fingerprints will be taken of all persons summoned.

Police testified that Kelly told them he had quarreled with Mrs. Mellus the previous Thursday night because she had gone out with Mrs. Mae Switzer, wife of a merchant. Mrs. Switzer was named as a woman who had attended "wild parties" participated in by Kelly and Mrs. Mellus. Mrs. Switzer still was being sought by police today as were two other women whose names police declined to reveal.

S. W. Butler, prominent architect, was named as an attendant at the parties.

CLEAR-CUT VICTORY FOR THE FARMERS IN KANSAS

TOPEKA, Kans., Aug. 8—(AP)—A clear-cut victory for the farmers of Kansas who supported Clyde M. Reed of Parsons for the republican gubernatorial nomination emerged tonight as the outstanding result of yesterday's state-wide primary.

Reed won over a field of five other aspirants only one of whom, John Hamilton, Topeka lawyer and speaker of the house of representatives, gave him serious opposition.

Returns from 2,081 precincts out of 2,659 in the state in the republican gubernatorial race gave:

Reed, 77,032; Hamilton, 51,528; Charles F. Scott, 26,302; D. A. N. Chase, 21,881; Frank J. Ryan, 20,778; Fred Volland, 7,296.

As usual the republican vote cast in the state was far heavier than that on the democratic side, on which there were only two contests, one for the gubernatorial nomination and one congressional race.

RESULTS OF THE PRIMARY ELECTION IN OKLAHOMA

OKLAHOMA CITY, Aug. 8—(AP)—Interest in results of yesterday's primary election in Oklahoma tonight had settled on the republican congressional race in the first district and the state supreme court contest in which Chief Justice Fred P. Branson was seeking renomination.

In all other major state and congressional races the results apparently were decisively determined.

Charles O'Connor, Tulsa attorney, was leading John Goldesberry, United States district attorney by nearly 200 votes when 417 of the 526 precincts in the district had been tabulated. O'Connor's vote was 7,802 and Goldesberry's 7,512. E. B. Howard, democratic incumbent, was unopposed in this district, which has alternated between the two parties of late years in the selection of its congressmen.

Chief Justice Branson had assumed a lead of more than 500 over W. R. Brown, his nearest opponent, when 232 of the 303 precincts in the supreme court nominating district had reported. The vote was: Branson, 6,740; Brown, 6,228. Thre eother candidates were trailing.

JUGOSLAVIAN PEASANT LEADER DIED OF WOUNDS

VIENNA, Aug. 8—(AP)—Stefan Raditch, Croatian peasant parliamentary leader, died at 9 o'clock this evening at Zagreb, capital of Croatia. The city was grief-stricken and troops are everywhere ready to suppress trouble.

Raditch died of wounds received last June 20 in parliament when a radical deputy, Punica Ratchitch, infuriated at frequent interruptions whipped out his pistol and fired six shots into a group of Croatians. Each shot claimed a victim, two being killed, one of them a nephew of Raditch, and four wounded.

For a time his condition improved but he suffered a relapse which finally brought about his death. Since his assassination Croatia has seen what has been almost tantamount to martial law, with troops patrolling its cities' streets to quell possible peasant demonstrations occurring as a result of his wounding.

SIX ARRESTED IN RAID GIVEN FREEDOM

WILLIMANTIC, Aug. 8—Three local police officers raided the smoke shop and billiard parlors at No. 824 Main street yesterday morning at two o'clock and took six men in custody. Mariano Mazzola, the proprietor, was charged with keeping a gaming establishment in court while the others, Joseph Nordi, Peter Ferrigno, William Cross, Domenico Deplio and Mike Menditto, were accused of gambling. When the arraignments took place before Deputy Judge Russell A. Andrews, the assistant prosecuting attorney recommended nolles in all of the cases which was acceptable to the court, owing to insufficient evidence. The officers heard suspicious sounds from outside of the building but upon entering the place, witnessed no gambling, cards or dice. Two dollars found in the room belonging to the proprietor were returned. Attorney Thomas J. Kelley was counsel for the six men.

FUNERALS.

Mrs. Ethel A. Emslie

The funeral of Mrs. Ethel Agnes Emslie was held at her late home in North Windham yesterday morning at eleven o'clock. Rev. John H. Knott, pastor of the Chaplin Congregational church, officiated. Interment took place in the North End cemetery in Providence, R. I.

Robert G. Brooks and his daughter, Miss Phyllis B. Brooke of South Coventry have returned from a few days' visit with friends aboard the yacht Bohemian in New York harbor. One day was spent visiting the Statue of Liberty, Grant's Tomb, the Aquarium and Bronx and Central Parks. While making a two-day trip by water, the Leviathan, Majestic, La France and several other large liners were seen en route to Europe. Coney Island and Rockaway beach were also visited and some excellent deep sea fishing indulged in off Sea Bright, N. J. Captain Schwartzman of the Bohemian, a friend of Mr. Brooke, was host.

Members of the local Exchange club with their wives and lady friends were guests at a delightful outing at Columbia lake Tuesday evening of Samuel Chesbro and Patrick J. Twomey, who have cottages there. An excellent dinner was served, prepared by Mr. Chesbro, Dixon Van Zandt, Oliver L. Willard, Christopher C. Case and William F. Maine, assisted by other members. The party was taken around the lake in a motor boat and canoeing and boating were also enjoyed. The program of the evening included group singing under the direction of Charles H. Caswell of West Palm beach, Fla., and card playing. Mr. Chesbro also gave a descriptive talk of his recent trip through Yellowstone park with George H. Gurley, another member of the club. About sixty persons were included in the party.

Mrs. W. L. Whittemore

Word was received here yesterday of the death in Bolestown, New Brunswick, where she was visiting at her former home, of Mrs. Edna B. Whittemore, wife of Willard L. Whittemore of this city. Death occurred on Tuesday evening after a short illness. Mrs. Whittemore, who was proprietor of the local wholesale fruit and produce firm bearing her name, was born in Bolestown thirty-eight years ago, a daughter of M. J. and Alice Pond. Besides her husband she is survived by one sister, Mrs. John Breen of Lewiston, Me., a brother, H. W. Pond of Campbellton, N. B., and her father. She was well-known in this city where she had resided for a number of years. Prior to her marriage she was a trained nurse and employed at the private hospital of Dr. Louis I. Mason here. Mr. Whittemore left yesterday for Bolestown where the funeral will be held.

Nellie Bigelow, aged four, of No. 78 Spring street sustained a deep cut on the head and bruises about the body Tuesday evening when she was struck and knocked down on that thoroughfare by a bicycle operated by Ellison Smith, Jr., of No. 24 Chestnut street.

LOUIS KOHLKOFF WAS FOUND DEAD IN BED

WWILLIMANTIC, Aug. 8—Louis Kohlkoff, aged about 55, was found dead in bed at the home of Abraham Reinstein in Village Hill yesterday morning. The deceased had apparently been in good health previously and retired Tuesday evening without any complaint that he was feeling ill. Dr. George H. Gildersleeve of Norwich, medical examiner, was called and after viewing the body gave his opinion that death was caused by a cardiac heart ailment. Mr. Kohlkoff, a former resident of New York city, was employed by Mr. Reinstein as a farm hand. He leaves no near relatives so far as could be learned.

Mr. and Mrs. Richard H. White of Windham Center have been entertaining their brother-in-law, James H. Taverner and his daughter, Miss Winifred Tavener of England. They have been visiting friends and relatives throughout the states and will sail for home Saturday. Mr. Taverner was formerly secretary for the Japanese ambassador to England. Miss Tavener will resume her duties as a teacher in Liverpool the latter part of this month.

Justice of the Peace Albert M. Gilman of South Coventry, occupying the bench of the Mansfield town court yesterday forenoon, fined Antonio Milardo of Portland $25 and costs for reckless driving, the assessment totaling $40.95. The accused was given two weeks to complete the payment. Milardo was arrested on July 28th by State Policeman Walter Wood of the Stafford Springs barracks for operating a five passenger automobile containing eleven persons.

The following new books were added to the local public library during the month of July: Broken, Ayres; Hay-Wire, Bower; Mystery of the Blue Train, Christie; Happy Mountain, Chapman; Wilderness House, Dangerfield; Fur Brigade, Evarts; Brook Evans, Glaspell; Farewell to Youth, Jameson; Time to Empire, Kyne; Secret of Mohawk Pond, Lincoln; With Malice Toward None, Morrow; Three Lights from a Match, Nason; Cavalier of Tennessee, Nicholson; Flying Courtship, Bath; Cabala, Wilder; Beau Ideal, Wren; Red Scar, Wynn; non-fiction, Dawn (biography) Berkley.

Engine Company No. 1 of the local fire department was called out Tuesday evening for a chimney fire in the home of Cornelius Shea at No. 42 Jackson street. Chemicals were used in extinguishing the blaze.

Two New London baseball teams will appear here this coming Sunday. The All-Stars will play the Willet's A. C. at Windham Field, with Rabbit Gauthier of Taftville on the mound for the locals. At Recreation park the Majors will entertain the Fort Trumbull All-Stars in a return contest. The locals were victorious in the first encounter between these two teams by the score of 5 to 4.

WOMAN BADLY HURT IN AUTO ACCIDENT

WILLIMANTIC, Aug. 8—Mrs. John Lingua, of Grove street, Windsor Locks, received a broken right arm and several broken ribs in an automobile collision Wednesday noon at North Chaplin. Cars figuring in the accident were a Willys-Knight touring car driven by Mr. Lingua, husband of the woman, and a Studebaker roadster, driven by Dr. J. K. Kinney of this city.

The touring car was totally wrecked and the roadster was damaged to some extent when the two came into an almost head-on collision. Mrs. Lingua was taken to St. Joseph's hospital.

"Nothing to spray or sweep up—Expello best Moth-killer ever made"

THE EXPELLO CORPORATION
Dover, N. H.

Dear Sirs: What I like about Expello, in addition to the way it protects my furs and woolens, is this: It doesn't harm the most delicate fabrics or materials of any kind. I suppose it would be impossible for it to do this. The vapor is colorless, so it can't stain. There is nothing to be sprayed, sprinkled, or swept up—and I like that too.

Very truly yours,
(Signed) MARY C. WHITEHILL
Cresskill, N. J.

Expello's vapor in crystal form. Just hang a can in the closet. Close door. Moths die. The vapor works downward, penetrating all fabrics—killing the moth worms wherever they hide. (It's the worm, not the flying moth, that does all the damage.) Get Expello at your drug or department store. Tin with 3 handy bags for chests, trunks, bureau drawers. Each $1. Fully guaranteed. JEWETT CITY

MIKE WOZNIAK'S STORE RANSACKED BY THIEVES

JEWETT CITY, Aug. 8—Mike Wozniak's store was broken into between 1 and 2 o'clock Wednesday morning and $200 worth of cigarettes, cigars, stockings and other merchandise stolen. Mr. Wozniak saw a man going across the street carrying a heavy bundle and went into his store to investigate. In the meantime, a machine parked across the street made its getaway. Officer Vezlard was notified, who in turn called the state police and all surrounding towns. No clue had been found Wednesday night. No money was taken although about $8 or $9 in a drawer was overlooked. The counters and shelves had been thoroughly ransacked.

One of the youngest of the young and unsophisticated kiddies who will endeavor to play ball tonight is Cozy Dolan. His last statement before he went into retirement to take setting up exercises until the game, was "I will do the best I can for my public." To the sorrow of the married men Charley Carey has announced that he "does not choose to run." That probably spells disaster for the not over hopeful benedicts. Another touching feature of the parade will be the high hat and duster straight from Ireland 79 years ago, which will be worn by the above named Cozy. Other high hats with histories have been resurrected for the occasion.

The executive board of the Ladies' Aid society and Young Women's choir are to meet at the home of the president Mrs. Andrew McNicol Thursday evening to make further arrangements for the mid-summer bazaar.

Miss Mildred Montgomery is spending the summer in Westport where she is conducting a tearoom.

The Ladies' Aid society of the Pachaug church meets in the chapel Thursday afternoon.

Deputy Sheriff John Dolan is quite ill at his home on Main street.

Jean A. Lussier the Niagara Falls hero and the immense ball in which he went over the Falls were a big attraction at Finn's theatre Wednesday night. The battered ball stood near the theatre entrance all day and was an object of much interest.

Edward Rousseau attended the Silent Glow oil burner dealer convention at the Bond hotel in Hartford, Monday. After breakfast the 200 New England dealers continued to Goodwin park where an elaborate sheep-bake was served in the afternoon. Mr. Rousseau was happy to learn that the company had increased its sales 250 per cent. over the previous year. Mrs. Rousseau and his assistant, Henry E. Rousseau, accompanied him.

RABALM QUICKLY TOOK STING OUT OF INSECT BITE

"Riding through the swamps of Louisiana last summer, I felt a painful sting on my arm, followed by an immediate swelling that had all the earmarks of becoming serious. As soon as possible I applied a little Rabalm on the sting, which had become badly inflamed. Imagine my delight to find that within fifteen minutes all the pain had gone. The swelling had begun to disappear, and within an hour, no trace of the bite was apparent." H. D. Arthur, New Orleans, La.

Rabalm is the result of a scientific effort to find an effective remedy for inflammation, wherever it occurs in skin or tissue. Smoothed lightly on the affected part without painful rubbing, Rabalm quickly penetrates to the seat of the inflammation. The first thing you notice is, how quickly it stops the itching and sting when applied to any kind of insect bite. Then, a little more slowly the redness and inflammation disappear. Two sizes, 60-cents and $1.00 containing 2 times as much. RABALM is for sale by all druggists.

STATE POLICE FOLLOWING CLUES IN JEWETT CITY BREAK

(Special to The Bulletin)

DANIELSON, Aug. 9—Officers of the state police barracks were today endeavoring to apprehend the burglars who made their entrance into the store of Michael Worzad of Jewett City, early Wednesday morning. Sergeant George Gardner, commanding officer at the barracks, during the absence of Lieut. Urquhart, stated this morning that the men who made their entrance to the store, made their escape in a small Chrysler car, the evidence being furnished by one who happened to be near the store when the break was made. Sergt. Gardner stated that police alarms were sent out from the barracks to all police departments in the county, asking for cooperation in an attempt to bring about the arrest of the men.

Lieutenant Ross V. Urquhart, in command of the local state police barracks has left on a two week's vacation and during his absence Sergeant George Gardner will be in charge of the work at the station.

Reports coming from the summer cottage colony at Alexander lake, relative to the recent swimming notices being posted on the shores of the body of water by Dr. Stanley H. Osborne, director of the state department of health, show that the practice of clandestine bathing has ceased. Before the recent threat that arrests would follow if anyone were discovered bathing in Alexander's lake, it was quite common to observe different parties enjoying the waters. According to information received today the warning was received by all and is being obeyed, although a vigil is being maintained by officials of the state department of health for violators of the rule.

The path of progress is slowly being followed by the contractors on the new state highway in Brooklyn. Today the workmen were engaged in removing the Sidney H. Bard house, which is located near the village green. The moving of this house, when accomplished will be recorded as a feat of modern engineering since the Bard home is over a century old, and many of the colonial features of the property will have to be given considerable attention, while in the process of moving. It is thought that the marked delay of construction is due to the number of dwellings that will have to be removed before road work will be completed.

Mrs. Alfred L. Reed, of Hawkins street, heading the local group of workers who are endeavoring to have all parents of the children of school age, bring their youngsters to the summer roundup being sponsored by the state department of health in Danielson on August 14, stated today that her co-workers have observed the parents to be enthusiastic over the movement, and it is assured that nearly every mother or guardian in the town will be present with their children at the high school building on Tuesday, August 14, when Dr. Elizabeth Ingraham of the state department of health and a professional assistant will be present to give the child a thorough examination and also clean their teeth free of charge.

The purpose of this work, is to locate any defects in the child's health, so they may be corrected before he begins his schooling in September. Other women of the town, assisting Mrs. Reed with the canvass of the town and the outlaying districts are: Miss Helen Perkins in Danielson; Mrs. Louis Sayles in Dayville; Mrs. William Hunter in Goodyear; Miss Shelton in Attawaugan and Miss Burnham in Attawaugan.

Mrs. Reed today expressed the desire that those who are not informed through the canvasers, be present at the examinations or round up on August 14, as this opportunity will not be repeated this year.

Matthew Farrells of Danielson, was arraigned before Judge W. F. Woodward in the town court Tuesday morning charged with fornication and seduction. To this he pleaded not guilty and the case was ordered continuance of the case, Farrells entered a plea of guilty to the charge of fornication, the remaining being dropped. Judge Woodward imposed a fine of $5.00 and costs of the court.

Mrs. J. Greeley had her aunt, Mrs. Maria Coffey and her two daughters, Anna and Lena Coffey and Mr. and Mrs. William Costal of Providence, R. I., Sunday at her home on Academy street.

Mrs. Mary Burns of Bridgeport visited with friends in town the past few days.

Mr. and Mrs. John Laine, the Misses Elsie, Lillian and John Anderson spent the week end at Quincy, Mass.

Miss Louise Harney is visiting this week with her cousin, Alice Tourtellotte of Pomfret.

Ella and Edward Anderson, of Brooklyn, Conn., are camping at Old Killingly.

Mr. and Mrs. Edward Anderson and children of Danielson motored to Roseland Park Sunday.

Lieutenant Gordon J. Gale, commanding officer of the Service battery of the 192nd Field Artillery, stationed at Danielson, received an order from Adjutant General George M. Cole to the effect that several members of the local military company have been transferred from the National Guard reserve list and vice versa. The following men have been assigned to active duty with the company: Sergts. Donald W. Armington, Alfred Bunick, Raymond H. Doyen, Corporal R. E. Burton and Privates Alexander LaBelle and Edgar Mennier.

Another order, contained in the notice was relative to Private R. E. Gundreau at present assigned to the National Guard reserve, being assigned to duty with the service battery. Private Gundreau will go to Tobyhanna with the service battery this week. The order also officially appointed Lieut. Gordon Gale as commanding officer of the company, until a new captain is appointed in the stead of Captain Frederic O. Armington, resigned.

This morning at St. James' church at 9 o'clock, funeral services were held for Edmond Bernier, who died at his home in this town some time during the early hours of Tuesday morning. A mass of requiem officiated at by Rev. Henry Clouthier, a cousin of Mr. Bernier. The bearers were Nestor Gaudreau, Napoleon Pelletier, Adolph Bernier, Leandmus Bernier, Joseph Bellangie and Oliver Bellangie. Burial followed the funeral mass, in St. James cemetery, with committal exercises at the grave, by Rev. Father Clouthier.

PUTNAM

WHEREABOUTS OF GOBEILLE ARE STILL UNKNOWN

PUTNAM, Aug. 8—It was impossible to secure any further information relative to the present haunts of the missing Worcester contractor, Eugene Gobeille, who disappeared from Danielson nearly a month ago and took with him several thousand dollars worth of funds, that were to have been used to further his road contracts at Danielson and Clinton, Conn. Yesterday, word came that the missing man was seen in New York, in the car he had been accustomed to drive about Danielson while working here, and was heading to the Canadian border. Later the report stated he had obtained a room in St. John's, Quebec, remained there for several days, leaving on July 27, supposedly going to Oklahoma, where he claimed to have relatives. It was said today that Worcester authorities, interested in his whereabouts, are co-operating with the Canadian officials in an attempt to determine his present location.

Victoria Vaklinewicz, 5-year-old daughter of Mr. and Mrs. John Vaklinewicz, of Main street, who was injured Saturday evening as the result of being struck down by a speeding automobile, continued to remain upon the danger list at the Day-Kimball hospital. At first it was announced by the hospital authorities, that the girl would not recover as it was believed internal injuries sustained by her would prove fatal. Late this afternoon, word came from the hospital that her condition was considerably improved and hopes for her recovery were given.

At the noonday weekly luncheon and meeting of the members of the Putnam Rotary club, held today at the Putnam Inn, the Rotarians listened to a talk by Chester M. Elliott, who took for his subject, "Care of the Feet and Feet Troubles." Mr. Elliott, for a number of years, has devoted himself to the study of the foot and his knowledge of the subject made his talk interesting. He outlined the many hazards to which one may subject the foot by improper postures. He also explained the many tiny bones located in this member that may hamper one's stride in the event proper care of the foot is neglected. Following Mr. Elliott's talk, routine business was transacted, President English presiding.

It was announced at this meeting, that on next Tuesday afternoon, an opportunity of exceptional value will be given the members of the club, as Lieut. Comdr. John Philip Sousa will be the guest of honor. The "March King" will address the Rotarians, probably upon the subject of music, to which he has devoted himself for the past half century.

It will perhaps be two weeks before a new water commission will be appointed to succeed the water commissioners, whose resignations were accepted by the mayor and council at the meeting held last evening. It was forecast over a fortnight ago that the new commission had already been picked out and only lacked the official announcement by Mayor Richard. The predicted action of the mayor did not transpire, as Mayor Richard failed to appoint the new board Tuesday evening, but called a special meeting of the councilors for Aug. 21, which might place a new board in office. If the council follows the method of a year ago, the resigned commissioners might be reappointed.

To take the "water question" from the minds of the members of the common council, Chief of the Fire Department Ralph E. Thurston and the members of the No. 1 pumper company of the central fire station, with their newly re-conditioned piece of apparatus, went to the municipal building Tuesday evening and furnished a demonstration of the efficiency of the truck, since its overhauling. The fire engine now possesses a large booster tank of 60 gallons capacity, and capable of exerting 50 pounds pressure. The tank contains fresh water and will be used in the future by the department to extinguish the small fires. The stream lasted for five minutes under full pressure. The smiling countenances upon the councilors during the meeting, which followed the demonstration, indicated they were proud of the purchase for the fire department.

Because of business Sergt. James J. Charron of the headquarters company of this city, now in camp at Niantic, was allowed to return to Putnam today to attend to matters. Before returning to camp, Sergeant Charron stated that the Putnam military company has accustomed itself to soldier life under the canvas and the weather. The sergeant said the first night in camp the company witnessed a thunder shower and a heavy downpour of rain which came altogether too soon as the camp was not quite complete and many of the Putnam soldiers were drenched. As last year, Sergt. Frank H. LaMondy is in charge of the mess and, according to Sergeant Charron, is doing his best to provide meals that bring no comment from those who must feast upon his servings.

As Capt. John J. McGarry, commanding officer of the local company, is in charge of the commissary, Lieutenants Murphy and Woodward are directing movements in camp.

Sergeant Charron stated that the medical detachment, under the command of Capt. Edward F. Perry, M D., of this city, has established an infirmary and is furnishing medical attention to the entire camp. This is the first year the medical company has been to camp.

Sunday will be visiting day for the relatives and friends of the members of the headquarters company and, as in past encampments, many from this city will journey to the camp to spend the day.

With only a few weeks left before the major political parties fire their first guns of the campaign, both in the democratic and republican camps plans are being furthered for the organization of units to secure voters for the coming election. Information was received from Miss Katherine Byrne, vice-chairman of the republican state central committee that a meeting of the Thompson unit of the Windham County Republican club is to be held on Friday afternoon. The list of speakers includes Miss Byrne and Senator Alice Patterson Merritt of Hartford and local speakers working for the success of the campaign.

On Friday evening, at the community rooms of the Putnam Savings bank, a meeting of the party leaders of the republican clan will be held, with the aim to organize a Putnam unit of the Windham County Republican club. Miss Byrne will also address this gathering and information regarding the state republican ticket will be released.

In the democratic circles the party leaders are also planning out the organization of units. It was learned today that the city will be districted and captains of a district will be appointed to secure the voters. It was said late this afternoon by an official of the democratic party here that action will not be taken until after Aug. 23, when the campaign formally opens for the party.

Capt. William J. Jarvis and Sergt. George H. Liard of the Putnam police left this morning to attend the annual meeting of the State Police association, held today in New Britain. Sergeant Liard is a vice-president of the association.

COLUMBIA

Mr. and Mrs. Joseph Hutchins of Washington, D. C., are spending their vacation at the home of Mr. Hutchins' parents, Mr. and Mrs. Lester Hutchins.

Mrs. Emily Cobb of Andover attended the service at the Columbia church Sunday morning.

Mrs. Ruth Jacobs has returned home after spending several days at Groton Long Point.

Mr. and Mrs. Robert Sanderson and son Emerson and daughter Eleanor of Manchester are spending the month of August at Rose cottage on the Green.

Mrs. Graham and little daughter Ruth of Manchester were guests Sunday of Mr. and Mrs. Sanderson.

Miss May Turner of Willimantic spent Wednesday afternoon at the home of her aunt, Mrs. Jennie Hunt.

Columbia is experiencing some changes of weather lately. Last Sunday night there was a slight frost, touching leaves on pole beans. The end of the week saw some of the hottest weather this summer. A severe thunder shower Sunday afternoon cleared the air considerably, the thermometer dropping 10 degrees in a short time. There was a record crowd at the lake Sunday afternoon, most of those passing in automobiles being all ready for a cooling dip in the lake.

Miss Marion McCorkell, who has been spending several weeks at her home on the Green, returned Friday to her position in Syracuse, N. Y.

The Tri-County Union of C. E. held a farewell party in honor of Rev. and Mrs. Wain at the parsonage Friday evening. On account of the thunder shower which came up just at night, the attendance was rather smaller than was expected. After a social hour, J. Banks Jones of Gilead, chairman of the committee in charge, presented Mr. Wain a beautiful gold watch and Mrs. Wain a sum of money from the Tri-County union. Sandwiches and Russian tea were served.

Saturday evening the local C. E. society gave a shower and surprise party to Mrs. James Grimm, who was Miss Beatrice Collins before her recent marriage to James Grimm of Pittsburgh. Mr. and Mrs. Grimm are staying with Mrs. Grimm's parents, Mr. and Mrs. Hubert Collins.

Mrs. Clayton Hunt and two sons spent Saturday at Forest park in Springfield.

Fernand Flament, Louis Flament and George Wolff of New York joined the rest of their party at the Avery cottage on the Green Saturday.

Francis Hunt, who has been spending several weeks with his grandmother, Mrs. Jennie Hunt, returned to his home in New London Sunday. He was accompanied by his brother, Frederick Hunt, who will spend a few days there.

Mr. and Mrs. W. H. Carpenter returned Thursday night after a trip to Cambridge, N. Y. They were accompanied by Mr. Carpenter's brother, S. W. Carpenter, Mrs. Carpenter and their son Harrie of Gaffney, S. C., and Mr. Carpenter's aunt, Miss M. E. Ray, of Salem, Mass. Mr. and Mrs. S. W. Carpenter and son will remain in Columbia for a short time, then taking a motor camping trip through Maine and Canada.

Mr. and Mrs. G. Blume of New Rochelle, N. Y., are visiting Mrs. Blume's parents, Mr. and Mrs. Conrad Schiefer.

Mr. and Mrs. Harold Hewlitt of New London spent Sunday at Columbia lake. Mr. Hewlitt is a grandson of the late Mr. and Mrs. Horace Griggs, for many years residents of Columbia.

Mrs. Ruth Jacobs left for Boston Monday morning, where she will spend a week assisting as nurse in a case of illness.

Arthur Dodge of Hartford, who has been visiting at the home of Charles Fox returned home Sunday.

Miss Newmeyer of New York is staying at the home of Mrs. Junabel Squiers.

Rev. Duane Wain preached Sunday morning on the subject Why I am Going to Africa. Next Sunday will be the last one that Rev. Mr. Wain will be in Columbia.

Bacon academy, at Colchester, will open for the 1928-29 school year on Tuesday, Sept. 4. On the following day the public schools will open and the summer vacation will be a memory.

THE FEDERAL BUDGET

How the business of this country, or its activities, is growing is indicated by the report which has just been submitted to President Coolidge by Budget Director Lord. He is looking ahead to the fiscal year beginning with next July. Provisions for that must be made at the session of congress which opens in December. That year will be a part of another's administration but it is always necessary to prepare for it in advance.

According to the director, the budget for that year will involve approximately $3,700,000,000. This is a sizeable sum. It is some different from the first billion dollar congress, but it is to be remembered that conditions today are different and the country has grown. This budget is larger by about a half billion than the present budget. This increase has been anticipated, but the explanation of the director is that it follows the liberal action of congress in making appropriations and in unusual charges such as tax refunds. For a long period expenditures have been kept down as low as possible, many worthy causes being sidetracked because there were no available funds. As the result of this policy of economy, which has resulted to the everlasting benefit of the country, we have reached a time when some of these matters can get attention and they are getting attention. Some of the outlays are due to unusual conditions while other expenditures are going to result in a saving to the government in the long run.

The idea should not be gotten that because the next budget will call for more money that Coolidge economy is going to be abandoned. The president has given assurance against that. Certain of his policies are saving the country millions today and this sound business practice will be continued in connection with executive departments and in debt reduction which automatically produced tax reduction. It is even intimated that the increased deficit seen in the postoffice department has already been anticipated and during the next year or two a greater benefit will be felt from the economies which has been instituted.

Be it larger or smaller, sight cannot be lost of the fact that the budget serves as a most valuable guide in directing government business.

ITALY'S QUICK WORK

Distance makes it impossible to gather the details surrounding the raising of the F-14 in the Adriatic but there cannot fail to be a most favorable impression created by the speedy bringing of the sunken underwater boat to the surface. So fast was it done that it seems the accomplishment should have been rewarded by the finding at least part of the crew alive. Certainly it cannot be charged that there was needless delay or negligence in connection with the raising of the sub. The performance is one which will call for closer study than ever on the part of other countries, including this, to determine whether as good a record might have been established.

Thoughts at once revert to the sinking of the S-4. It is to be realized that the Italian submarine was a much smaller craft, that it required less to lift it and that the equipment was with the fleet at the maneuvers. Each vessel was found at about the same depth and in each instance there were bad weather conditions to hamper the work. The cold that was encountered last December off Provincetown was probably absent in the Adriatic.

From the reports it would appear that there was but little time lost in getting into communication with those in the F-14, but if we can judge by what has been given out for publication there were many things concerning the condition of the crew and the number alive which were not ascertained. Even the early attachment of an air line did not appear to sustain the men or to overcome the effect of the chlorine gas.

It was the speed displayed in attaching cables and in lifting the sub that created so much surprise in view of the long delay in getting the S-4 and the S-51 to the surface, and yet the conditions prevailing aboard the F-14 and the size of it may have contributed much to this result. Nevertheless, unless Italy is unwilling to reveal its methods of operations under the circumstances there will be much for other nations to study. As for the better protection of submarine crews, every nation, including Italy, still has much to learn.

SIGNING THE ANTI-WAR PACT

The latter part of this month at Paris there will be signed the so-called Kellogg treaty denouncing war and favoring an adjustment of international disputes by other means. All the nations, 15 in numbers, which were proposed as participants have signified their desire to put their signatures to the agreement. It has made an appeal which is generally recognized and from which it is believed much good will result.

In view of the reception it has received, it is not surprising that there are other nations which desire to participate and to be among the original signers. Ordinarily it might be expected that the greater the number willing to sign the better it would be. Evidently that is the situation except for the questions which have arisen in connection with these additional countries.

Russia and Spain are desirous of being signatories, but it is the position in which Russia stands that causes a hesitancy on the part of other countries. The United States has not recognized the soviet government and it is pointed out that in view of the part this country has played in connection with the treaty that the invitation to Russia to sign ought to come from Mr. Kellogg. The delicacy of such a move and its bearing upon a recognition of that government quickly becomes apparent. On the other hand fears of kicking up a fuss in the league of nations are entertained if some of the other nations should be responsible for Russia.

The possibility of complications arising that would force the postponement of the signing as arranged bids fair to keep the number of original signers to 15, although the desirability of having Russia a party to such an agreement, quite the same as it has been desired that it participate in any disarmament agreement, is beyond question.

There are ways in which such situations can be circumvented if there is a will, but whether in the interest of harmony the initial signers are kept to the original 15 there ought to be no objection to other nations signing later if they so desire. In the interest of international peace it would appear to be the thing to do.

THE AIR MAIL

If it had been anticipated that there would be no increase in business as the result of the lowering of the rate on air mail, it would have been an unwise step to take. As a matter of fact the lowering of the rate was based upon sound business practice. It was believed that by cutting the rate in two, as was done, that business would be greatly increased and the return for the service would be considerably larger. It was possible for the air mail planes to carry larger loads. It was desirable to get as large a return as possible and at the same time a good policy to stimulate business in that direction.

How well the change has worked out can be better realized as time goes on, but when it is reported that immediately after the new rate was inaugurated there was a gain of from 100 to 300 per cent. in the amount of air mail it shows that the public is appreciative of the facility offered and is prepared to take advantage of it.

Perhaps it can be said that a new broom sweeps clean. A new service if it takes at all is apt to take big, but here is an opportunity for getting fast delivery of important mail matter at an attractive rate. It is a logical thing to expect that it will be profitable to the government as well as beneficial to the public.

The mail service by air has passed the experimental stage. It is being carried on established routes with marked regularity. It is a service that is bound to increase in territory as well as in volume and it will be surprising if the reports made after a month's or a year's operation under the reduced rate don't disclose continuous gains.

FARM FIRES

When a report is read concerning a farm fire near at home or in some distant state we are inclined to think of the volume of smoke and the leaping flames as frequently shown in the pictures.

We are not moved to wonder how many more lives are going to be taken or how much of a boost is going to be made in the property loss. Somehow farm fires do not seem to be regarded as of much consequence. We do not realize that there are 3500 lives taken each year by them and that they cause a property loss of $150,000,000 and yet those impressive figures are furnished by the chemical and technological research division of the department of agriculture. Not only that but it is claimed that the increase in property loss from farm fires is three times as great proportionately as that from city fires. When we stop to realize that the fires in cities mean a yearly loss of 15,000 lives and $570,000,000 in property it can be appreciated that the farm losses run high considering the value of the property at stake and the number of people involved.

Hopes have been greatly increased for the farm situation, however, in the past few years because of the development of good roads and the motor fire aparatus. Organizations are being perfected in large counties so that all farmers are also fire fighters and respond to the call for aid when fire is discovered in a neighboring farmhouse. Inasmuch as this method of fire fighting in the country is bringing about the lowering of fire insurance rates it becomes evident that as it increases it should mean a check on if not a marked reduction in lives lost and property destroyed by farm fires.

SPINACH — AND SALT

Gregory Spaulding paused before his wife's dressing table. For a long moment he regarded his reflection in the triple mirrors. He remembered there was some secret that enabled the observer to examine his profile, but the combination obstinately eluded him. He faced his wife with a look of anxious inquiry in his serious eyes.

"How do you think it looks now, dear?" he asked.

"I don't use that kind of language," explained Gloria. Gregory smoothed his upper lip with delicate fingers and a hurt expression.

"You just have an old-fashioned prejudice——" he began.

"Old fashioned!" Gloria laughed mirthlessly. "You're the one that's slipped back thirty years. Look at the family album! The old-fashioned ladies went raving mad over any man who had a brushpile on his face."

"But, really, Gloria, you're just prejudiced. Look at Douglas Fairbanks and John Gilbert and Lewis Stone——"

"No wonder movie people have so much trouble keeping their wives," she broke in. "I like my spinach on the table. And when I think——" She stopped to devote herself to drawing on a sheer gold stocking.

"But you haven't given it enough time," he protested. "Why in two more weeks——"

"I'll singe you in your sleep," promised Gloria, reaching for the other stocking. "You can take your mustach out in the back yard and play with it. I won't have it around the house. I won't have it any place where it can be seen. I can't let you appear in public. Honestly, I don't see how we can go to the Mortons' dance tonight with your upper lip all mildewed."

"Don't be silly. Any one would think I was doing something criminal."

"It is criminal. You've disfigured yourself; that's mayhem or something. You aren't at all the person I married; that's bigamy and desertion. You're keeping me home from the biggest party of the winter; that's cruelty. I bought a new dress, too."

"Well, climb into it. We'll be late if you talk all night."

"We aren't going. I mean it. Not unless you shave properly." Gregory looked incredulous, then stubborn.

"This is intimidation, he pronounced. "I stand for freedom and the equality of the sexes. If you don't want to go to the Mortons I'm sure I'm not crazy about getting into a boiled shirt."

The words were stern, but there was a twinkle in his eye.

"No good," he grinned. "I can't be bluffed." Gloria regarded him with dark, stormy eyes, that grew suddenly shiny. Her lips quivered alarmingly. She blinked twice, two large tears rolled down her cheeks. They were the first of a deluge.

"For heaven's sake," whispered Gregory, watching his wife's heaving shoulders with amazed eyes. "What's the matter?" He fell to his knees beside her. "Tell me about it. What is it?"

"You—you—know," she gurgled. "That—that fungus on your upper lip. Take it off!"

"What? Is that all? Why, sure, if you feel that way about it. I thought you were half kidding. Don't cry any more, dear."

"Take it off now," she sobbed insistently.

"All right, all right. I didn't know. Why, how was I—I——"

Gregory vanished. Splashing sounds came from the bathroom. In a short two minutes he was back, his face smooth and white, his arms ready to receive a radiant wife. But she continued to weep.

"It's off dear. Look! It's all right now." Gloria looked briefly, through a film of tears. She burst into a new storm of sobs.

"Now what on earth——? Snap out of it, or we'll be late after all this fuss. Just like a woman; I suppose you want it back now." Gloria shook her head emphatically. A few stray tears splashed sideways. Gregory reflected. A slow, satisfied smile spread over his face. It was a smile of understanding.

"I've got it now. You couldn't go to the dance because I had a mustache, so you cried. Now the jolly bottle-brush is gone, and you can't go because you cried and got your face all out of shape. So you're going to cry some more." Gloria shook her head again. "I——I'm all right. A piece of ice—it won't show—just a minute."

"Then what," demanded Gregory, "are you crying about now?" Gloria shed a few final teams.

"Be—be—because I didn't think of crying the nasty thing off two weeks ago!" she wailed.—Chicago News.

YOUR HEALTH

WHEN CHILDREN SEEM LAZY.

By Charles E. Boynton, M. D., Atlanta, Member of Gorgas Memorial.

The normal child, in my opinion, is not lazy. On the contrary the normal child is overflowing with enthusiasm and energy, is always active. Therefore, if a child appears to be lazy, he is mentally or physically sick. To correct this laziness, the parents should not scold the child but should seek to discover the cause by consulting a competent physician.

If your child is lazy, you can be sure he does not feel well. The trouble may be trivial or of short duration, or it may be the beginning of a malady leading to very serious results. The safest way to find out just what is the trouble is to consult a competent physician. Give the child the benefit of the doubt. Don't scold him—help him.

Every healthy good feeder should be more or less lazy after each meal to allow for proper digestion. This, however, should pass and pandemonium rein.

If the laziness tends to become continuous, it may be due to chronic intestinal indigestion with its accompanying symptoms. The standing or sitting posture may be altogether incorrect with resulting fatigue, which may be interpreted as laziness. A beginning, but deep seated, tubercular infection may be at work. The blood may be thin from a simple or more serious anemia. Hookworm or other intestinal parasites may be present. Some of the glands of intestinal secretion, especially the thyroid, may not be working efficiently, and consequently the slow movements of body and mind may be incorrectly interpreted as laziness.

The eyesight may be defective, with the resulting exhaustion due to eyestrain. Correct glasses may do away with the lethargy. Adenoids or enlarged tonsils may prevent enough oxygen entering the lungs to give energy to the body. These same causes may prevent sound refreshing sleep.

Too late hours, with not enough sleep; with older children too much reading with not enough out-of-door exercise, too many moving pictures in stuffy rooms, too many late dances, too many "dates," all lead to exhaustion which is often called laziness.

Durin the changes which occur at puberty, that period during which the individual is neither child nor adult, laziness is often a symptom. The internal changes are making great demands upon the vitality and resources of the body. Laziness at this time is to be encouraged, rather than to call forth temper on the part of the parents. It will pass off after the changes have taken place.

The natural inheritance of children should be health, happiness and energy expressed in the constant desire to be doing something. If these characteristics are not present, we grown-ups should not be in too big a hurry to hand down out judgment as "just lazy." In the majority of cases we should be wrong and perhaps find out our error too late to remedy the trouble.

Parental sympathy and intelligent study of the child will probably lead to a correct diagnosis.

LETTERS TO THE EDITOR

Face the Facts

Mr. Editor: Whatever may be the concrete outcome of the challenge of Governor Smith of New York to Rev. Dr. Straton, it is a fact beyond question that any advocacy of the traffic in alcoholic beverages is in effect a promotion of human degeneracy and vice, and therefore a "foe" of "the forces of moral progress and true political wisdom."

It is not necessary, but indeed exceedingly unwise and "unfair" to attack any man's personal "motives" in discussing this matter. The very evident "sincerity" of Governor Smith makes his influence the more effective in undermining a sound morality, and therefore destructive of the social order.

What are "moral forces"? What is morality? A brief, but accurate definition, is, the right conduct of the individual in his relation to himself and his fellow man. It is not necessary to rehearse here the abundant evidence of the essential immorality of the liquor traffic. Two familiar outstanding declarations will suffice: That of Gladstone, that this traffic is a greater foe to humanity than "war, famine and pestilence combined," and that of the U. S. supreme court as "a greater source of crime and misery" than any other business.

The vital question of today is, why is the liquor traffic so destructive to man and to the social order? The destruction is not new, but the answer to the question "why" is new. The revelations of modern science have brought out the truth about the nature and effect of alcohol as never before realized, and it is on this bedrock truth that the "true political wisdom" of the 18th amendment is grounded.

Students of the alcohol problem know that this is true and anyone may know this truth, who will give attention to it. The testimony and practice of medical authorities abundantly confirm it. The statement that there is "no moral wrong per se" in drinking alcohol becomes an absurdity in the face of scientific truth. No man can claim a moral right to damage and degrade himself, or his neighbor.

The so-called "preacher-lawyer" from Buffalo (who no longer claims the "reverend" title, I understand), in his foolish insistence that no man can be a "Christian" unless he subscribes to the doctrine that the founder of Christianity made a physical transformation of water into intoxicating wine at the Cana wedding is following a mental obsession that flies in the face of physical truth and seeks to hold up the Nazarene as the creator and defender of Booze!—The proposition is too senseless to dignify it by the name of "blasphemy."

It is not true that the Volstead definition of intoxicating liquor is a "lie." By its very nature, alcohol is intoxicating and its inevitable effect is revealed by the minutest physical tests. The practical folly of the traffic in beverage alcohol of any "content" is clearly demonstrated by even "moderate" drinking, which muddles the drinker's brain and renders him unfit for any action requiring a clear brain and steady hand, and undermines his moral quality.

"Why do you so persistently evade the essential liquor question—the truth about alcohol—in your discussion?" I once asked a well-known anti-prohibition editor. "Why, the minute I go into that I am gone; nobody can defend alcohol as a drink," was the naive reply. Then in the name of common sense, why attempt to defend and authorize the traffic in an indefensible beverage?—is the vital question to which no editor, or any other citizen, can give a sane answer!

The defender of the traffic in alcoholic beverages is, therefore, even if he does not realize it, in effect, a promoter of vice and "a foe of moral forces," however sincerely he may believe that legislation and "rigid control" can change the nature and effect of alcohol. No rational solution of the liquor problem will be achieved as long as the irrational, brain-befuddling, human-wrecking, crime-breeding, race-degenerating traffic in alcoholic beverages is tolerated. The 18th amendment is irrevocably ground in natural law and physical truth. Why not "face the facts"?

Pointers For Parents

Becoming overheated in play is one of the bugbears of summer. Its dangers, says "Children, the Magazine for Parents," are probably much overrated. A constructive way to deal with overactivity is to establish a daily rest period after the mid-day meal, when the sun is hottest. For the remainder of the day children may be allowed to play to their heart's content. A normal youngster thrives best on plenty of play in the open air in summertime.

Fathers!—occasionally be alone with your little child, even if only for a short time. The mother has this experience often. If other persons are always present when you are with the child, you don't have a fair chance to start your own fellowship.

Every boy loves to make a "collection," and of all the collections to which boys seem naturally to gravitate, the most popular is that of postage stamps. It is an admirable interest, teaching history, geography, the art of printing, and a general sense of order in its classification and arrangement. Another collection which may well interest the whole family is that of coins and medals. For the sake of simplicity, it should at first be confined to the coinage of the United States, or even limited to our pennies.

Be sure a child eats enough food. Weigh him regularly. If he does not gain normally it may be merely because he eats too little. If there are any physical defects, such as dental trouble, adenoids, or bad tonsils, have those remedied as soon as possible, as they interfere with appetite. Be sure that the child spends as much time as possible in outdoor play and that he sleeps long hours at night. Sleep and fresh air are great stimulants to appetite. Serve meals regularly and allow no food between meals. Avoid highly flavored and spiced foods.

CHILD TRAINING

The Meek-as-Moses Child

Florence Shelby

My dear Helen:—

I am so glad you wrote me about little George. Yes, indeed, a child may be "too good," as you say. It is, of course, not exactly goodness, this giving up to others so easily. Like many virtues, meekness carried to an extreme becomes a failing—an imperfection of character.

Nor can you begin too early to educate your boy in this regard. It should be before he ever becomes conscious of his weakness. It is so very much harder to overcome a failing, you know, if you once get the notion that you were "just naturally born that way"—and can't help it.

I remember once going to the postoffice with one of my own little daughters. She thought it a great adventure to buy me a dime's worth of stamps at the window while I was busy with other mail. It happened that I finished before the long "line" in which she waited her turn which brought her next at the window.

Just behind her came a tall, exceedingly self-important man, and instead for the child to make her purchase first, as was her right by all odds, he started to state his order over her head. Neither of them knew that I was looking on.

The child was stepping meekly aside when I interfered. "Martha, you are next," I said gently but clearly and with assurance, my eye on the pompous usurper. And he waited his turn.

The point, of course, is not that I won out, but that it gave me a chance to teach my little daughter to hold her own. Hours of "talk" would not have opened the eyes of her understanding as did that little experience.

Very carefully, I tried to show her afterwards that if the man had been old or sick, it would have been lovely for her to say "Won't you go first, Sir?" but that that "next turn" was hers to give, not his to snatch.

Again, Martha always had a way of waiting on all the children with whom she played—exactly as little George does. Who wouldn't impose upon such good nature? And it is really a problem to teach children of that type to hold their own, for one would not wish to quench entirely the beautiful kindliness of spirit which animates them.

It is something you cannot teach George in a minute, Helen. Something, in fact, that he very likely will be years mastering. It will be a real help if you make it clear to him that he cannot suffer injury without having the wrong reflected upon those nearest and dearest to him. If you just open his eyes to the sense of justice it requires to be fair to himself—exactly the same as he would to some other boy—you have done your part. The individual must do his own growing.

Write me again, dear, and don't crowd your little man with too many precepts. Bless his wee, human heart!

Sincerely yours,
AUNT MYRA.

Stories That Recall Others

Make It Tender

Mother and little four-year-old Patricia were debating the matter of punishment. Mother was questioning whether she should spank the child then or wait and tell daddy.

Patricia said: "You spank me, but you give me a tender spanking."

Considerate

Little Jimmie, age three, was sitting on his mother's lap when his mother said: "Jimmie, I believe it is going to rain; there are so many flies around the door."

A few minutes later Jimmie's mother went into the kitchen to see about the supper. Hearing the door open she looked and found Jimmie chasing the flies into the house. She said: "Jimmie, quit letting the flies in."

Jimmie said: "Well, mammie, me don't want the bugs to get wet."

STUDYING THE FACTS OF NEW BEDFORD STRIKE

NEW BEDFORD, Mass., Aug. 8—(AP)—Differing in facts, the original contentions concerning causes for and continuance of the textile strike here, representatives of the operatives and manufacturers today placed their aims and grievances before the state board of conciliation and arbitration. Investigation of the situation is being pursued by that body as a consequence of refusal of both strikers and manufacturers to arbitrate their issue, a ten per cent. wage reduction.

At the end of 1927 it was found that every state except New York and Massachusetts had a tax on gasoline.

RELIEF FROM CURSE OF CONSTIPATION

A Battle Creek physician says, "Constipation is responsible for more misery than any other cause."

But immediate relief has been found. A tablet called Rexall Orderlies has been discovered. This tablet attracts water from the system into the lazy, dry, evacuating bowel called the colon. The water loosens the dry food waste and causes a gentle, thorough, natural movement without forming a habit or ever increasing the dose.

Stop suffering from constipation. Chew a Rexall Orderlie at night. Next day bright. Get 24 for 25c today at the nearest Rexall or Liggett Drug Store.

DEMOCRATS ENTHUSIASTIC AT NEW LONDON MEETING

NEW LONDON, Aug. 8—(AP)—A meeting originally planned to stir local enthusiasm among the democrats in the November elections, attracted 300 members of the party from all sections of the state here tonight to hear Congressman Frank Oliver, of New York, extoll in glowing terms the merits of Gov. Alfred Smith, of New York, for president.

The gathering, under the direction of the Second District Democratic association, sat down to a shore dinner at Wordell's pavilion at Ocean Beach before the speaking got under way. The list of speakers, all who prophesied success in the vote for Smith, were, Rev. George B. Gilbert of Middletown, Abel P. Tanner of New London, Chairman James J. Walsh, National Committeeman Thomas J. Spellacy and ex-Congressman T. B. O'Sullivan.

Senator Royal S. Copeland of New York was to have been the chief speaker but could not attend. Joseph C. Keefe, town committeeman, presided. The meeting was considered one of the most enthusiastic ever held here.

GIVEN COMPENSATION AWARD FOR HUSBAND'S DEATH

Payment at the rate of $11.17 per week for 312 weeks is awarded to Mrs. Ida Ouellett of 11 North A street, Taftville, in a workmen's compensation award made by Commissioner Albert J. Bailey on the claim of Mrs. Ouellett for the death of her husband, Edward Ouellett, who was a lineman in the employ of the Ponemah company. He was electrocuted while at work on July 11, for the company, leaving two children, aged 7 and 5 1-2 years, who were dependent upon him besides his wife.

The company insuring the mill is to make the accrued payments in a lump sum and the weekly payments thereafter, as well as $200 towards funeral expenses and also all reasonable medical bills.

PAYS $1,403 FOR NEW FIRE DEPARTMENT CAR

The new Dodge machine bought by the fire commissioners for the use of Deputy Chief Henry R. Taft was purchased at the price of $1,385 to which there was an addition of $18 for a trunk which was extra equipment, total $1,403.

In the deal for the machine, the outworn Oldamobile which the deputy had been using was turned in for $350, leaving a cash balance to be paid by the city of $1,053.

Visitors from Cleveland

Raphael L. Kingsbury, who used to reside at the Old Brick House in Preston on Westerly road, has just returned to visit his home town. He is now the manager of a promising young featherweight fighter of Cleveland, Louis Lebo. Both men arrived from Cleveland and leave tomorrow for Boston in quest of bouts. Mr. Kingsbury visited all of his old friends and had an enjoyable time.

Taken to Hospital

A man by the name of Rondeau gave the police quite a battle when they were called to 257 North Main street where Dr. Paul F. Gadle was attending him about 1 o'clock this (Thursday) morning. Officers Allen, Shahan and Bruckner were sent from police headquarters and the Backus hospital ambulance was summoned. Rondeau was removed to the hospital for treatment for his condition which was reported to have been caused by over-indulgence in liquor.

Telephone Service Buttons

Awards made in July of telephone service buttons included the following: Rose A. McGarry, Putnam, 35 years; Mary M. O'Connor and Catharine S. Tooker, both of New London, Edith L. Spencer, ten years; Beatrice E. Geer, Danielson; Isabelle R. Boyle, Anna M. Carver, Mary H. Morgan and Corrie Del Selwe, all of New London, five years.

WEDDINGS

McGourty-Buckle

At 7 o'clock Saturday evening in the vestry of St. Joseph's church, New London, the wedding of John McGourty of Waterford, son of Mr. and Mrs. Owen McGourty, and Miss Irene Buckle of 96 Thames street, this city, was performed by Rev. William C. Fitzsimons in the presence of members of the immediate families. The attendants were Mr. and Mrs. Charles H. Beckwith, brother-in-law and sister of the bridegroom. Mr. and Mrs. McGourty are to spend their honeymoon at Califon, N. J., and upon their return are to reside in Waterford.

English-Enos

Miss Mabel A. Enos, daughter of Seth T. Enos of 45 Ward street, and Thomas M. English, son of Mr. Thomas English of 18 Slater avenue, were united in marriage Monday morning at the 7 o'clock mass in St. Patrick's church by Rt. Rev. Msgr. Michael H. May. The maid of honor was Miss Arline G. Fields, a cousin of the bride and the best man was John M. English a brother of the groom. The bride wore a period gown of pink crene de chine and tulle with hat to match. Her maid of honor's gown and hat were of orchid color. After the ceremony a wedding breakfast was served at the Mohican hotel. New London, Mr. and Mrs. English left for a few weeks' motor trip after which they will reside in a newly furnished home on Harland road. The groom is a postal clerk and the bride has been a teacher.

INCIDENTS IN SOCIETY

Mrs. W. S. Alling has returned to her home on Washington street after spending some time at her cottage at Eastern Point.

Mr. and Mrs. Avery Smith, who are on a two months' trip to California and the west coast, are now on their way home via Canadian Rockies.

Miss Mary A. C. Avery, Miss Beatrice Smith and Miss Loring are on a ten days trip in Canada, touring the Evangeline country, the Bay of Fundy, St. Johns and other places of interest.

It always hurts a girl when one of her old beaux marries her best girl friend.

STATE OFFICERS MAKE VISIT TO NORWICH PATRONS OF HUSBANDRY

Norwich Grange, No. 172, Patrons of Husbandry, conducted state officers' night at its regular meeting Wednesday evening in Steiner hall, bringing out an attendance of over 100.

Worthy Master Albert W. Lillibridge presided and extended the greetings to the visiting officers of the state grange who included the following: Minor Ives, Meriden, worthy master; Charles M. Adams, Groton, assistant steward; Past Master Charles T. Davis, a member of the executive committee; Claude W. Stevens, member of auditing committee; Albert P. Marsh, member of legislative committee; Clayton L. Peckham, deputy of Quinebaug Pomona; Harold K. Hansen, deputy of East Central Pomona; John P. Holloway, deputy of New London county; Emerson J. Leonard, deputy of New Haven county; Ida E. Richardson, member of home economics committee; L. G. Tolles, Southington worthy overseer.

All the visiting state officers were heard in interesting remarks during the business meeting and when the grange was opened for the lecturer's hour, a feature of the evening was provided by a debate upon the subject, Resolved: that the male of the species is more vain than the female.

Mrs. Ida Richardson maintained the women's side of the argument and G. Warren Davis of Preston City grange spoke for the men. Each of the disputants made a spirited presentation of the subject and there were a number who spoke entertainingly from the floor when the question was thrown open to the house. Several of the state officers were appointed as judges by the lecturer Mrs. Elizabeth Murray, but the evening passed without their formal verdict being called for.

As the final numbers on the programme there was a well rendered soprano solo by Mrs. Lee Coles, with Mrs. Olson as accompanist, a piano solo by Dwight Richardson which was greatly enjoyed, and a whistling solo by Mr. Tolles which made a hit.

Apple pie a la mode, with coffee, was served by Division C, comprising Mrs. Elizabeth Walker, chairman, Susan Lillibridge, May Spiers, Edna Browning, Christine Hommell, and Lydia Pendleton.

SALEM CONGREGATIONALISTS WILL CELEBRATE ANNIVERSARY

The old Salem Congregational church situated on the New London-Hartford turnpike, not far from Colchester, is to celebrate its 200th anniversary at the week-end of Sept. 1, with exercises on both Saturday and Sunday, Sept. 1 and 2. Of particular interest will be the presence of Senator Hiram Bingham and Rev. Sherrod Soule, superintendent of the Missionary Society of Connecticut, who will be speakers.

The anniversary was originally planned for Aug. 30, but the date was changed so that Senator Bingham, who expects to get home from Europe on Aug. 30, will be sure to be there. The senator is a resident of the town of Salem and, with his family, is an occasional attendant at services in Salem church.

The program, which seeks to cover the history of the church and to show its present-day opportunities, as well as the prospects for the future, has not yet been completed. It is expected that the names of other prominent people will be added to it.

Announcements of the anniversary have already been sent to hundreds of friends and descendants of old members of the church who have been widely scattered through this and other states, and it is believed that the day will furnish the occasion for a great home-coming.

Programme for Saturday

The morning session on Sept. 1 will recall the events of the long history of the community and the church since its founding in the summer of 1728. There will be a greeting from the mother church at Colchester, from which the original members of the Salem church were drawn. The invocation will be given by Rev. Edward P. Ayer, chaplain of the state senate, who was once pastor of the neighboring church at Montville. The historical address will be delivered by Rev. Sherrod Soule of Hartford, who is now working over old records of the early days of Salem.

All those who attend the anniversary will be invited to a free luncheon on the Salem green near the church. Of this feature the Salem women are in charge.

Senator Bingham will speak at 2 p. m. on "The Necessity of Maintaining a Vital Rural Life." This will be the main feature of the afternoon program, which also includes a baseball game between the "Benedicts" and the "Singletons."

The program will carry over to Sunday morning, when there will be an address on "The Ideal Commonwealth," as a look into the future social and religious life of the community. The meetings will close with a communion service conducted by the two ministers in the parish, Rev. Prof. William D. Barnes, of the Hartford Theological seminary, and Rev. Robert A. Clark.

Old Colonial Building

The Salem church building on the New London turnpike is an old landmark, a fine Colonial building with a square steeple, near the site of the Music Vale academy, the first real school of music in America, whose leaders were early associated with the life of the church. The congregation was organized in 1728 as the Second church of Colchester, becoming an independent organization on the petition of Lieut. James Harris, one of the first members. Its earlier history is meager or missing altogether. The records show that the first important revival was in 1792, when Rev. Edward Dorr Griffin, who was later president of Williams college, conducted a series of meetings covering a period of five months.

From 1817 the Missionary Society of Connecticut has had an interest in the church, having invested there about $14,000 since that time. The meeting house was rebuilt several times, the present building dating back to 1838.

Like many other Connecticut rural churches of generations ago, Salem church has lost the majority of its supporters in the last 100 years. Built originally in a community of nearly 1,000 people who were united in their religious beliefs, it now stands in a town of only 460 people, half of whom are new Americans. In 100 years its constituency has dropped from 1,020 people to less than 300.

An effort to increase religious activity in the community is now being made by an experiment being conducted by the Connecticut Missionary society and the Hartford Seminary foundation and Salem church has become part of the Mohegan Cooperative parish and is co-operating with another 200-year-old church, the Montville Center Congregational church, and the Pauquaug Baptist church, in an enterprise which seeks to serve as a laboratory to discover the facts of rural life in Connecticut, and to find methods by which the new conditions mentioned above can be met. A third object of the parish is to provide an opportunity for theological and sociological students to make a study of rural New England.

CONGREGATIONALISTS MAKE GAIN IN THIS STATE

The ranks of the Congregational church in Connecticut have increased about 13 per cent in the ten years from 1916 to 1926, according to the report of a survey of that church just completed by the census bureau of the commerce department at Wasnington.

The report shows that in the decade the number of Congregationalists in the state increased from 71,188 to 81,080 and the number of churches of the sect in the state decreased from 327 to 305. Of these churches 300 report that the value of their church buildings amounted to $14,963,745.

The Congregationalist ranks in the New England states number as follows: Massachusetts, 159,252; Maine, 22,330; Vermont, 20,195; New Hampshire, 20,346; Rhode Island, 10,435, according to the report.

TELEPHONE BULLETIN PAYS TRIBUTE TO R. H. GRAY

In tribute to the late Ruel H. Gray, New London district commercial superintendent of the Southern New England Telephone Co. whose death occurred July 2 last, the August issue of The Telephone Bulletin contains the following:

Ruel Gray is dead. Jolly companion, affable always, human and helpful to those who worked with him, staunch friend and possessed of those qualities which make a real man, whose acquaintance and friendship is sought by others—that was Ruel Gray.

In business he was conscientious, jealous of the company's good position in public esteem, ever thoughtful of the comfort and progress of his associates. He had seen many men and women enter the ranks; saw many drop out for reasons of their own, but he was always ready with a helping hand to aid and urge those who remained to do their best work. Also he was quick in a business way to reward merit in those whose supervisor he was and in the New London district where he was best known, he was respected for his fairness, had the confidence of his fellow workers and was admired for his good qualities.

For nearly 30 years Ruel Gray had been with our company. He had seen it grow from a toddling business infant to the indispensable utility it is today, serving everybody, even in the most remote corners of our state. When employes were counted in the small hundreds, when telephones were few and far between and not easy to sell, when equipment was crude, as we of today look at that matter, he was a telephone man and a telephone man he continued until the unexpected and saddening end.

Mr. Gray had been ill but a short time when the end came on July 2. He had really shown some improvement from his first serious attack, but a relapse occurred and despite the best medical attention he passed on.

It was in June, 1889, that Mr. Gray entered the telephone service as chief operator at Waterbury. A year later he was appointed assistant manager at Birmingham, which then was the name of the exchange now served by our Derby office. In 1892 he was appointed manager at New Britain, where he remained until May, 1910, when he was appointed district commercial manager with headquarters at Norwich. At that time Mr. Gray's duties were substantially the same as in more recent years when he had the title of district commercial superintendent by which he has been known since April, 1919.

During the 18 years he has been in charge of our commercial relations with the public in the eastern section of the state, he has made a host of friends for himself and for the business among those who are our patrons. In the business life of Norwich and New London he took an active and constructive part and his place in the community life of those cities was a large and important one. He was a member of the Harbor club of New London, a member of Centennial lodge, No. 118, A. F. & A. M., of New Britain, a member of community service clubs and associated himself with various public activities in which he was a leader whose advice and counsel was much sought and valued.

Mr. Gray's funeral was attended by a large number of his friends in and out of the telephone business. A large delegation from headquarters attended the services and practically all the larger offices in the state sent fellow workers to represent them in paying their respects to a man whom all liked and liked well.

Mr. Gray was born in Rutland, Vt., Jan. 30, 1862. He is survived by three sisters, who lived with him, and one brother, John E. Gray, of Torrington, who have the sincere sympathy in their bereavement of all telephone people.

WILL DEFER ANNOUNCEMENT ON VETERANS' HOSPITAL

Some delay is expected in the final choice of a site for the $2,000,000 United States veterans' hospital assigned to southern New England, according to William B. Goodwin, chairman of the Hartford chamber of commerce committee which like other bodies in the state has made suggestions regarding the site.

Mr. Goodwin talked with officials of the bureau at the dedication of the new federal hospital at Northport, L. I., last week, and there learned that a number of other projects of the bureau have a prior rating to the New England hospital, and pending final decisions on these matters there will likely be no announcement in connection with the institution which the Norwich chamber of commerce is seeking to bring near this city.

Mayor Batterson and Major T. J. Bannigan, regional director of the veterans' bureau in Connecticut were also guests with Mr. Goodwin at the dedication ceremonies in Northport.

Party For Fourteenth Birthday

An enjoyable party was held Monday evening at the home of Mr. and Mrs. J. B. Caron, on Union street, in honor of the 14th birthday of their son, John A. Caron. Games and music were enjoyed, after which dainty refreshments were served in the dining room, which was attractively decorated in pink and white. John received many useful and pretty gifts including a $10 gold piece.

Those present were Misses Bella Allard, Dorothy Bentley, of Providence, Alice Beausoliel, Helen Hogan, Dorothy Crawford, Anna Moran, Louise Sullivan, Eleanor Welch, Beatrice and Helen Drescher, Margaret McVeigh, Bertha Wallace, and John Caron, Jack Drescher, Albert Morin, Shorty Gilman, Henry Bamber, Russell Fensley, Harold Wallace, Anthony Kirker, Alfred Ravinelle, Cliff Hamil and Frank Powers.

GOOD OUTLOOK REPORTED FOR STATE PEACH CROP

Connecticut peaches will be more abundant this year than in 1927, it was said Wednesday.

An increase of more than 10 per cent, as compared with last year is expected.

There were no late frosts in the spring to kill the buds and the weather though cool, until very late, was not unfavorable. Neither have the "hot spells" like Saturday and Sunday had adverse effect on the growing fruit and caused it to drop, as it might had the peaches been at the picking stage.

A few Mayflowers and Greenboros, both clingstones, are being picked at various orchards in the state and affording some competition with the peaches from Georgia and the Carolinas, which are now the market leaders.

About August 20 the first ripenings of Carman peaches will be on the market, in competition with the Maryland and Deleware peaches.

After Carmans will come the Hileys.

These varieties fill the gap between the Mayflowers and Greenboros until the big main crop peaches ripen, which will be this year about September 20.

Then the peach lovers and housekeepers will have offerings of Belle of Georgia, J. H. Hale and Elberta peaches, the big yellow ones, which are just right for canning or eating at once.

Damp and wet weather will retard, if there is much of it, the ripening of all the varieties and of course high winds when the crop is about ready to harvest will make lots of "drops."

The crop last year was estimated to be about 165,000 of the standard size baskets, which approximate a half bushel capacity each.

But peaches are now sold in so many sizes of baskets from a quart up and so many small growers retail direct to housekeepers, of which no record is available, that it is very hard at the end of a season to estimate the total yield.

The year 1915 was the banner peach year in Connecticut with a harvest of 500,000 baskets.

Since then peach growing has fallen off in a large degree and there is no great annual planting of trees. With a good many orchards, however, giving a larger yield this year than last, there will be a substantial increase this year over 1927.

Premier North Stonington Corn

The large field of corn which belongs to R. Raymond Little on the Stonington road in North Stonington, is attracting attention as it is one of the best looking pieces of field corn in eastern Connecticut.

TUNNEY-LAUDER ENGAGEMENT IS OFFICIALLY ANNOUNCED BY MOTHER

SOUTH BRISTOL, Maine, Aug. 8—(AP)—Formal announcement of the engagement of Gene Tunney, retired heavyweight champion, to Miss Josephine Lauder, of Greenwich, Conn., was made here today by Mrs. George Lauder, Jr., mother of the girl.

The formal announcement followed rumors of the engagement that have been prevalent since the heavyweight titleholder defeated Tom Heney, New Zealand challenger, July 26 and a few days later announced his retirement from the ring. Tunney is visiting at the summer home of the Lauder family here.

The formal statement of the announcement of the engagement was as follows:

"Mrs. George Lauder, Jr., of Greenwich and New York, wishes to announce the engagement of her daughter, Mary Josephine Lauder, to Mr. Gene Tunney of New York. No date has been set for the wedding, which will likely take place in New York in the late autumn or winter."

The telegram announcing the engagement said Miss Mary Josephine Lauder is the daughter of Mrs. George Lauder, Jr., and the late George Lauder, Jr., of Pittsburgh and Greenwich. She is the granddaughter of the late George Lauder of Pittsburgh, whose wife was Miss Anna Roamine Varick of New York. On her maternal side, Miss Lauder is the granddaughter of Roger Rowland of Greenwich, whose wife was Miss Maria Townsend Durfee of Buffalo, N. Y. Miss Lauder was graduated in 1926 from Lenox school, New York, and has taken a post-graduate course for the last two years at Finch school, New York, and Versailles, France. Mr. Tunney is the son of Mrs. Mary Lydon Tunney and the late Joseph Tunney, both of whom were born in Ireland.

By his engagement to Miss Lauder the former shipping clerk who fought his way to world fame in the boxing arena becomes allied with a family in the forefront on American society and wealth.

Both his future mother-in-law and his bride-to-be are listed in the social register. Miss Lauder's father, a yachtsman of note, died several years ago. He inherited the fortune of his father, George Lauder, a kinsman of Andrew Carnegie and one of the founders of the steel company that laid the foundation of the Carnegie wealth.

Miss Lauder, whose full name is Mary Josephine Rowland Lauder, (her mother was Katherine M. Rowland before her marriage) is 21 years old, nine years younger than the retired heavyweight champion. She is a graduate of the Fashionable Finch school for girls and is a member of the Junior league of both New York city and Greenwich.

It was not generally known at just what point in Tunney's climb from obscurity up the ladder of fistic fame he first met the society girl who was later to become his wife. Some reports had it that they had been secretly engaged for a year prior to the formal announcement today. But whatever the facts are it was believed that their friendship dated back at least to the time of Tunney's last fight with Jack Dempsey.

After that fight Tunney, as the victor was called to the microphone to speak a few words to the radio audience, inclosed his remarks by sending greetings to "everybody and especially to my friends in Greenwich, Conn." Many of those who heard him believed that the champion had meant to say Greenwich Village, the district in Manhattan where he was reared. It was not until some time later that it was learned the champion made frequent visits to Greenwich and that he had finally purchased a home there.

Miss Lauder is an Episcopalian and Tunney is a Catholic. Persons close to the Lauder family said tonight that before the engagement was announced all complications which might arise from this difference in faith had been fully taken care of. When a Catholic, either man or woman, wishes to marry a non-Catholic a special dispensation must be obtained from the Catholic church. This is usually forthcoming without my difficulty; but as a rule only on the agreement of both man and woman that any children there may be will be brought up in the Catholic faith.

Tunney's engagement is the second romance affecting the principals in the last world championship boxing bout. Last week Tom Heaney, Tunney's unsuccessful challenger, was married. The romances of both fighters were featured by considerable mystery. Rumors of Tunney's engagement began long before formal announcement and Heeney's marriage came almost as a complete surprise. Both men sought to conduct their affairs of the heart out of the limelight cast on them because of their fistic prowess.

The announcement by Mrs. Lauder set at rest rumors that the retired champion would be married during the European trip on which he is to set forth shortly. In Europe he is to meet Thornton Wilder, teacher and author, with whom he is to take a walking trip. Before the formal announcement rumor had it that he was planning to be married abroad at the conclusion of this walking tour.

It was noticed that in the formal announcement Mrs. Lauder used the name by which Tunney is known in the ring and among his friends, Gene, and not his real name, James Joseph Tunney.

ALBANY BEATS YANKEES IN EXHIBITION GAME

ALBANY, N. Y., ug. 8—(AP)—Albany of the Eastern league defeated the New York Yankees, 4 to 2, here today, after holding the visitors scoreless until the eighth. Babe Ruth's longest hit in the game was a two bagger. Albany scored three runs in the first. The Yankees tied the score with a run in the eighth and two in the ninth. Kahn of Albany, hit over Pascual's head in the ninth to score Byrd with the bases full.

Colorful Garb for B. C. Gridders

BOSTON, Aug. 8—(AP)—The Boston college football eleven will be one of the most colorful teams, as far as uniforms are concerned, on the gridiron this fall.

Head Coach Joe McKenny, has discarded the old and somber maroon and gold color scheme and plans to deck his charges out in gold colored jerseys with maroon shoulders, gold stockings with a narrow maroon stripe and maroon helmets.

MANCHESTER, N. H., Aug. 8—(AP)—J. D. Standish, of Detroit, won the qualifying round in the Vermont open golf championship on the Equinox Links club course here today. His score was 81.

BRAVES HANG DOUBLE DEFEAT ONTO REDS

BOSTON, Aug. 8—(AP)—Boston increased Cincinnati's losing streak to eight in a row here today when the Braves took both ends of a double header, winning the first game 6 to 3 and the second, 12 to 1. Delaney and R. Smith pitched admirably for Boston.

In the first game Everett Purdy crashed into the right field pavilion wall and became unconscious. He was chasing a long drive off Sisler's bat. He did not regain consciousness for five minutes and was removed from the field where he was placed under observation for possible head injuries.

The hitting and fielding of Sisler featured both games.

After extending his consecutive-game hitting streak to twenty-four in the opener for a new season's record, Hugh Critz failed to get a safety in the second clash. Cincinnati made five double plays in the two games, running its total for the season to 136.

GIANTS PICK UP ONE MORE GAME ON CARDS

NEW YORK, Aug. 8—(AP)—The Giants made it two out of three from the leading Cardinals here today, winning the last game of the series, 10 to 5. The victory gave the Giants an eight to seven edge over the Cards in games for the season, and reduced the St. Louis margin to four and one-half contests.

The home team piled up an early lead of ten runs, knocking out both Willie Sherdel and Harold Haid. Travis Jackson and Bill Terry each hit a homer with a man on base, while six hits were bunched for as many runs in the fourth.

St. Louis fought back gamely, routing Joe Genewich with three runs in the sixth. The Cardinal attack was continued against Bill Walker and the total runs for the inning extended to four before Viv Aldridge entered the box to halt the visitors. Score:

PHILLIES MAKE CLEAN SWEEP OF CUB SERIES

PHILADELPHIA, Aug. 8—(AP)—The Phillies made a clean sweep of the series from the Chicago Cubs by winning the final game this afternoon, 4 to 3. A rally in the eighth tied the score for the tallenders and Lerian's sacrifice fly to Stephenson with the bases filled in the ninth decided the game.

Chuck Klein, the Phillies new right fielder, hit a homer with one on in the first. Garby Hartnett hit a home run for Chicago in the third inning.

Elwood English, Chicago shortstop, injured his leg in trying to stretch a single into a double in the first inning and was carried off the field. Score:

PIZZO'S DOUBLE WINS FOR JEWETT CITY LEGION

Pizzo's double with Bernal on second, enabled Jewett City to nose out the Y. M. C. A. in the sixth inning of Wednesday night's Junior Twilight league game, 6 to 5. With two out and the count up to two strikes on Pizzo, the Jewett City catcher crashed the next offering of Greene for a clean double to left and put an end to a fast and interesting game between these two teams.

The "Y" got the jump on the Jewett City boys, piling up a four-run lead in the first four innings, but a strong drive in the closing innings by Jewett City closed the gap, the latter finally winning by the margin of one run. The pitching honors were shared about evenly, Greene on the mound for the "Y" allowing eight hits, while Bernal, the opposing twirler, was touched for six. All of the hits off Greene, however, were made in the last three frames, the Jewett City boys being unable to do a thing with Greene's offerings up to the fourth inning.

In the first frame, the "Y" counted twice without making a hit, errors by Walkowski and two by Bozo, together with a walk to Orsulak, accounting for the scoring. In the fourth, the "Y" added two more, on singles by Serafin and Sadinsky, Gaska making an error on Sadinsky's hit, letting the ball get past him, which allowed Sadinsky to make the circuit.

Going into the fourth, things looked bad for the Legionnaires, but a strong batting rally changed the entire complexion of affairs. With one out, Beaulieu singled to right. Salinsky lifted a high fly to Holden and when the latter dropped the ball, Beaulieu took second and Salinsky was safe on first. Bush walked, filling the bases. Walkowski shot a single to right, scoring Beaulieau and Salinsky, and sending Bush to third. Bernal hit to Serafin at third and when the latter elected to try to cut off Bush at the plate, Bush scored and Walkowski went to third. Bozo kept up the attack with a single to right, scoring Walkowski, but when Bernal also tried to cross the plate on the play he was caught, Dierman to Sadinsky. Gaska then ended the inning by fanning.

After the Y. M. C. A. had gone scoreless in their half of the fifth, Jewett City went into the lead for the first time by scoring a run on singles by Perry, Beaulieau and Salinsky.

The "Y" still showed plenty of fight, however, and with two out in the sixth proceeded to tie things up again. Sadinsky was safe when Bush bonted his grounder, Orsulak then hit a long double to right field, Sadinsky scoring. Orsulak was caught a moment later, however, when he tried to steal third.

In Jewett City's half of the final inning, Bernal singled for a starter, advanced to second on Bozo's infield out and after Vachon had flied out scored on Pizzo's hit.

Beaulieau, the league's leading hitter, increased his average by making two hits out of two times at bat for a 1.000 average.

Tonight's Game

With the Duwell field being put in readiness for the amateur boxing show, the game between the Duwells and the Elks in the Junior circuit will be played at Hollyhock Island tonight.

The Duwells, present tail-enders in the league, showed strong signs of changing their habits in their game with the strong Rotary club last week, the Rotary barely winning by the close score of 6 to 5. The cellar tenants claim that they have lost their last game and they will have a good chance to prove it against the Elks in tonight's game, as the Elks lost a tough one to the Rotary Tuesday night and are out to get back into the win column again.

Both teams will probably use the same lineups as in previous games, with Jenks and Montia the battery for the Duwells and Reardon or Fuller and Bamber or McGuinness on the firing line for the Elks.

A Challenge

The Blue Eagles would like to challenge the Elks' Junior team for a game to be played Saturday afternoon at 2:30 at the Hollyhock Island grounds. If challenge is accepted please answer through this paper.

THREE AMERICAN BOATS REACH FINALS IN OLYMPIC ROWING

By FRANK H. KENG
Associated Press Sports Writer

SLOTEN, Holland, Aug. 8—(AP)—In a series of desperate races some marked by thrilling finishes, three boatloads of United States oarsmen today forced into the final round of the Olympic rowing regatta. A fourth reached the semi-finals in its class and a fifth was eliminated.

The three American entries which have only one more opponent to beat to win championships are the University of California eight, the only surviving U. S. quart which is not a product of Philadelphia's "boathouse row," and the Penn Barge club four, both of which had narrow escapes today, and Ken Myers, the single sculling representative.

Paul Costello and Charley McIlvaine reached the semi-finals in double sculling while the only American defeat of the day in five starts put the pair without coxswain comprising John Schmitt and Paul McDowell out of the running.

California's eight shot across the finish a scant half length ahead of the Canadian Argonauts and will battle the English crew from the Thames Rowing club for the title on Friday when all the finals will be rowed.

The Penn Barge club four without coxswain barely overhauled the speedy Italians from the Vittorino Da Feltre club of Piacenza on the Po, the Americans winning in a terrific final spurt. All of the Italians collapsed in their shell as they attempted to answer the challenge and the Americans swept ahead a hundred meters from the finish to win by a length. Here also there will be an Anglo-American final as the other survivor is the English four from Trinity college, Cambridge, but this crew and the English eight had rowovers today having drawn semi-final round byes.

In comparison with these hard-fought races, McIlvaine and Costello won easily in their race with the pair from Switzerland, finishing with a margin of four lengths and having the situation well under control all the way. Myers won from the Dutchman, Gunther, by two lengths, Bobby Pearce of Australia will be his final round opponent and will be the favorite. The defeat and elimination of McDowell and Schmitt was achieved by a couple of brawny Germans. Kurt Moeschter and Bruno Muller, of the Hellas Rowing club, Berlin, who won by two lengths.

As the double sculling class is the only one in which the field is not narrowed down to the finals, tomorrow's only race will be in that division. Finalists in the six other classes will have a day's respite before the championship events of Friday. The American double scullers must row Australia tomorrow while Canada, the other contender drew a bye.

There are seven divisions in all and the United States at this stage has a chance for championships in four of them, the only Yankee crews which have been eliminated being the four with coxswain and pairs with and without coxswain.

Chief interest of course centers around the eight-oared and single sculling championships in both of which the Americans will be faced with the strongest of opposition.

KAPLAN-FLOWERS BOUT LOOMS AS GOOD FIGHT

HARTFORD, Aug. 8—The ten round lightweight battle between Kid Kaplan of Meriden and Bruce Flowers, speedy colored boy, which headlines the boxing show to be held Friday night at the Hartford Eastern league baseball park, shapes as a great scrap.

Both Flowers, who arrived in Hartford Wednesday, and Kaplan, who has been hard at work for the past two weeks at his camp on Silver lake, are in fine shape. Flowers today will wind up his training at the Charter Oak gym here and Kaplan will have his final workout at the lake.

Friday afternoon the two will weigh in at Hartford with State Commissioner Thomas E. Donohue looking on.

Kaplan expects to tip the scales at 133; he slipped below 136 early in the week and has been gradually scaling toward 133, which is his best fighting weight.

There have been scores of callers this week at the Kaplan camp, where nearly a dozen of Dinny McMahon's stable are working out, and everyone has been impressed, not only by Kaplan's condition but by the snap and dash he has shown in his sparring sessions.

He seems once more like the Kaplan of old; the Kaplan who battered his way to a world's title and who was so long a familiar picture as he danced in his corner before a fight and between rounds impatient for the bell to call him to action.

Left hooks will play a leading part in this battle. The left hook is Flowers' chief weapon and Kaplan makes liberal use of the same blow, though in his training workout he has been supplementing it with a stiff right cross.

Thirty-eight rounds will make up the evening's card. Frankie O'Brien, hard-hitting Hartford southpaw, meets Frankie Kenchina of New York in the eight-round semi-final. Jimmy Clinch of New Britain clashes with Johnny Ciccone of New Haven in a six-rounder and Eddie Phister of New York meets Tommy Hamby of Holyoke in another six. Two four-rounders will open the show. The first bout is set for 8:15.

PIRATES CLOSE EASTERN TRIP WITH A VICTORY

BROOKLYN, N. Y., Aug. 8—(AP)—The Pirates finished their second eastern invasion here today by defeating the Robins, 4 to 3, to clean up the three-game series and run the Pittsburgh string to seven straight. All three Pirate victories here were by one-run margins.

Ray Kremer not only held Brooklyn to eight hits, but collected two of the twelve Pittsburgh safeties and a sacrifice fly, driving in two runs. Kremer was steady throughout and brilliant in the pinches. The home team used three pitchers, McWeeney, Elliott and Petty. Score:

VIC DARR WINS BOUT FROM METCALF AT WESTERLY

Vic Darr, local lightweight made such an impressive showing at the new talent show at Westerly last night when he won the decision over young Metcalf, that he has been signed to appear on the Arena A. C. card at London next week. Darr will fight a boy from the Coast Guard academy. Mush Moriarty has also been signed for a bout.

IRONMEN TAKE ONE-SIDED GAME FROM INSILCOS

The leading Richmond Radiators clouted their way to an easy 10 to 1 over the Insilcos Wednesday night at the Academy in the Industrial league, stopping the Silvers' determined spurt of the last few weeks and giving the Ironmen a game and a half lead over the second-place Bleachery outfit.

Lloyd Jarvis led the champs with the stick, getting a triple, double and single in four attempts, while Bargness had three singles in four trips to the plate. Jarvis hit the fire escape with his triple but slipped rounding second and just made third, to score on a wild throw.

The Richmonds badly handled two pitchers, Jerry Lamphere and Leo Jarvis. Lamphere retired in the third after he had forced in a run but Jarvis could not stem the tide and eight runs came over the plate in the stanza. Lamphere then went back in and finished the game.

The Ironmen scored one in the second for the lead, to which they added the eight in the third and one in the sixth. The Insilcos' only run came in the fourth.

Hereafter games are scheduled to start at 6:15 in this league, according to the recreation commission.

Gil Kampf featured afield with several nice stops and throws.

Jarvis' triple was regarded as one of the longest drives seen on the campus in many a moon. It hit the fire escape close to the top at the door leading out of the side of the third story.

Tonight's Game

The Thermos and Y. M. C. A. battle in this evening's Industrial league tilt at the Academy campus with the tenancy of third place for the week-end the main problem to be settled. With the the Insilcos' loss last night, third place in the race is now but a double tie, with the teams to clash tonight in the feature roles.

Johnny Greene and Lefty Lucier will in all probability be the opposing hurlers. The game starts at 6:30 o'clock. Tomorrow night the Bleachery outfit meets the Polish Citizens' club in an important game.

PETE DES JARDINES WINS OLYMPIC DIVING TITLE

By THOMAS T. TOPPING
(Associated Press Sports Writer)

AMSTERDAM, Aug. 8—(AP)—American springboard divers nearly swept the board clean today when Pete Des Jardines won the championship with a score of 185.04 with Michael Galitzen, scoring 174.06, second. Samaika of Egypt displaced Harold Smith on the last two dives or the United States would have finished one-two-three. Samaika compiled a score of 172.46 to 168.96 for Smith.

The girl swimmers fared rather poorly in the breast stroke semi-finals, Agnes Geraghty and Jane Faunts being eliminated. Gertrude Hoffman is the only American girl left in the competition, and her hope in the finals is somewhat slim.

The American men swimmers, Clarence Crabbe, Austin Clapp and Raymond Ruddy, all qualified for the finals. Here they will meet Arne Borg of Sweden and Charlton of Australia. Borg seems to have the championship cinched.

The 100 meters backstroke championship, however, should go to either George Kojac or Walter Laufer and the United States is regarded as certain winner of 15 Olympic points here with Paul Wyatt likely to help along the cause with some more.

Japan scored its first Olympic victory in the water when Tsuji defeated Rademacher of Germany, world's record holder, in the 200 meters breastroke competition. The United States was not represented in the semi-finals of this event.

The United States water polo outfit has an outside chance to win third place. Malta was defeated 10 to 0 today. Germany won the championship from Hungary 5 to 3 after two extra periods. Hungary was a 3 to 1 favorite.

VELVETMEN HAVE TWO HARD GAMES THIS WEEK

For the week-end the Velvetmen have two hard battles on their schedule. On Saturday the J. B. Martin nine travels to Worcester, to be the guests of the Crompton & Knowles club. This will be the first time this season these two clubs cross bats and as usual a close game is expected. The Velvetmen will leave Saturday morning about eight o'clock and a royal bunch of rooters will follow them on their trip.

For Sunday's attraction the manager has booked the fast Elm City Giants of New Haven. This club needs no introduction to the fans in this territory having played here in the past seasons and making a wonderful record for themselves. For the Giants "Little Ol"

BUILDING OPERATIONS IN NORWICH

The month of July set the record for the year in local building as to the value of the new construction outlined in the 28 permits issued at the office of Fire Marshal Howard L. Stanton. The estimated cost of construction is $201,405, which is by far the largest of any of the previous months of 1928. During July, 28 permits were granted for the following work:

New frame houses	2
New frame garages	5
New frame henhouses	2
New frame filling station	1
New brick and stucco house	1
New brick buildings	4
Alterations to frame buildings	11
Alterations to brick buildings	1

During the past week considerable progress has been made on local building projects, the largest of which is the new Masonic temple at the corner of Washington and Sachem streets. Here the steel work has been completed and the work of erecting the tile and brick walls is going on. The rear wall is well up, as are the two side walls. The granite trim in the front of the structure is also being set in place.

At the office of the fire marshal seven permits for new construction work were granted, and in the number is a new house to be erected on Joseph Perkins road for M. Rosoff. Four applications for permits were filed at the office, and these include two new frame houses to be erected on Asylum street by Mr. Monty. The permits issued are as follows:

To P. F. Sweeney, to alter present front of building at 260 Franklin street to a six-car garage for A. Lmbert. The building will be reinforced by brick piers and steel girders. The cost is $600.

To P. F. Sweeney, to alter brick building at 142 Main street for Max Rabinovitch. The front of the building will be remodeled and a new plate glass and copper front installed. Steel girders will be used to reinforce the building. The cost will be approximately $3,000.

To P. F. Sweeney, to erect a frame garage on Joseph Perkins road 18x19 feet for Mr. Rosoff. The foundation will be o concrete as will the floor. The cost is $500.

To P. F. Sweeney, to erect a brick and stucco house on Joseph Perkins road for M. Rosoff. The building will be 28x35 feet, with a sun porch 9x25 feet. The foundation will be of stone with brick underpinning. The exterior will be in stucco, brick and composition shingles. The interior will be in hard finis. plaster and oak floors. The cost is estimated at $7,450.

To Archibald Torrence, to alter frame house at 232 Franklin street for A. Collett. The alterations include moving the outside stairs and changing the floor plan of the interior. The estimated cost is $900.

To Valentine Reich, to add a frame piazza to the present house on Fowler avenue for Frank Romaa. The estimated cost is $150.

To Plassmann and Dubreuil of Plainfield, to build a frame garage on Hamilton avenue 20x25 feet for Frank Collins. The cost is estimated at $600.

REAL ESTATE SALES AND MOREGAGE LOANS

In Norwich during the past week there were eight sales of real estate as compared to five sales for the corresponding week in 1927. The mortgage loans for the respective weeks were $23, 407 and $53,477.

There was but one real estate sale in New London during the past week as compared to nine sales for the same week a year ago. The mortgage loans for the respective weeks were $21,207 and $96,410.

New London

Applications for permission to build dwelling houses in this city have not been filed in great numbers recently in the office of Building Inspector William Gunn, Jr., in the municipal building here. In fact, the drop in applications, compared to those which were received in the spring and were subsequently granted by council, has been great. The building boom of the spring appears to have petered out, in respect to erection of dwelling houses.

Most of the local contractors, however, are active. Many of them are engaged in finishing-up dwelling houses, construction of which was started in the spring. Others report that they are not working on any new house construction at the present time but say that there is considerable jobbing work being done. It is believed that there will be sufficient reconstruction, repairs and alteration work together with new construction that will be started, to keep local carpenters working during the summer and fall months.

Washington street will soon be the scene fo father extensive building operations, for the New London lodge of Elks is to tear down the frame fronted structure of its building there and replace it with a modern structure of brick. The general contract work is expected to be awarded soon to the local firm of Thomas Occhialini, which submitted the lowest bid for the work.

A 20 by 28 feet cottage with all modern arrangements is being built by Contractor Anthony DeGanze in Beckwith street for Morris Mallove and Harry Sharaf. A feature of the cottage will be a step-saving kitchen. The house will also contain an open fireplace.

The two-family house in Crystal avenue which has been erected for for occupancy. The upper part of the Elmer Kennerson will soon be ready house is shingled and the lower part is clapboarded. Two large varandas add to the attractiveness of the dwelling.

Pointing of the stone in the north wall of the First Church of Christ in State street was done this week, mortar, which had become loosened, being replaced.

Applications for Building Permits

A. J. Edgar, addition, 334 Vauxhall street, $1,200.

Crown Operating Co., theatre alterations, State street, $1,000.

Josephine H. Aietti, residemnce, 46 Summit avenue, $9 000.

Standard Oil Co., service station, corner Blackhall and Truman streets, $3,000.

E. A. Henkle, garage and tenement alterations, 108 Lower Boulevard, $2,000.

John Byrkman, garage, 167 Vauxhall street, $600.

J. N. Mathewson, install dining car, $10,000.

New England Billiard Locker Co., alterations, corner State and Bank streets, $2,500.

E. A. Henkle, frame and stucco garage, lenwood avenue, $1,000.

Louis Margolis, dormer windows, 31 Warner street, $500.

E. J. Fakourey, open air arena, Hamilton street, $2,100.

Number of permits for the week, 11; estimated cost of buildings, $32,900.

SOMERS

During the very heavy thunder storm Sunday afternoon the barn of Judge and Mrs. Ernest S. Fuller was struck by lightning and completely destroyed. Practically the only things saved were a horse and automobile in the barn. Judge Fuller and family were away from home for a few hours. Those who were early on the scene worked hard to save the house which was near by. The paint is blackened and blistered, but the heavy rain and vigorous work done by those present saved it from burning.

A few rods back of the one burned is another barn which is valued at between thirty and forty thousand dollars. This barn has been used but little of late years but will now be used in place of the smaller one nearer the house. The barn was worth about $15,000 and contained much expensive machinery which was all lost. It was a well equipped barn for horses, cows and a large garage. In the same shower two trees were struck on Main street, one in front of John Hunt's and one near Roland Ellis.

Next Sunday Rev. Leir Rees of Stafford Springs will preach in the local church in exchange with the pastor, Rev. Edwin Thomas Jones.

HAD PIMPLES FOR TWO YEARS
Disfigured Affected Parts. Cuticura Healed.
"I had pimples for two years. My face and back were affected with them. They were very hard, large and red, disfiguring the affected parts. The pimples were so itchy that they caused me to scratch, and scratching caused eruptions.
"I tried many remedies but my attempts were in vain. I began using Cuticura Soap and Ointment and got relief. I continued using them and six weeks later my skin was healed, after using two boxes of Cuticura Ointment, together with the Cuticura Soap." POETRY

The Dancing Faun

Thou dancer of two thousand years,
Thou dancer of today,
What silent music fills thine ears,
What Bacchic lay,
That thou shouldst dance the centuries
Down their forgotten way?

What mystic strain of pagan mirth
Has charmed eternally
Those lithe, strong limbs, that spurn the earth?
Wha melody,
Unheard of men, has Father Pan

Ah! where is now the wanton throng
That round thee used to meet?
On dead lips died the drinking song,
But wild and sweet,
What silent music urged thee on,
To its unuttered beat.

That when at last Time's weary will
Brought thee again to sight,
Thou cam'st forth dancing, dancing still
Into th light
Unwearied from the murk and dusk
Of centuries of night?

Alas for thee!—Alas, again,
The early faith is gone!
The gods are no more seen of men,
Ah, all are gone—
The shaggy forests no more shield
The Satyr and the Faun.

On Attic slopes the bee still hums,
On many an Elian hill
The wild grape swells, but never comes
The distant trill
Of reedy flutes; for Pan is dead,
Broken his pipes and still.

And yet within thy listening ears
The pagan measures ring—
Those limbs that have outdanced the years
Yet tireless spring:
How canst thou dream Pan dead when still Thou seem'st to hear him sing!

—Robert Cameron Rogers.

The Best

I should be glad if you might have
All things for which you yearn;
That some strong power might hold back
The ill that you would spurn;
That only lovely things might greet
Your eyes at every turn.

But oh, I know, 'twould not be well
That ills were never met;
That life should always be serene,
With never care to fret;
We need some trials to grow strong—
Some grief—"lest we forget."

So we will leave it all with God
To give us what is best,
Since, if we love Him, all is well,
And we may have true rest,
And He will make "all things" work right,
His love to manifest.

—Mrs. Frank A. Breck, in Portland Oregonian.

On the Baptist church at Stonington, Conn., there is a steeple clock with four faces, and every one of these faces has three hands, not two. The reason for this is that Connecticut is officially on standard time, but the citizens of Stonington favor daylight saving, hence two black hands point to standard time on each face of the clock and a red hand points to daylight saving time.

Among the statistics concerning the Holland tunnel, New York city, which has been in operation six months, are these: The total number of vehicles using the tunnel the first six months is about 8,655,000. The average daily traffic for April was in excess of 23,000 vehicles. Police supplied 397 motorists with gasoline when their tanks went dry in the tunnel. Vehicles which broke down and had to be towed out of one of the tubes numbered 737.

William Connor's automobile had been standing idle in his open garage at Gilmer, Tex., for several days. When he lifted the hood to look at the engine he discovered a bluebird's nest concealed there. In it were two eggs. The mother bird hovered around while Connor was investigating. She showed such solicitude over the situation that he decided to allow the bird the exclusive use of the car until her eggs hatch and the offspring are big enough to leave the nest.

Big predatory locusts that prey on their own fellow insects instead of on growing grain crops are being tried in Greece as one means of combating the pest of ordinary locusts now threatening the fields, according to word received from Athens. These modern descendants of one of the plagues of Egypt have been causing serious losses to Greek agriculture during the last few years and the ministry of agriculture is preparing to spend 16,000,000 drachmas (approximately $8,200,000) in a campaign against them.

WESTERLY

AUTO DRIVER ORDERED TO TRIAL FRIDAY

(Special to The Bulletin)

WESTERLY, Aug. 8—Following the detention of Manuel Barrados, operator without license of a Ford coupe, and Joseph Armoran, occupant, both of 6 Minor street, when they were taken into custody on Tuesday night by Lieutenant George H. Champlin after passing a red traffic light in Dixon square, both were released to return to their homes on Wednesday morning. The former was given a summons to return to Westerly for trial Friday morning in the regular session of the Third District court before Judge Oliver H. Williams.

George McKinley of Pawcatuck, apprehended the past week end by Motorcycle Police Officer George L. Madson, has also been summoned into next Friday morning's court session for the operation of a Massachusetts automobile in Westerly when his Rhode Island operator's license has been suspended.

The program of cement sidewalk construction in Pawcatuck is progressing favorably. The new walk along the west side of Lester avenue is practically completed. There remains only a short stretch near the corner of West Broad street that has not hardened sufficiently for use.

Workmen are now engaged in excavating along the east side of Prospect street preparatory to laying a walk there. Employes of the Westerly Water Works have done considerable work such as relaying of pipes on this street during the past few days and employes of the South County Public Service company are engaged in erecting new poles to replace the ones that have long stood there.

The sidewalk construction program of the Pawcatuck fire district also calls for the laying of new cement walks on Liberty, West Broad, Morgan, Chase and William streets.

Much interest was shown on Tuesday evening in the program of entertainment consisting of a group of songs by Frank G. Moloney, baritone soloist at Station WLWL, New York city, a lecture by James Moultrie of New York city on clean moving pictures and the showing of an entertaining comedy-drama, "Drusilla with a Million," was presented in the auditorium of the Immaculate Conception parochial school.

The same program was presented on Monday evening at Roseland Casino, Pleasant View. The proceeds from the entertainments will go to St Clair's chapel at Pleasant View and the Church of the Immaculate Conception here.

WEDDING

Barrett-Borges

On Saturday in Westerly occurred the wedding of John Paul Barker Barrett, U. S. A., of Crescent Beach, Ct., and Miss Marguerite Adelaide Borges, secretary, of Waterford and daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Frank E. Borges of New London, formerly of Norwich. The ceremony was performed by Rev. G. Edgar Tobin, rector of Christ Episcopal church and the couple were unattended.

Recorded in the office of the town clerk appears the following transfers:

Aug. 7—Frank G. Ahern to Nicholas Craddock tract of land, Lot No. 85 on the westerly side of Maplewood avenue.

Aug. 7—Carrie D. Davis of Mystic, Henry D. eKnyon and Edith M. Smith of Pawcatuck, John H. Kenyon of Hopkinton to Maria K. Foster of Richmond, R. I., a certain lot or tract of land with dwelling house and improvements on highway leadings from Westerly to Potter Hill, R. I., and adjoining lands of F. R. Savage and wife and John Ojala and wife.

In two automobile parties headed by Hon. Henry A. Stahle and Judge Alberti R. Stillman, the committee of the Pawcatuck fire district on the building and equipping of the new Pawcatuck fire station being completed near the Pawcatuck court house on Liberty street left Westerly early Wednesday afternoon for Walpole, Mass. The committee has recently signed a contract for a city service fire truck with ladders and equipment and a 750 gallon triple combination motor fire truck with 85 gallon booster tank and 1200 feet hose wagon, both made by the Ahrens-Fox company and purchased through Harry Carlow, agent, of Taunton, Mass. Other members of the committee making the trip were Fire Chief Francis J. McMahon, James H. McKenzie, Nola Morse, Joseph J. Purtill, Lawrence Purtill and Pierce Morrison.

NOANK

A new way to get round clams was found out by H. Bracci and Jerry Martin over at the iron bridge near Crane dock and the new stunt is diving under the water and digging with their hands and coming up with the round clams. Spending 2 hours Tuesday afternoon they got the clams under water. Something happened and went down. He found him working hard on a clam. Soon he got it out of the mud and taking it to shore and getting his wind he told about it. I thought it was a rock and how it was stuck in the mud! There's enough in that clam to make 2 clam chowders for a family of 5. Then counting up the clams, found Martin with 200, and H. Bracci with 190, making 390 clams for the afternoon. Taking the monster clam to Mrs Jane Carson's store, and putting it on the scale, it weighed 2 lbs. 7 ounces, with a shell that was 5 1-2 inches across it and 1-4 inch thick. Gordon Mahan held the record with a 2 lb. clam and now H. Bracci is the champion of the fishing village for getting the largest clam. He will keep the shell for a while and will send it to his uncle, Fred Burr in Iowa.

The regular dance was held in the casino at Groton Long Point recently, and a large crowd of dance fans came to hear Ted Moore's Society orchestra of Norwich. It was the coolest place on the point. A Virginia Reel was put on with Prof. Jake Mahan of Boston calling off. The young and the old enjoyed themselves for an hour. A new dance was put on by Floor Manager Louise Roth and it was called Squat and some one would holler "squat" and the ones that were standing had to leave the floor. The last couple left on the floor won a prize. The dance fans that were looking on had a great time and it was an evening well spent.

A biker George Littleton of Indiana passed through the village on Tuesday afternoon and stopped at the waiting room for a short rest. He had a pack on his back and it read doing this walk on a bet, not to ride in automobiles but walk all the way. The goal that he wants to reach is Cape Cod, Mass. Already I have worn out 4 pairs of shoes and still have two more pair to make the trip he said. If I do it O. K. it means $500 to me. It has taken me 8 days so far. I had to shake it up a little to get through the cities. I passed many autos that wanted to give me a lift but I said "No" with a smile. I have to get a paper signed in each city and town that I go through and the Mayor Billie O'Brien put his John Henry on the paper. When I reach Cape Cod I will write to the Saturday club and tell them about it. After a long rest for 2 hours and smelling the salt water air he hated to leave the village.

Regular meeting of the Fire Co. was held at their rooms on Cedar street Tuesday evening with Foreman Walter Palmer in the chair and 20 smoke eaters were present. It was voted to send one fireman to get the news from the firemen's convention and he will be picked later. Now the dues are due and they are coming in slow. A short talk about the new siren fund was told by Chief Park. It looks that the fishing village will have to stand by the church bell for a fire alarm. Money is coming in slow and several people said that they could hear the bell better than the siren.

STONINGTON

MYSTIC YOUTH CHARGED WITH RECKLESS DRIVING

(Special to The Bulletin.)

STONINGTON, Aug. 8.—In the Stonington town court on Tuesday morning, Ralph Fee, age 19, of Mystic, was arraigned before Judge William A. Wolcox on a charge of reckless driving. Harry Schaffeur of Mystic was appointed guardian. He entered a plea of not guilty. Fee was arrested as the result of an accident on Monday when he struck Miss Sadie Corey of No. 10 Church street, who had just alighted from a bus, rendering her unconscious. Fee asked that his case be continued for two weeks pending the outcome of injuries sustained by Miss Corey. Judge Wilcox granted the request and bonds of $200 were furnished by the youth's father, Henry Fee, of Mystic.

Henry Campbell of Providence was charged with speeding. He was represented by Attorney Robert Brown, who waived the reading of the complaint and entered a demurrer which was overruled. Judge Wilcox imposed a fine of $10 and costs. He paid.

The plane from the Stonington Airways, Inc., is now making daily flights from Saunders field at Pleasant View, while their field is under construction at Stonington.

Makes a place to play on a Rainy day...

CHILDREN know the joys of a gas-heated home—that extra place in a clean basement, especially fitted out for them, where nobody cares if they muss things up.

Gas is the scientific, modern heat for a new-day home. It assures constant, trouble-free comfort. You set the indicator "upstairs"—gas does the rest—automatically provides just the noiseless, odorless, healthful heat you want, day or night.

And what a pleasure it is to know no more the drudgery of furnace tending, barrel juggling . . . and clouds of settling, sifting, contaminating dust. Gas heat is clean.

No matter what your present heat may be, if it isn't gas, investigate the new and better way—now, before winter comes.

Call on your gas company for demonstrations of house heating, cooking, water heating, refrigeration, incineration and other uses for GAS—THE BETTER FUEL.

For the information of the people of New England a series of messages, of which this is one, is being published by the gas industry of New England . . . They contain interesting facts about GAS—THE BETTER FUEL—and its importance in your home and business

Chatterer Is in Trouble

Trouble meets you full half-way,
Coming all prepared to stay.
—Chatterer the Red Squirrel.

Chatterer the Red Squirrel was in trouble. He was in great trouble. At least, he thought he was. He had discovered that Shadow the Weasel was following him. Now, there is no one in all the Great World whom Chatterer fears as he does Shadow the Weasel. His other enemies he can get away from by hiding, but he cannot get away from Shadow the Weasel by hiding, for Shadow is so small that he can go wherever Chatterer can go.

He saw Mrs. Paddy climb out on the house

"It's all my own fault," thought Chatterer. "I don't know why I came 'way over here anyway. I just felt like roaming. If I had remained at home where I belonged I wouldn't have been in this trouble."

All the time that Chatterer was thinking this he was running. Whenever he could, he jumped from tree to tree. But there were times when he had to come down on the ground, because the trees were so far apart that he couldn't jump from one to another. Oh, how Chatterer did hate to come down on the ground! He knew it was much easier for Shadow to follow his trail along the ground.

Now, as a matter of fact, Shadow the Weasel had followed Chatterer only a little way. He didn't feel like climbing trees, although he could climb if he had to. He was satisfied to give Chatterer a good scare and then go on about his business. And he succeeded in giving Chatterer a good scare. On and on raced Chatterer. His legs were tired and he was out of breath. But every time he stopped to rest a bit he got so nervous that he couldn't sit still. He just had the feeling that Shadow was likely to pop out any minute.

"Oh, dear, if I could only break my trail!" said Chatterer. "But that fellow seems to know just what I'll do. Yes, sir, he seems to know just what I'll do. It's dreadful to have him get on one's trail."

Presently ahead of him Chatterer saw through the trees a gleam of water. He had never been just there before, so when he reached the pond, for it was the pond of Paddy the Beaver his heart sank. He was tired. It didn't seem to him that he could run any further. And now here was this great big pond! To get to the other side he would have to go away around it, and he just didn't feel as if he INSERT CUT HERE ad(P)—oit could. He simply must rest. He looked back anxiously. Every time he saw a leaf move his heart jumped. But, though he looked and looked, he did not see Shadow the Weasel. He began to take hope. He was getting his breath back. He was getting rested. If only Shadow would stay long enough to give him time to get thoroughly rested he might yet escape.

And all the time Shadow had gone off in quite another direction. How relieved Chatterer would have been if he could only have known it. As it was, he sat away out on the end of a branch overhanging the water. He could look all over the pond. He saw Paddy the Beaver swimming along by his house. He saw Mrs. Paddy climb out on the house. He saw Lightfoot the Deer come down to the shore for a drink. And all the time he kept saying to himself: "If Shadow comes, I'll jump right out into the water. I can swim and he can't follow my trail in the water. Oh, dear! I wish I'd stayed at home!"

It is always that way. When through our own foolishness we get into trouble we always wish, and wish we hadn't done what we did do, or that we had done what we didn't do.

Big Ulcer All Healed

"Now I can Walk," Says Mrs. Southcott.

"Here is another letter that makes me proud," says Peterson. "One that I would rather have than a thousand dollars.

"It seems like a miracle, but it's true, every word of it.

"I know it because I get similar letters almost every day from people who have used Peterson's Ointment for old sores, eczema and piles.

"Is it any wonder I am proud?"

Dear Sirs:

"I was an untold sufferer from an old running sore and ulcer. I had tried most everything without any relief from pain. A friend told me of your wonderful ointment and the first box took away the pain that had not left me before in years, and after using just nine dollars worth of the salve I am cured. The ulcer was 9 inches by 6 1-2 inches, is all healed and I can walk. Never, never will I be without Peterson's again.

"You may use this to recommend your ointment if you wish. I cannot say enough to praise it." Yours truly, Mrs. Albert Southcott. Lyndonville, N. Y. Generous box 35 cents.

STOP DOSING

ALTHOUGH Vicks VapoRub is used primarily as a quick external treatment for colds, thousands of users have found it equally good to check headaches without "dosing." Rub it on the forehead and temples; also melt a little in a bowl of hot water and inhale its soothing vapors. This clears the head immediately and usually brings quick relief.

SELLING MOVEMENT RESULTED IN DROP IN POPULAR INDUSTRIAL ISSUES

NEW YORK, Aug. 8—(AP)—Speculative interest in today's markets was divided between a sensational rise of $6.50 a bale in cotton, nearly half of which was lost, and a broad selling movement on the New York stock exchange, which carried a number of popular industrial issues down 2 to 8 points.

High money rates again tended to dampen bullish enthusiasm for stocks. Call loans renewed at 6 1-2 per cent as against 6 yesterday, and then advanced to 7 as banks called $20,000,000 in loans. Time money held firm at 6 per cent, with banks less inclined to make long loans at that figure. Easier call money rates are looked for next week.

The day's trade news was mixed in character. The optimistic tenor of the weekly steel trade reviews, which stressed a resumption of railroad buying was off-set by predictions of a decrease of probably 100,000 tons in the July tonnage statement of the United States Steel corporation to be published Friday.

An increase in crude oil production also slowed up the buying in the oil shares. Loadings of revenue freight in the week ended July 28 showed an increase over the week before, but fell below the corresponding weeks of 1927 and 1928.

Motor shars bore the brunt of the selling pressure. Recurrent rumors that General Motors directors would defer the declaration of an extra dividend until November, coupled with the reported resignation of P. S. Dupont as chairman at tomorrow's meeting, brought heavy selling into General Motors common, which closed 5 points lower at 183 1-4, as contrasted with a high of 195 1-2 last week. Hupp, Chrysler, Packard, Nash and several of the accessory shares sold down 2 points or more.

Amusement shares fluctuated in violent and erratic fashion, the Paths issues nearly doubling their price over night before profit taking cut down the gains. Keith Albee was run up to a new high at 27 and then broke to 21, up 2 3-8 net. Loews advanced nearly 4 points and then lost all but a fraction of it's gain. The sudden buying movement in these issues was generally construed as a dive against an overcrowded "short" interest built up on the theory of poor fall prospects for the theatre business.

Sharp breaks took place in some of the high priced specialties. Du Pont dropped 8 points, Motor Products 6 1-4, Case Threshing 6 and Allied Chemical, American Car and Foundry, American Express, Atlantic Refining, General Cable, Johns-Manville, Midland Steel Products preferred, National Tea, Frank G. Shattuck, Timken Roller Bearing and Warner Brothers "A" all off 3 to 5 1-2 points.

A few issues moved against the general trend. Western Union rallied from a low of 142 to 148 1-2, up 4 1-2 net, and Republic Iron and Steel, Phillips-Jones, Standard Milling and Booth Fisheries first preferred showed net gains of 3 points or more.

The brisk rise in cotton was based on the publication of a government crop report showing an estimated yield more than 500,000 bales below private estimates. Final quotations were about $4 a bale higher. Grains continued to fall back on reports of improved crop weather, wheat losing 3 to 3 1-2 cents a bushel, and touching new low levels for the season. Coffee and sugar showed little change.

A further rise of 14 points in Spanish pesetas, which were quoted around 16.80 cents as against 16.43 on Monday, was the only feature in the foreign exchange market. Sterling cables ruled steady around $4.85 1-2.

MARKETS AT A GLANCE
New York

Stocks weak, General Motors sags 5 points.

Bonds quiet; Wickwire Spencer Steel issues strong.

Foreign exchanges mixed; Spanish pesetas rise 14 points to new 1928 high.

Cotton strong; bullish government report.

BOND MARKET

er, which probably is regarded as any place outside of New York city, was blamed for the firmness of call money, the flow being caused to some extent by need of funds for early crop movements.

Advances in industrials and first grade rails were largely responsible for a slightly firmer tone in the market. Steels were in demand, Wickwire Spencer Steel first 7s leading the advance with a gain of 4 points which left the issue at 33 5-8, a new high for the year. The convertible 7s opened at 36, also a new high, but eased off on profit-taking, although closing fractionally higher. Other steel issues showed small gains.

Dodge Brothers 6s were under pressure and sugars, which had been recovering some of the ground lost in the recent slump, were inclined to heaviness. Indiana Limestone 6s made one of their periodic spurts, moving up 3 1-2 points. Pathe Exchange 7s with warrants also were in demand, gaining 2 points. Oils generally improved.

Among the railroad liens to seek higher levels were New Haven convertible debenture 6s, which advanced nearly 2 points; Baltimore & Ohio gold 4s, Katy first 4s, New York Central 4s of Canada 6s, Frisco 4 1-2s, Missouri Pacific 5s and a number of others sold off.

The foreign list was steady, with most buying centering around Australian commonwealth 4 1-2s, which gained fractionally.

U. S. government bonds were soft.

CHICAGO GRAIN MARKET

CHICAGO, Aug. 8—(AP)—Facing an estimate that surplus wheat in export countries this season will total 315,000,000 bushels more than last year, wheat values collapsed today. The tumble carried the wheat market 33c a bushel under prices of a year ago and to the lowest level since 1924.

Closing quotations on wheat were unsettled, 1 7-8c to 2 5-8c net lower for the day, with corn varying from 7-8c decline to 1-4c advance, oats 1-4c to 1c off and provisions unchanged to 25c down.

Likelihood of a bearish government crop report tomorrow as to domestic wheat added today to the effect of extremely optimistic wheat crop advices from Canada. Authoritative advices were at hand that the Canadian crop is now in a condition well above the average of the last five years. Moreover, the area planted to wheat this year in the Canadian prairie provinces is figured as 23,567,900 acres, showing an increase of 9.95 per cent. over 1927 and establishing a new record. On top of this came a statement from a British authority that export countries will probably have a surplus stock of 1,104,000,000 bushels, whereas world import requirements are put at only 27,000,000 bushels more than last year.

Demoralized wheat market conditions at Liverpool today tended further to bring about general selling here, especially as word was received that stocks of wheat at Liverpool are larger than a year ago and that arrivals of wheat in European continental countries are very large. Under such circumstances, lowest prices of the day in Chicago were made shortly before the close, but buying to collect a profit for previous sellers rallied the market somewhat in the dealings at the finish.

Fine weather for corn growth weakened the price of new crop deliveries of corn, December and March reaching the lowest level yet this season. September delivery of corn, however, and the cash corn market were firm. There were intimations of further export business in new crop corn, November, December and January shipment. Receipts of corn in Chicago today were only 57 cars. All deliveries of oats sold today at a new low point for the season, largely as a result of the bearish action of other grain.

Provisions were easier, paralleling the course of hog values. Bulges in the cotton market had little effect.

Net income of American Ice Co., for the first half of 1928 before depreciation and taxes, was $1,607,582, a gain of more than 26 per cent. over the first half of 1927. Sales were $8,594,793 against $6,246,269. Cash and short term loans amounted $2,376,870.

Gotham Silk Hosiery Co., earned $2.80 a share on the common stock, after preferred dividends in the first half of 1928, against $3.42 a share a year ago. Net profit declined to $1,388,977 from $1,663,388. On June 30 the company had $1,000,000 more cash than a year ago.

Sales of Interstate Department Stores for 7 months this year moved up to $10,518,612 from $8,985,268 in the corresponding 1927 period.

Profit of the Foundation Company for the half year dropped to $38,141 after charges, but before taxes, from $103,214 in the first half of 1927.

Unfilled orders of the U. S. Steel corporation at the close of July, to be made public on Friday, are expected to show a drop of about 100,000 tons, resulting from unusually heavy shipments for the month and hot weather which held up orders. Bookings are understood to have been quite heavy and in excess of shipments in the last few days.

Sales of National Tea company for seven months this year moved up to $48,781,304 from $31,823,334 in the same period of 1927:

Net profits of Curtiss Aeroplane and Motor for the first half of 1928 advanced to $591,844 from $332,251 in the same period of 1927. Second quarter net profit was $401,722 against $238,193 in the second quarter last year. The regular semi annual dividend of 50 cents a share on the common was declared, payable September 15 to holders of September 1.

Sales of Interstate Department Stores for seven months this year moved up to $10,518,612 from $8,985,268 in the corresponding 1927 period.

Profit of the Foundation company for the half year dropped to $38,141, after charges, but before taxes from $103,214 in the first half of 1927.

NEW LONDON WOMAN MISSING FROM HOME SINCE TUESDAY

(Special to The Bulletin.)

NEW LONDON, Aug. 8—Martin Oski, 40 Eastern avenue, is seeking the whereabouts of his wife for she has been missing since yesterday and the husband has lost all trace of her. Oski this afternoon requested the police to assist him in finding her. Oski stated that his wife departed from home, supposedly to go to the home of a relative. She never reached there.

Navy officials at the submarine base declared three sailors deserters since yesterday. One of them is Joseph N. Florence, Jr., formerly of this city. When Florence enlisted he gave his residence as Northford, Conn.

Renewals of leases of two stores for five years, here were filed for record at the office of the city clerk today. One of them is from the W. S. Alling Rubber company to the Groton & Stonington Traction company, 23-25 State street. The traction company's lease is from Aug. 7, 1928, to March 31, 1933, at a monthly rental of $200 and from March 31, 1931 to March 31, 1933 a monthly rental of $260. The other lease is from John and Samuel Turella, ta the State of Connecticut, that part of the building, 573, occupied by the motor vehicle department.

All of the cases presented in the police court today were for intoxication and violation of the city's parking laws. Three cases of intoxication were presented, two of the accused being given suspensions of judgment and the other was sentenced to 30 days in jail, but the execution of the sentence was suspended. Logan Roberts, Brookline, Mass., and Rachel S. Newton, Malden, Mass., were charged with parking overtime on State street, but as neither of the accused were in court their respective bonds of $2 was declared forfeited.

Louis Socol, 101 Squire street, was arrested today by Motorcycle Officer Clarence Martin charged with violation of the speed law and will be presented in the police court tomorrow. Socol was driving at a rate of speed of 45 miles an hour when he was overhauled by the officer.

Miss Lucy Noble, Black Point; Richard Keyes, Uncasville and Mrs. Ottamar Wasmuth, 43 Mercer street, patients at Lawrence-Memorial Associated hospital, were discharged yesterday. Jack Jasse, New Haven and Mrs. Lawrence Snow and infant son, were patients discharged yesterday.

OBITUARY

Frank Parrent

Frank Parrent, 40, formerly a farm worker on the Crouch farm, Ledyard, died last night at Lawrence-Memorial Associated hospital, where he had been a patient but a short time. His home was a member of Niagara Engine Co. Mr. Parrent was a world war veteran.

Youngs Montgomery

Youngs Montgomery, 47, died suddenly early this morning of cerebral hemmorhage at his late residence, No. 30 School street, Groton. He is survived by his wife and three children: a brother, Edward D. Morgan and a sister, Mrs. William G. Stebbins, both of Groton. Mr. Morgan was the son of the late John A. and Anna M. Gould Morgan, and had resided in Groton his entire life. He was for many years proprietor of a plumbing establishment at 39 School street and was one of the borough's best known merchants. Mr. Morgan had apparently been in sound health for he was not in a complaining mood yesterday. He retired as usual and at 3:30 o'clock, Mrs. Morgan was aroused by the labored breathing of her husband. He was unconscious and medical aid summoned, but before the family physician arrived, Mr. Morgan had succumbed.

Commissioner of Motor Vehicles Robbins B. Stoeckel today ordered the suspension of the driver's license of Walter Benedict, 13 Jefferson avenue. Commissioner Stoeckel also ordered the return of the driver's license of Thomas M. Moore, 206 Connecticut avenue.

The police of Bridgeport have requested the New London police to be on the lookout for two boys who ran away from their homes in the former city yesterday.

Thomas R. Clark, 151 Connecticut avenue, was arrested today, the charge against him being an unusual one, of violation of an ordinance prohibiting the use of vehicles on the public highways except such as are equipped with rubber tires. This morning Motorcycle Officer Clarence Martin detected Clark towing several automobiles that were not equipped with tires, the towed cars rolling on the wheel frames and disfiguring the street surface.

In a cell at police headquarters tonight is Leizh Paris, 30, who has been stopping at the Y. M. C. A., and he is charged with vagrancy, but he may have a more serious charge to face when he is presented in the police court tomorrow. Paris was on Main street about 10:30 o'clock and approached Patrolman George Perkins and inquired the qualifications one much possess to become an applicant for appointment to the police force. Paris was ordered to keep going. Paris left the officer, but shortly returned and declared that he believed himself fully qualified to become a police officer for he said he "could take a beating as well as give one." Paris told the truth, at least partially, for when he attacked the officer he did not administer a beating, but took one for he was dealt a blow on the side of the head with a blackjack that opened his scalp.

At a meeting of the Women's auxiliary of the Lawrence-Memorial Associated hospital, held yesterday at the Hotel Mohican news, was announced that many persons have already agreed to furnish rooms in the new nurses home of the institution. Mrs. Maurice E. Sherman presided at the meeting. Cost for the complete equipment of a room in the new building will amount to approximately $150 and those desirous of contributing this sum are requested to get in touch with some member of the following committee: Mrs. Nicholas Pond, chairman, Mrs. Maurice E. Sherman, Mrs. Frank O. Wellington, Mrs. Frank B. Walker, Mrs. Clark D. Edgar, Mrs. Edward Prentiss, Jr., Mrs. Samuel M. Prentiss, Mrs. William D. Cronin, Mrs. Albert C. Woodruff, Mrs. Harry P. Walker, Miss Louise M. Johnson and Miss Mildred C. Keefe.

At a special meeting of the Ladies auxiliary to the Ancient Order of Hibernians, which is to be held tomorrow night in Moose hall, Main street, plans are to be made for the holding of a bazaar. The men of the division have already practically completed their plans for the event.

Mr. and Mrs. Robert Bowers, who were married on June 30 in White River Junction, Vt., hav ereturned to this city, where they will make their home. The bride was the former Miss Mildred Bailey, well known here.

As a result of the recently launched campaign of the League of Women Voters of this city, twenty lads and lasses from the crowded sections of New York will be brought here on August 16th, to enjoy real vacations in homes of different members of the organization.

Miss Gertrude Lynch of New York, house guest of Mrs. Edwin F. Tobin of Putnam Terrace, entertained a group of friends last night at a bridge party. Three tables were in play and prizes were won by the following: Miss Charlotte Bishop, Miss Ella Fanning of Norwich and Miss Mary Tobin. Other guests present were Mrs. Ida Brazaw, Mrs. Fitch D. Crandall, Mrs. Grace Herrick, Mrs. Martin and son, Mr. and Mrs. Tobin, Miss Lee Gannon and John Gannon Jr. Miss Lynch was formerly of this city and is very well known.

FIFTEEN YEAR OLD BOY ROBBED GROCERY STORE

(Special to The Bulletin.)

NEW LONDON, Aug. 8—A fifteen year old boy was arrested early this morning by Patrolmen Michael Dorsey and George Bruhns, on a charge of having broken into the grocery store of George H. Sherbourne at 37 Howard street. The sum of $35 was stolen. The youth, who resides at 40 Pearl street, was found wandering around and being unable to give a satisfactory explanation for being out at such a late hour, was taken into custody. He told the officers that the reason he committed the burglary was that his mother was out of work and was in dire need of funds, and that he wished to secure enough money to go to New York to seek employment, being unable to secure any here. A railroad ticket to that city and $29 in cash was found upon his person when searched. He stated that as he was passing by the Howard street store early in the evening he noticed the clerk take the money from a cash register and place it in a bag which was deposited in an ice cream cone can. He returned to his home, secured some tools, and watching his chance for an entry, pried open a window and secured the money. Immediately afterwards he hastened to the station where he purchased the railroad ticket. It was shortly afterwards that he was apprehended by the police. He was held in the police station until this morning when he was placed in the custody of the probation officer.

George Cohen of Hartford, who was overcome at Ocean beach Sunday, while performing his duties of waiter at the Ocean View hotel, was reported today as being greatly improved by officials of the Home Memorial hospital where he is under treatment. He did not regain consciousness until this morning and while he seems ordinarily bright and cheerful, physicians state that the danger period of their patient has not yet been passed.

A movement is on foot to nominate Joseph Peronne, past commander of Murphy Rathburn post, No. 183 Veterans of Foreign Wars, for election to the city council. Peronne is well known here and friends who are circulating a petition in his behalf are optimistic in successfully getting him into the organization. If all the petitions being circulated are filed before Saturday there will be at least eight candidates in the field.

A supper and picnic will be held tomorrow afternoon and evening by members of the Semper Fidelis class of the First Baptist church, at Riverside park. A business meeting will precede the supper which will start at 4 p. m.

Donald Ledyard was arrested late yesterday afternoon on charges brought by Charles Mansfield of Barnford Farms, Eastern Point, by State Trooper Arthur Whitmarsh. It is alleged that he stole a valuable auto robe, tire jack, wrenches and other articles from the former's car. He will be tried in the Groton town court on Monday. The theft is claimed to have occurred last Sunday when Mansfield's car, after an accident, was left unprotected while the owner was absent seeking a wrecking car.

A drive against roaches and rats was launched in this city today under the direction of H. T. Pitts, a modernist Pied Piper of Bethlehem. The drive came into existence as a result of the meeting of the city council Monday night when it was voted to authorize City Manager Holt to enter into a contract with the H. T. Pitts Chemical company to exterminate the rodents and roaches for the sum of $885. The first attack was made in the vicinity of Evelyn and North streets. Tomorrow activities will be transferred to the neighborhood of Calkins park in Riverview avenue.

AUTO DRIVERS ARE ORDERED TO COURT

(Special to The Bulletin.)

NEW LONDON, Aug. 8—Several drivers of automobiles have been ordered to present themselves in the police court tomorrow charged with various violations of the traffic laws. Ate Rhemgold, Norwich, is charged with blocking traffic on State street; Julia A. Walsh, Orange, N. J., is charged with parking overtime on State street; Daniel Frasier, parking overtime on State street; William J. Keenan, blocking traffic on State street; Sidney R. Slossberg, Hartford, blocking traffic on Main street and Edward Saunders, 10 Wallaston Terrace, Dorchester, Mass., parking overtime on State street.

The detective bureau and Deputy Fire Marshall Calvin D. Edmunds are investigating the trio of fires that occurred here last night and early this morning, for each of the fires was discovered in the same section of the city and were outside fires. The fire that attacked the residence of Rev. Chester H. Howe, pastor of the First Baptist church, was the most serious blaze. Other residences to be attacked were those of Frank Nichols, 60 Vauxhall street and Colin S. Buell, 56 Vauxhall street, principal of the Williams Memorial institute. The fires were discovered in the rear of the homes and in garbage receptacles close to the house, so that the buildings would unquestionably become ignited, provided the fires were not discovered promptly.

There is glory in any little thing you do merely from a sense of duty

ANNOUNCEMENTS

Palace Theatre

Readers who think that Anita Loos' book, "Gentlemen Prefer Blondes" is an epic of the American gold-digger are right, but those who think it is an indictment of her have missed the point entirely.

"Gentlemen Prefer Blondes", which Paramount produced and which is at the Palace now, is a great "woman's picture." Every woman who sees it is going to enjoy seeing the male characters of the picture yield to the glib, onnocent-seeming flattery of the little defenseless girl, who has no weapons but her sharp wits.

For it is the utter foolishness of the male sex that Miss Loos ridicules. It was there, hidden sometimes but there nevertheless in every line of her book. Malcolm St. Clair and his splendid cast got the same spirit into the picture. Lorelei, like those famous policemen of the north, always gets her man, with her ulterior motive his pocketbook. It is not exaggeration, either. Miss Loos has simply hit on the fact that most men are simply waiting around for some clever little gold-digger to pluck them.

It makes no difference what kind of man he is—a girl as shrewd as Lorelei could get him. In the picture there are shown dozens of men succumbing to her wiles—she gets 'em all. There are farm hands, business men, traveling salesmen, policemen, judges, college boys and reformers. They are American, English and French. It makes no difference what nationality or the occupation, Lorelei is smart enough to get them all.

Those people who think that Miss Loos' satirical darts were directed at the gold-digger are dead wrong. It is the male sex she aimed at—and hit.

The Vaudeville presentation this week is an exceptionally good one. It is headed by a very clever revue known as the Harvey-Conlin Ensemble. Bernard and Suzanne in "Bits of This and That" provide plenty of laughs. Chappelle and Stenette vend some pleasing musical selections in an act entitled "Harmony as You Like It." Millard and Millicent in an offering of "Twists and Twirls" and Dean & Hughes, in a comedy skit.

Broadway Theatre

Everyone who is at all familiar with the American theatre realizes the significance of the name George M. Cohan as a vital part of that institution. And, by the same token they know that any play written and sponsored by that theatrical magician represents two things (1) superlative entertainment and (2) clean, wholesome entertainment.

"The Baby Cyclone" is no exception to the Cohan standard and as offered by the Garrick Players at the Broadway theatre next week Monday and Tuesday should be one of the most successful offerings of this capable and justly popular band of players.

"The Baby Cyclone" aims at one end—continuous, wholesome amusement. It most certainly accomplishes its purpose, but, at the same time, it has a really serious thought underneath it, the extent to which women will go in their lavishing of affection of an animal, and the danger that faces them when this practice comes in conflict with matrimony.

George M. Cohan has treated, his subject with the deftness of the real artist. He tells his continuously humorous story with a group of people who hold your interest, because of their conflicting personalities, as well as the complications into which they fall with lightning swiftness. They all find happiness, in the end, of course, but not until they have provided one of the happiest of evenings for their auditors.

The action of "The Baby Cyclone" revolves about two young couples and a fluffy pup. The complications that arise over the sale of this little pet, and the stupidly chivalrous efforts of one of the men are too numerous to detail. But if you have ever loved a dog, if you have ever known a man or woman who "mammas and papas" a dog, if you have ever seen a mild-eyed canine stepping into the happiness of a man and a woman, if you have known any of these things, you are due for one of the most continuously funny evenings in theatrical ages when you go to the Broadway theatre next Monday and Tuesday.

Tickets for all performances of George M. Cohan's "The Baby Cyclone" as played by the Garrick Players are now on sale at the box office of the Broadway theatre.

Breed Theatre

Motion picture records for long location trips, measured by time and distance, were broken by Albert Rogall in directing "The Shepherd of the Hills," an elaborate film version of the Harold Bell Wright novel coming Friday to the Breed Theatre for two days only.

Various portions of Arkansas, Missouri and Utah, as well as studio scenes taken in California, were used in the film which Charles R. Rogers produced for First National Pictures. A total of over 3,500 miles was covered by the entire company of fifteen actors, forty extras, and a technical staff of seventy men.

Three months were spent by Rogell's company away from the studios, traveling by special train, automobile, wagon and pack train. Only interiors were filmed at the First National studios, at Burbank, California, after all the exteriors had been filmed.

The Utah scenes were those including huge herds of sheep. Ozark Mountain scenes included those in which log cabins, streams and a grist mill were used.

Alec B. Francis, Molly O'Day, John Boles, Matthew Betz, Romaine Fielding, Otis Harlan, Joseph Bennett, Maurice Murphy, Carl Stockdale, Marion Douglas, John Westwood and other notable players portray the characters of the famous novel. Marion Jackson wrote the adaption of the book.

Cigarette Growth

We are informed by a representative of Liggett & Myers Tobacco company that they now have in operation four large cigarette factories—located at Richmond, Va.; Durham, N. C.; Philadelphia, Pa.; San Francisco, Cal.—and that in addition to other brands, the sales of Chesterfield Cigarettes alone are over twenty-eight billion a year.

It is also stated that Chesterfield is an international brand, and that in a letter received from a passenger on one of the around-the-world cruises, the information was disclosed that in practically every port visited Chesterfields not only were on sale, but were the leading American brand in that city.

LEGAL NOTICES

LEGAL NOTICE
Proposed Ordinances of the City of Norwich

TO ALL PERSONS WHOM IT MAY CONCERN:

This is to give you notice that at a regular meeting of the Court of Common Council of the City of Norwich and State of Connecticut, held on Monday, August 6th, 1928, at seven P. M. (s. t.) in the Council Chamber of said City, the following were proposed and offered as Ordinances of the said City and consideration thereof and action thereon was, as required by law, postponed until an adjourned Meeting of the Court of Common Council to be held on the 4th day of September, 1928, at seven o'clock P. M., (s. t.), eight o'clock P. M. (d. s. t.), in said Council Chamber, and a public hearing will be had thereon.

"BE IT ORDAINED BY THE COURT OF COMMON COUNCIL OF THE CITY OF NORWICH THAT SECTION 15 OF CHAPTER 6 OF AN ORDINANCE OF THE CITY OF NORWICH CONCERNING FIREWORKS ADOPTED NOV. 4, 1901 IS HEREBY AMENDED TO READ AS FOLLOWS:

"Section 15: No person or persons shall sell or offer to sell, or have for sale, or give, or distribute to any person or persons within said City, any fireworks, rocket or rockets, firecracker or firecrackers, without the written permission of the Chief of Police and the payment to said City of $15.00 for permission to sell at wholesale, $5.00 for permission to sell at retail, and $20.00 for permission to sell at both wholesale and retail. No person or persons shall within said City give or sell any gun powder to any minor under the age of fourteen years, unless by the written order of his parents, master or guardian. Every person violating the provisions of this Section shall for every such offense forfeit and pay for the use of said City a fine of $5.00."

"BE IT ORDAINED BY THE COURT OF COMMON COUNCIL OF THE CITY OF NORWICH THAT SECTION 3 OF CHAPTER 21 OF AN ORDINANCE OF THE CITY OF NORWICH CONCERNING THE CEMETERY TRUST FUNDS, ADOPTED NOV. 4, 1901, IS HEREBY AMENDED TO READ AS FOLLOWS:

"Section 3: Hereafter such funds so given shall immediately upon their receipt by the City Treasurer be deposited in a Savings Bank in the City of Norwich. A separate deposit book, in the name of the person or persons for whose benefit the trust is created, with the City named as Trustee of said deposit, shall be taken by the City Treasurer for each individual account so received. No sum of less amount than $50 shall be received or any trust account opened by said Treasurer for any smaller amount. The City Treasurer shall open on the books of the City an account with each trust so created, stating the purpose thereof, the amount given and the bank where such fund is deposited."

The above is a true copy of the said proposed Ordinances and is published by me as directed by the said Court of Common Council and required by the Charter of the said City of Norwich.

Dated at Norwich, Connecticut, this 6th day of August, A. D. 1928.

Attest:
WESTON C. PULLEN,
City Clerk and Clerk of the Court of Common Council for the City of Norwich, Connecticut. 2t aug8

Patronize These Well Known Concerns

WHY NOT SEE ABOUT YOUR ROOFING JOB NOW

The Nu-Art Tile Roofing company of 382 Main street, has a message to the public of eastern Connecticut that may well be heeded at this time. Nothing is more foolish than the continual throwing away of money which could just as well be saved. You would not think of going to the Shetucket river bridge, within sight of this company, and throwing $100 in gold into the river, never to find it again. Every time you plan to re-roof your house, without consulting the Nu-Art Tile Roofing company you are throwing your money away for keeps.

Why not let this company explain to you how you can re-roof your homes without the dirt and expense of ripping off the old shingles.

That is the modern way of re-roofing—the Genasco way—for Genasco Latite Shingles are particularly adapted for laying over worn-out shingles. You don't litter your lawn and attic with dirt. You don't expose your home to damage by rain while re-roofing. And you get a new long-lasting roof that is storm-tight, fire-retardant and attractive as well as economical.

Genasco Latite Shingles offer unusual resistance to weather and wear—all the protection of Trinidad Lake Asphalt—that wonderful water-proofer of nature, famous as a street-paving material through a half-century of service in all parts of the world.

Made of tough, long-fibred, asphalt-saturated rag felt, Genasco Latite Shingles are also coated on both sides with Trinidad Lake Asphalt Cement. The undercoating is the exclusive "Scalbac" feature—protects the shingles against condensation, and helps bind each shingle closer to those underneath.

The moderate cost of Genasco Latite Shingles recommends them for cottages, bungalows, garages, etc.—and yet, because of their beauty, they are also used on the finest homes. And their beauty is lasting—four unfading colors—red, green, blue-black, and Mix-Tone.

Before you roof or re-roof, find out all about Genasco Latite Shingles. We will gladly send you full information, show them to you and demonstrate their advantages.

ONLY GOOD LEATHER USED AT THE SHU-FIX, INC.

A re-soling job is only as satisfactory as the leather used, plus the skill in applying it.

Government regulations during the war required civilians to re-sole with 8 to 9 iron leather—the same as used then (and now in most part) in new shoes.

The result under government direction was longer wear and two re-solings on every man's well-made shoe, instead of one re-soling now, when using hard, flinty leather and heavy weighing soles that pull the papers out of shape and make shoes wear out faster.

Shu-Fix, Inc., located at 256 Main street, use "K. L." sole leather of the same weight originally built into the shoe. This guarantees you solid, natural, non-acid leather for service, style and comfort. Why use heavy weighing, acid-swelled leather?

NORWICH WELDING CO. CAN MEND THAT MACHINE

Mr. Bamber, proprietor of the Norwich Welding Co., states at this season of the year, that he and his workmen are very busy. About this time each year there are hundreds of parts brought to the welding company's plant that have become broken during the spring months, or possibly that were broken in the winter and allowed to remain in that condition during the spring. This is especially true of farm machinery, says Mr. Bamber. Whereas, years ago the farmer who discovered in the spring that several parts on his various machines had become broken, he thought it necessary to buy new parts to replace them. Now, instead of going to that expense, he can bring in the parts at his leisure and have them welded and put into perfect condition at a fraction of what a new part would cost.

The Norwich Welding Co. is the only plant in this section of the state who are fully equipped to do welding—either large or small. It matters little to these men whether it's a stove leg, a large boiler, a tank or an auto frame. They are equipped to handle it, and when the job leaves the shop it's as perfect as welding can make it, and much stronger in the welded section than it was before it was broken.

In addition to welding, this firm does blacksmithing in all its branches and employs an experienced blacksmith who does all kinds of work in this line.

Mr. Bamber, being the representative for Prest-O-Lite in Norwich and vicinity, states that this form of lighting for automobiles is becoming more popular each year due to the fact that Prest-O-Lite is standard equipment with the experienced truck owners, as it can stand the racking vibration and jolts of hard usage which is necessary for trucks to contend with.

With Prest-O-Lite there are no delicate parts to wear out and when once installed assure the driver of a steady, penetrating, dependable light. Mr. Bamber says there are a great many more people who operate cars in this section using Prest-O-Lite today than ever before, due he thinks, to the fact that an excellent service is maintained at his plant for the users.

For the convenience of factory, mill, garage owners and others in eastern Connecticut, oxygen, acetylene equipment and supplies, welding rods, fluxes, torches, regulators, Prest-O-Lite lighing tanks for trucks, are kept in stock at all times.

NORWICH ROTARIANS HAND DEFEAT IN GOLF TO NEW LONDON BROTHERS

The Norwich Rotary club golf team subjected the mashie swingers of the New London club to very humiliating defeat by the large and decidedly overwhelming score of 24 to 1. Wednesday afternoon at the Norwich Golf club. The Whalers' only point was scored by Dr. O'Neil in his match against Bill Park. Scores ran rather high with W. G. Park taking low gross with an 89 while low net went to the outside golfer, Harold Hannegan, with a gross of 91 which with his 16 handican gave him a net 75.

One of the feature foursomes of the day outside the Costello-O'Neil vs. Campbell-Park match was the Smith-Warren vs. Crawford-Standish where at the end of play the match was all even. The first nine was halved as was the second and also the match. The gross scores are of no interest to the general public. The point score was as follows:

Preceding the golf match the regular meeting of the Norwich Rotary club was held on the spacious veranda of the club porch with a number of the New London members present. President Edward E. Jewett presided and C. A. Gager was the capable songleader. Little business was transacted at the meeting other than of a routine nature. It was announced that the meeting of Aug. 22 would be held with the Willimantic club and that following the luncheon the Norwich and Willimantic golfers would play a return match at the Willimantic Country club. F. Russell Smith was in charge of the golf match for the afternoon.

INJUNCTION SUIT OVER OCEAN BEACH STORE

Judge Charles B. Waller of the court of common pleas took the papers and reserved decision in the injunction action, brought by Morbris Luchansky, of New London, against Hyman Tanenbaum, of the same city, to restrain the latter from violating an alleged clause in the sale contract, whereby Tanenbaum, in selling his delicatessen store to Luchansky, is alleged to have agreed not to re-enter this business at Ocean Beach for a period of five years from the date of sale.

The hearing was in the New London office of Judge Charles B. Waller, Monday afternoon, with Attys. Daniel M. Cronin and Max Boyer representing the plaintiff and Atty. Morris Lubchansky, the defendant.

The case is said to date back several years ago when Tanenbaum sold his delicatessen and grocery store opposite the trolley terminal in Stuart avenue, Ocean Beach, to Luchansky. It is said the buyer paid a good price for the good will, remainder of lease and a small stock of goods and that the proviso of the contract of sale that Mr. Tanenbaum should not engage in the delicatessen business at the beach for five years thereafter was valuable because of Mr. Tanenbaum's popularity with customers of his religious faith.

Mr. Luchansky, it is said, continued the business at a loss for two years and then had to ask L. Markow, owner of the property to be let off from the remainder of the lease period. Mr. Markow granted this and the ensuing season again rented the same place to Mr. Tanenbaum, who has done a good business there this season. Mr. Lubchansky opened a store in Bank street near the Empire theatre and so is no longer a competitor of Mr. Tanenbaum for beach business. While the contract of sale clearly called for Mr. Tanenbaum to remain out of this business at the beach for five years, there was believed ground for argument if such a clause was enforceable if the buyer went out of business without selling his lease and other rights to another person and could no longer be damaged by Mr. Tanenbaum's return to business.

MYSTIC PRIEST GOING TO NEW BRIDGEPORT PARISH

A new Catholic parish will be launched in Bridgeport August 19, according to a Hartford report, when it is thought mass will be said at the Warren Harding high school, and at the same place thereafter until arrangements can be completed to house the parish. The name of the new parish has not been determined, but it will include those who now worship at St. Charles, Blessed Sacrament and St. Mary's churches. Rev. Thomas P. Mooney, now pastor of St. Patrick's, Mystic, will be head of the new parish. He is a native of New Haven, a graduate of St. Charles' seminary near Baltimore, Md., and Montreal seminary. Twenty-one years ago he was curate at St. Charles' in Bridgeport, then went to Immaculate Concention parish, Waterbury, and for fifteen years was curate at the Church of the Blessed Sacrament parish in Bridgeport. He has been in Mystic about four years.

GOODYEAR POLICE CHIEF MADE NORWICH VISIT

Chief of Police Martin Wolfe of Goodyear was a guest Tuesday evening at the local police station, a custom that he has followed on the night previous to the day of the state police convention for a matter of 20 years. As a delegate from the town of Goodyear, the chief accompanied Sergeant John T. Casey and Officers John K. Quinn and Clifford L. Crary, delegates from the local police association, to New Britain. The party left Norwich for the convention Wednesday morning and returned Wednesday evening.

The officers at headquarters heartily greeted Chief Wolfe, being pleased to have him with them for an evening. As on previous visits the chief challenged the local officers to a game of pinochle and cribbage, coming out victorious in all of the contests. The Goodyear officer while at the local station two years ago playing pinochle held 4,000 aces, a hand dealt out but rarely. The local force is awaiting with pleasure another visit from the chief.

WILL FACE TRIAL IN SEPTEMBER SUPERIOR COURT

John Dougherty, 33, of this city, was presented in the city court Wednesday morning on a number of charges. Probable cause was found by Judge Arthur F. Libby and Dougherty was bound over to the September term of the superior court. He was released on a bond of $500. On complaint of the Hudson Essex company the accused was arrested Tuesday morning for alleged false representation in purchasing an Overland car. It is claimed by the company that Dougherty presented them a note for $50, which he said was signed by him and was not. It has since developed that Dougherty owes two and one half weeks room rent to the proprietor of the Norwich boarding house and three weeks rent to the Lenox. He is also in debt to a local painter to the amount of $10.

BOOMING KENEALY FOR STATE SECRETARY IN 1930

Friends are booming State Senator Matthew H. Kenealy of Stamford for secretary of the state, or one of the other places on the state ticket which is to be elected in 1930 and not this year, according to Fairfield county leaders. The county is united in its efforts to secure a renomination for Comptroller Frederick M. Salmon of Westport, this year, and leaders do not wish to jeopardize his chances by other candidates from Fairfield county. County leaders are anxious to have Kenealy "go higher" as one of them put it, and inasmuch as Comptroller Salmon is not expected to be a candidate for a place on the state ticket after this term, the probabilities are that Fairfield county will be back to Kenealy in the 1930 convention.

PRESTON BIBLE CLASS ELECTS ITS OFFICERS

The annual meeting of the women's bible class of the Preston City Baptist church was held at the home of Mrs. William Bicknell on the Preston City road. The election of officers took place as follows: President, Mrs. Appleton Maine; vice president, Mrs. Belton Woodmansee; secretary, Mrs. Irving Foote; treasurer, Mrs. Earl Bennett. All committees were elected the same as last year. The presidents report was read and accepted. The secretary's report was given showing much work accomplished in the past year also the increase in membership. The treasurer's report showed the books in good standing. Reports were given by the various committees with pleasure to all. The program for the afternoon was in charge of Mrs. Belton Woodmansee and Mrs. Clark Woodmansee as follows:

Vocal solo by Miss Dorothy Bennett; reading, The Tale of the Lost Trail; vocal solo by Mrs. Irving Foote, Hymns of the Old Church Choir, reading, I Wandered Lonely as a Cloud, by Mrs. E. G. Pendleton. Refreshments were served by Mrs. Bicknell assisted by Mrs. John Richardson.

SAILOR IS FINED ON RECKLESS DRIVING CHARGE

Charged with reckless driving and operating with improper number plates, Cyril Ashworth, a sailor stationed at the submarine base and latterly with the U. S. S. Florida, was given a fine of $25 and costs on the first count and a nolle was entered on the second in the city court Wednesday morning. The sailor was arrested after a collision near the West Town street garage, in which the Ford racer he was operating figured with a Chandler sedan driven by John R. Bowman and owned by Dr. James J. Donohue, both of this city. All of the occupants of both machines were injured.

RECKLESS DRIVING CHARGE AGAINST PROVIDENCE MAN

Following a collision on the Boston Post road in Waterford Tuesday night at 7:30 o'clock between automobiles operated by Abie Labush of Providence and Florindo Giordani, R. F. D. 2, Waterford, the former was arrested by Trooper Peter Busch of the Groton barracks on a charge of reckless driving. Labush will be presented in the Waterford town court next Monday. No one was injured in the crash but both automobiles were extensively damaged.

FEDERAL APPROVAL FOR NORWICH BANK MERGER

The federal approval required for the proposed merger of the two Norwich national banks, the Merchants and the Uncas, has already been received, it was stated Wednesday night and the next step to be taken is by a meeting of the stockholders to ratify the action of the directors upon the consolidation of the two banks. For each bank this meeting has been called for Wednesday, Sept. 5.

Republican Women to Work

NORWICH MOTORCYCLE RIDERS HURT IN CRASH ON GREEN HOLLOW ROAD

(Special to The Bulletin)

DANIELSON, Aug. 8—A motorcycle being operated by Chester Petreas 18, of Norwich, and carrying as passengers Mitzi Malek, 14, of Norwich, and another youth by the name of Williuz, also of Norwich, crashed into a Ford coupe operated by Fred Arnold of Jewett City late this evening on the Green Hollow road about two miles south of here. Petreas and Malek were rushed to the Day Kimball hospital in Putnam by Officers James Carmody and Strand of the Danielson barracks, who investigated the collision. Petreas is suffering from a fracture of the jaw, and other injuries about the face and is expected to recover. Malek is in a critical condition suffering from fracture of the skull and internal injuries. His recovery was doubtful late tonight.

The motorcycle was proceeding westward and the Arnold car was coming out of an intersection on the highway when the motorcycle came into sight. It is believed that the vision of Petreas was obstructed by the passenger riding on the gasoline tank in front of him. He applied the brakes and crashed into the side of the car, Petreas being thrown against the windshield and receiving a severe cut under the chin. Officer Carmody stated tonight the motorcycle was registered and Petreas failed to have an operator's license with him. Arnold and Williuz were not injured.

DRY CANDIDATE ARRAIGNS THE REP. ADMINISTRATION

William F. Varney, Presidential Nominee of the Prohibition Party, Accuses the Republican Party of Wilfully Betraying the 18th Amendment—Sees Nothing in the Record of the Democratic Presidential Nominee That Would Justify Belief in Improved Enforcement of Prohibition—Therefore After Eight Years the Prohibition Party is Called Upon to Battle For the Enforcement of the 18th Amendment.

ROCKVILLE CENTRE, N. Y., Aug. 9—(AP)—In accepting the prohibition party's nomination for the presidency tonight William F. Varney accused the republican administration of wilfully betraying the 18th amendment.

He did not challenge the sincerity of the democratic party as a whole saying this was impossible because it was not in control of the government, but he said he could see nothing in the record of its standard bearer, Gov Alfred E. Smith, to justify a belief that his election would result in improved enforcement of prohibition.

Asserting that even without real enforcement the prohibition law had proved a blessing, he called for a "square deal" for the enactment, "that greater blessings and prosperity may be the self-evident result."

The candidate, speaking in the high school auditorium hard by his insurance office, charged the liquor traffic with having failed to show "real sportsmanship" in refusing to bow to the will of the majority as expressed in the 18th amendment.

"We, therefore, after eight years," he said, "are still called to battle this arch enemy of the human race, which still projects its slimy trail socially, financially and politically into every walk of life.

"It is true that during the first two years after the 18th amendment became effective it was largely respected by the liquor traffic—respected, not enforced—because at the first the rank and file of the wets believed that Uncle Sam meant business. . . .

"But unfortunately, before the second year of prohibition had ended the wets discovered that Uncle Sam, as represented by the Harding administration at Washington, did not intend to enforce the prohibition law and hence they became emboldened . . . until today the bootleg liquor business has assumed enormous proportions and is being carried on both in utter defiance of the law and what is more alarming, with the contemptible connivance of the government."

Varney said that the republican party started out to enforce the 18th amendment "by appointing an ex-distiller" as the head of the enforcement department, an act he saw as being "on a par with appointing one of the leading criminals of the city as the head of the police department."

"Then," he continued, "the whole enforcement army, all down the line, was honeycombed with wets—ex-bartenders, ex-saloon keepers, and 'booze hoisters,' who were not even 'ex.' These rum pirates aboard and in control of the prohibition ship have all but scuttled it.

"The fact is that the last two administrations have not enforced the 18th amendment they have betrayed it. . . . It is a fundamental principle of law that one intends the natural consequences of his acts. Is it unfair then, to charge that it was the deliberate intent of the administration in betraying prohibition instead of enforcing it, to create a public opinion hostile to prohibition?"

The candidate listed as some of the results of the alleged betrayal increased contempt for laws in general, wide-spread disrespect for prohibition on the part of the general public, and a change in the attitude of the press, which he said for the most part was friendly originally but a large and powerful part of which he believed now to be hostile to prohibition.

"Do not overlook the fact," he continued, "that the hostile attitude toward prohibition of so large a part of our young people of today is not due primarily to a lack of education in regard to the effect of alcoholics, but is due directly to the discrediting of prohibition by its base betrayal at Washington."

Varney placed little faith in the republican platform pledge regarding the 18th amendment, asking what reason there was to believe the pledge would be kept any more than the one in the 1924 platform.

"If the republican party had lived up to its pledges," he said, "there would be no prohibition issue today, neither would the prohibition party be obliged to challenge the existing scandalous conditions by placing your humble servant in the field, nor do I believe such a candidate as the democratic convention named would have even been considered."

The democratic prohibition plank he said was on a par with the republican in that neither committed the party to the principle of prohibition and both left the way open to battle against the law for its nullification.

"You see it is a 50-50 proposition," he said. "Good Lord, Good devil, don't know which hands I'm going to fall in, but will be on good terms with both."

Varney said he failed to find in Governor Smith's record that the latter had ever done much of anything to uphold the 18th amendment "which is part of the Constitution he 'oath requires him to support." And in this respect was in the same position as President Coolidge, "who, disregarding his oath, failed to use his many and great powers as president and leader of his party to enforce the dry law."

The prohibition candidate said that the Volstead act was only the beginning of laws relative to the enforcement of the 18th amendment and advocated changes "which will make enforcement easier and make the homes safe from the invasion of rum manufacturing."

He reiterated his party's stand on immigration, judicial procedure, agriculture, marriage and divorce, and freedom of speech as expressed in the platform. He said that in the present campaign an effort would be made to make "the champion of the wets" the beneficiary of talk about bigotry, intolerance and religious bigotry, but urged no one to be misled.

"It is insincere and unAmerican," he said. "Sinister in design and promulgated by those who would stir up religious hatred, where none exists in any other walks of life, in order that the liquor business may be benefited. They care not for any church or any country, men of every creed and faith have been patriots under our flag."

The ceremony was preceded by a dinner to the candidate tendered by the village and a parade to the high school, during which the fire house siren was tied open. The notification was made by B. P. E Prugh of Harrisburg, Pa., chairman of the Pennsylvania state prohibition party, executive member of the national prohibition committee and chairman of the national convention. James Arthur Edgerton of Alexandria, Va., the party's vice-presidential nominee, was present at the ceremony.

ANOTHER TROPICAL STORM FORMED IN WEST INDIES

JACKSONVILLE, Fla., Aug. 9—(AP)—Florida got rid of one hurricane today just as news came that another tropical disturbance had formed in the West Indies.

The hurricane which struck at West Palm Beach Tuesday night continued up the east coast as far as Melbourne and then turned west, raged across the state and disappeared into the Gulf of Mexico 50 miles north of Tampa.

Crippled power and communication lines, broken trees, unroofed structures, damage to fruit and truck crops and in places torrential rainfall marked the path of the disturbance.

The second hurricane was located today approximately 100 miles south of Santa Dominico, moving west-northwest. It was described by the weather bureau as of considerable intensity and was attended by shifting gales. Warnings were sent to vessels in the region of Jamaica and south of Haiti.

Strong northwest winds were forecast for tonight in Santa Domingo and Haiti and strong northeast winds for the windward passage. Whether this disturbance will develop itself in the West Indies or clear the island barriers and continue toward the continent will not be determined until the next few days.

No report of any loss of life has come from the affected region of Florida. The damage on the east coast in the approximate 200 mile strip from Jupiter to Titusville was suffered mainly by business houses, homes, transmission lines and power companies.

FORMER ARMY OFFICER USED GAS FOR SUICIDE

NEW YORK, Aug. 9—(AP)—Despondent, according to a note found by his side, over loss of his business, Harvey Klapp Lines, 54, former army major during the Spanish-American and World wars, whose name is listed in the social register, was found dead of gas poisoning today in his eight-room Park avenue apartment.

Gas was escaping from a gas log, the flue above which had been stuffed with a towel to prevent escape of the fumes. Mrs. Lines was said to be in Europe.

Investigation by gas company employes led to the discovery of the suicide in the fourth floor apartment.

Indications that Lines had been dead since yesterday were given in the note found on a table in his room, which was dated 'August 8." The note read:

"I am dreadfully unhappy after having lost my business. I think this is the best out after all."

KELLY'S FINGERPRINTS FOUND ON WHISKEY BOTTLE

LOS ANGELES, Aug. 9—(AP)—Detectives assembling evidence in the murder of Mrs. Myrtle Mellus, late today declared their case against Leo P. Kelley, 29 year old admirer of the society woman, who is charged with killing her last Sunday, had been clinched by the finding of Kelly's fingerprints on a whiskey bottle with which it is believed Mrs. Mellus was struck a fatal blow on the head.

H. L. Barlow, police fingerprint expert, reported that fingerprints found on the bottle were Kelly's. Barlow reported he also found on the bottle a fingerprint of Mrs. Mellus, but in a position indicating she had poured liquor from it.

WIFE MAY TESTIFY AGAINST HER HUSBAND

NEW BRITAIN, Aug. 9—(AP)—Holding that by the old Connecticut law that a wife cannot testify against her husband, counsel for Alfred Arsenault was over-ruled in court today after the statutes were produced which showed that the law had been changed. Arsenault was subsequently given a year's probation, 30 days suspended sentence and fined $50 on one count and $5 on a second for breach of the peace and making and selling liquor. His wife was the sole witness.

SAYS HE WAS SHOT AT NEAR COLUMBIA LAKE

COLUMBIA, Conn., Aug. 9—(AP)—State police of Stafford barracks, aided by Deputy Sheriff Collins, of Columbia are investigating a report made today by C. M. Blanc that he had been fired at while walking along the street near Columbia lake. Blanc, in reporting the accident to Joseph N. Clark, grand juror, accused Raymond Keefe, of firing the shot Tuesday evening from his father-in-law's home. The bullet missed its mark. Search is being instigated for Keefe.

14 DEATHS FROM HEAT IN CHICAGO DISTRICT

CHICAGO, Aug. 9—(AP)—Fourteen persons were reported dead in the Chicago district tonight as the result of excessive heat. The thermometer stood at 90 degrees at 5 p. m.

The corn crop in the middle west is about two weeks ahead of its normal development due to heat.

MESSAGES SENT BY THE ILL-FATED CREW OF F-14

POLA, Italy, Aug. 9—(AP)—The dramatic messages exchanged between the men imprisoned in the submarine F-14 and the rescuers were made public today. Both by the submarine telegraph and in notes they showed that death overtook the imprisoned men while they were still trying to communicate their last thoughts.

The first message received from the submarine, immediately after the sinking, said:

"We have six dead in poop. We are standing with the poop sunk in the mud. The position of the submarine is almost vertical."

After the vessel was raised it was found that only four had died by drownings, the difference being explained by the fact that two other men were imprisoned in the last compartment of the stern, while the captain and others of the crew were in the prow.

Search for the submarine began immediately but it was unsuccessful until seaplanes arrived and located the wreck. The rescuers immediately sent this message:

"Be of good cheer. We have found you. Divers are descending."

To this the submarine crew replied:

"Morale on board is highest, but poison gases are beginning to form. We plead for haste."

The destroyer Aquila then steamed over the wreck, dragging a heavy anchor hawser along the bottom. This brought the following message from below:

"We feel a heavy body passing over the hull."

Divers immediately descended and in a few minutes had fixed an air tube through which fresh air was started into the submarine. The rescuers then asked:

"Courage. We are sending you air. How are you feeling?"

The reply was that poison gases still were being felt and that no benefit had resulted from the air tube. This message ended: "Be quick."

At 1 p. m. Monday night the submarine said:

"We are lost."

A few minutes later its sounder was again heard saying:

"Gas is advancing inexorably. We are dying. Long live . . ."

The message was unfinished and the explanation came when the operator was discovered with his hand still on the key of his instrument.

NO DISTURBANCES BY FALL RIVER STRIKERS

FALL RIVER, Mass., Aug. 9—(AP)—Although another group of textile workers today joined in the strike here, the day was the quietest of the week. No disturbances occurred either at the opening or closing hour at the plants affected by the strike.

The new accession to the ranks of the strikers was at the Algonquin print works, where 150 workers walked out when the management refused their demand for a wage increase. A committee from the textile mills committee, an organization which has been active in promoting the strike in New Bedford, waited on Joseph Hindle, plant superintendent, to demand restoration of the recent ten per cent wage cut, changes in working conditions, and recognition of the textile mills committee. The plant employes 420 persons.

Groups from three textile mills have now joined the strike. On Monday 100 operatives at the Lincoln mill and several hundred from the finishing plant of the American Printing company walked out when the mill heads refused to receive representatives of the textile mills committee.

The only arrests reported today were of two men who were taken into custody by police as they distributed circulars near the Lincoln mill. Orderly picketing was carried on at the three plants affected by the strike.

PLANNING FLIGHT FROM ENGLAND TO LOS ANGELES

SAN FRANCISCO, Aug. 9—(AP)—Captain Harry Lyon, navigator of the Southern Cross in its flight from Oakland to Australia, left here today for the east to complete arrangements for an aerial trip from Croydon, England, to New York city, thence to Los Angeles, Cal.

Lyon had as his companions, Mrs. J. M. Keith-Miller and Captain William Lancaster, English fliers, who will accompany him on the attempted trans-Atlantic hop. Mrs. Keith-Miller and Captain Lancaster flew from England to Tasmania recently.

A tri-motored plane in the flight to cost between $80,000 and $100,000, was under construction.

20,000 EAGLES WERE IN PARADE IN COLUMBUS

COLUMBUS, Ohio, Aug. 9—(AP)—While approximately 20,000 members of the fraternal order of Eagles marched in colorful parade through the downtown section today under a blazing sun that sent the temperature to 90 degrees, almost a score of onlookers were prostrated by the heat. None of the marchers, however, was among the victims.

Awards of prizes followed the parade and drills. Amherst, Mass., won second prize, $150, in the competitive exhibition drill for auxiliary degree teams.

COMEDIAN ED. WYNN VISITED FRED STONE

NEW LONDON, Aug. 9—(AP)—Ed Wynn, stage comedian, stopped off here on his way to New York today to make a visit to Fred Stone, fellow actor, and both passed the afternoon exchanging conundrums. Stone, who is convalescing in a hospital here after an accident in which he broke both his legs while flying, continued to show improvement. Dr. Morehead, surgeon and specialist of New York, came here today and was pleased with the actor's condition.

Five Coal Miners Killed By Explosion

Bodies Were Brought to Surface of a Mine Near Johnstown, Pa.

JOHNSTOWN, Pa., Aug. 9—(AP)—Five miners were killed late today in an explosion in the Lochrie Coal Co. mine, near here. The bodies were brought to the surface early tonight. Four other workers in the underground tunnels at the time of the blast escaped.

Rescue crews, after a few hours exploration of the workings, came upon the bodies. The cause of the blast had not been determined tonight.

The dead:

Steve Parker, 22; Wasil Gendruski, 21; Frank Survinski, 28, and Peter Glencovich, all leaders, and Ignate Budny, a cutter, all of Johnstown.

Mine rescue teams were sent from Windber and Johnstown. The mine is a small one, with a drift entry.

OUTLAWRY OF WAR PACT BROUGHT BEFORE L. OF N.

GENEVA, Switzerland, Aug. 9—(AP)—The Kellogg outlawry of war pact was brought officially to the attention of the League of Nations today by Great Britain as a "matter which is evidently one of general interest to all league members."

Officials of the league tonight expressed satisfaction at the action of the British foreign office, which makes it possible for any member of the league to initiate discussion of the pact at the September assembly.

These league officials deem any move in connection with peace plans valuable as an adjunct to the peace efforts of the league itself. They added that they regarded the Kellogg proposal, like the Dawes plan reorganizing reparations, and the Washington naval conference, although negotiated outside of the league, as all helpful to the policy of harmony, conciliation and outlawry of war for which the league stands.

Britain, in its covering note to the league submitted with the notes which it has sent to Washington in answer to the proposal, said that in considering the American proposal it had been at great pains, in view of the provision of Article 20 of the league covenant, to assure itself that acceptance "would not involve any inconsistency with obligations resulting from the covenant."

After remarking that its communications to Washington make clear that there is no conflict with league obligations, Britain requested circulation of its communication to all members of the league because "the matter is evidently one of general interest to all."

TWO PERSONS KILLED, FIVE INJURED IN PLANE CRASH

GRAVENHURST, Muskoka, Aug. 9—(AP)—Capt. Charles Haines, pilot, of Miami, Fla., and Robert Erving, 18, of Pittsburgh, Pa., a passenger, are dead and five other passengers are in Calydor sanitarium here, suffering from injuries as the result of the crash of a Loening amphibian plane. The air-craft fell 500 feet to the rocks near Beaumaris.

The injured are: Wallace Phillips of Pittsburgh, said to be seriously hurt internally; Miss Lucy Hill of Boston, Mass., left arm broken; James Reed, Pittsburgh; Miss Molly Spaulding, Buffalo, N. Y., and Miss Betty MacKay, Pittsburgh. The last three are said to have suffered minor injuries.

Erving was dead when taken out of the wreckage. Captain Haines died soon after being admitted to the hospital.

The airplane landed on the farm of Fred Mills, about 20 miles from Gravenhurst.

The passengers were cottagers and summer resorters from the vicinity of Beaumaris. The big air-craft, which is operated for sight-seeing around the lakes by the International Airways Limited, had just taken off from the surface of Lake Muskoka when it fell, landing on huge boulders, and crumpling like matchwood. Rescuers were quickly on hand and the victims removed in motor boats to the sanitarium.

FUNERAL ARRANGEMENTS FOR GEORGE E. BRENNAN

CHICAGO, Aug. 9—(AP)—A last tribute to a fallen comrade brings Gov. Alfred E. Smith to Chicago tomorrow to attend the funeral of George E. Brennan, militant democratic leader of Illinois.

The New York governor and democratic nominee for the presidency laid aside the cares of state this afternoon and boarded the 20th Century Limited and is due to arrive in Chicago at 10:40 a. m., Friday. The funeral will be at 11. At 1:40 p. m. Governor Smith will return to New York.

Public services for Mr. Brennan will be conducted at his residence on Lake Shore drive. Only his family and closest friends, including Governor Smith, will attend. From the residence the body will be taken to the Our Lady of Mt. Carmel church where public services will be held.

GOV. SMITH TO ATTEND FUNERAL OF G. E. BRENNAN

ALBANY, N. Y., Aug. 9—(AP)—For the first time since his nomination at Houston, Governor Smith was headed tonight toward the middle west, but not on a political mission.

As the friend of George E. Brennan and not as the democratic presidential nominee or the governor of New York, he set out for Chicago to attend the funeral tomorrow of the party's leader in Illinois. He planned to remain in Chicago only three hours, and to be back in Albany early Saturday.

To make the trip and pay personal tribute to his dead political associate, the governor was forced to abandon work on his acceptance speech and to drop state and campaign business pressing for attention.

WILLIAM E. HICKMAN TO BE EXECUTED OCT. 19

LOS ANGELES, Aug. 9—(AP)—William E. Hickman today was ordered hanged at San Quentin penitentiary on Oct. 19 next for the slaying of Marion Parker. Judge Douglas Edmonds overruled nine defense objections before setting the second hanging date for the youthful kidnaper who slew the 12-year-old school girl here last December.

P. S. DuPont Given Leave Of Absence

Had Tendered His Resignation as Chairman of General Motors Board.

NEW YORK, Aug. 9—(AP)—Pierre S. DuPont, who was expected to indicate publicly his support of the presidential candidacy of Governor Smith, was granted leave of absence as chairman of the board of General Motors corporation today when he attempted to resign to avoid embarrassing the corporation through his opposition to the prohibition amendment.

The resignation was not accepted and it was not indicated whether the leave of absence would end at the close of the presidential campaign, when John J. Raskob, who resigned almost three weeks ago as chairman of the finance committee, is expected to resume his duties.

A formal statement issued by Alfred P. Sloan, Jr., president of the corporation, after a meeting of the board of directors this afternoon said DuPont submitted his resignation because he felt his activities in connection with the Association Against the Prohibition Amendment, with which he and Raskob have been closely identified since its foundation, might give the impression that the corporation was involved in that movement.

General Motors dropped five points on the stock exchange yesterday when DuPont's plan to resign became known, but closed today with a net gain of two and one-eighth points.

DuPont, a member of the Episcopal church and normally a republican, is a cousin of T. Coleman DuPont, republican senator from Delaware. He has been closely associated with Raskob for more than 20 years.

SLIGHT CLEW TO SLAYER OF JENNIE CONSTANCE

CHICAGO, Aug. 9—(AP)—Baffled by a lack of clews, police tonight redoubled their effort to find the slayer of Miss Jennie Constance, college professor and educator, who was assaulted and slain as she walked home alone from the Northwestern university library in Evanston Tuesday night.

What had been considered the only worth-while clew in the slaying proved to be a "dud" this afternoon when detectives determined two pieces of pencil were not from the same pencil. One bit had been found near the woman's body and the other was taken from the clothing of John Burke, Evanston man, held as a suspect. It was at first announced the two pieces were identical, insofar as they had been broken from the same pencil.

The iron bar used by the slayer is all that remains as a definite clew and police were unable to determine much after an examination of the man. Burke still is under arrest while authorities are checking his movements on Tuesday night.

The body of Miss Constance, accompanied by her aged mother and sister, Miss Margaret Constance, who is a teacher at Wesley college, Fargo, N. D., was taken tonight to Cumberland, Wis., for burial.

Seven rewards, including one of $1,000 offered by Northwestern university, have been posted for the capture and conviction of the slayer. Miss Constance, who was head of the English department of Bradley Polytechnic institute at Peoria, Ill., was taking a summer course at Northwestern university.

CANADA HAS REOPENED SOLDIERS' INSURANCE ACT

HARTFORD, Aug. 9—(AP)—According to a announcement made today by Maj. Thomas J. Bannigan, regional manager of the United States veterans' bureau of Connecticut, his office has been advised that the department of pensions and national health, Ottawa, Canada, has notified the bureau that the returned soldiers' insurance act has now been reopened for receipt of applications for insurance and that applications may be received until Aug. 31, 1929.

Major Bannigan further stated that the department of pensions and national health intends to furnish his office with literature bearing on the returned soldiers' insurance act, and that he will furnish the same to Canadian ex-service men who are interested in applying for this insurance. Information and applications may also be obtained direct from the Canadian department at Ottawa, Canada.

NEARLY 200 YACHTS ARE IN NEW LONDON HARBOR

NEW LONDON, Aug. 9—(AP)—With the arrival of Vincent Astor's yacht, Nourmahal, here tonight nearly 200 yachts were in the harbor ready to set sail tomorrow morning to Newport, R. I., in the first race of the annual cruise of the New York Yacht club. Included among the list of boats is the Vanitie and Resolute, famed rivals which will compete in all the races.

One of the most important of the races will be held Saturday over the Breton Reef lightship course outside of Newport harbor in competition for the Astor cup. From day to day the boats will continue racing to ports until they reach Marblehead.

MISSING COAST GUARD PATROL BOAT LOCATED

MIAMI, Fla., Aug. 9—(AP)—Coast Guard patrol boat No. 188 with a crew of eight men aboard, which has been missing off Fort Pierce since the storm of Tuesday, was located today by the steamship Berkshire, anchored 14 miles northeast of Cape Canaveral, according to word received this afternoon at Coast Guard base No. 6, Fort Lauderdale.

Commander Jordaan of Coast Guard base at Fort Lauderdale, dispatched two boats, CG-297 and CG-294 at 4 p. m. to the aid of the disabled craft and to take her in tow to the home base at Fernandina, Fla.

THREE MEN EXECUTED AT SING SING LAST NIGHT

OSSINING, N. Y., Aug. 9—(AP)—Three men were put to death in the electric chair at Sing Sing prison tonight. They were Daniel Graham, a New York policeman who robbed and killed a paymaster, he was assigned to guard; George Appel, who shot a police lieutenant who tried to arrest him, and Alexander Kilinowski, a convict at Auburn prison, who stabbed a keeper to death in an argument over prison rations.

Graham and Appel protested their innocence to the last. Kalinowski went to death admitting the crime for which he was convicted.

TO INVESTIGATE SHORTAGE OF $3,500,000 SECURITIES

Governor Baker of Missouri Has Directed Robert Daly, Actuary of State Insurance Department, to Take Charge of the Affairs of the International National Life Insurance Company of St. Louis.

JEFFERSON CITY, Mo., Aug. 9—(AP)—Governor Sam A. Baker today directed Robert Daly, actuary of the state insurance department, to take charge of the affairs of the investigation into International Life Insurance company of St. Louis. Daly is now in St. Louis inquiring into alleged shortage of $3,500,000 in securities.

ST. LOUIS, Aug. 9—(AP)—The Post dispatch said today it was informed from an authoritative source that insurance examiners have a written statement of Roy C. Toombs of Chicago, president of the International Life Insurance company, that he could not return $3,500,000 in "missing securities."

CHICAGO, Aug. 9—(AP)—The report published in the St. Louis Post Dispatch that Roy C. Toombs of Chicago had made a written statement declaring his inability to return $3,500,000 securities "missing" from the International Life Insurance company was termed without foundation today by a spokesman for Mr. Toombs.

"The report is not true," the spokesman said. "Mr. Toombs has given out no such statement."

REVISING ITINERARY OF REP. NOMINEE HOOVER

STANFORD UNIVERSITY, Cal., Aug. 9—(AP)—More chances in and additions to Herbert Hoover's itinerary on the return trip to Washington were announced tentatively today with rear platform speeches scheduled at Albuquerque, N. M., Hutchinson and Topeka, Kansas and other places.

The special train of the republican presidential candidate will leave here one week from tonight for Santa Barbara where a stop will be made early the next day so the nominee can attend a celebration there. Los Angeles will be the next stop with a reception at the civic center, and an address in which Hoover is expected to deal with some of the problems of southern California.

After the Los Angeles reception, Hoover will move on to Long Beach to attend the annual picnic there of former Iowans now resident of California. The present plan is for him to board his train there and make only a rear platform appearance at Pasadena.

The nominee will reach Kansas City on the night of August 20, remaining there for perhaps an hour. Arriving at West Branch early on the morning of August 21, he and Mrs. Hoover and their son Allan will have breakfast in the house in which Hoover was born. At seven p. m. that night he will make his second set address of the campaign.

ANOTHER WARM DAY AT SUMMER WHITE HOUSE

SUPERIOR, Wis., Aug. 9—(AP)—Another day of great heat smothered all urges for activity either at the summer white house or at the executive offices. Although today was no hotter than yesterday, President Coolidge decided to stick closer to the shade than he did yesterday when he spent many hours in the sun fishing on the Brule.

After angling for only a couple of hours early when the sun became too fierce, President Coolidge returned to Cedar Island lodge and devoted a little time to work and to reading. He found time, however, to send a message to Charles B. D. Collyer and John Henry Mears, congratulating them upon their recent feat in encircling the globe in record time.

Tomorrow he will make his semi-weekly visit to Superior to attend a large number of appointments.

President Coolidge was invited today to be a guest of Ringling Brothers, Barnum & Bailey circus which shows in Duluth next week. The president attended the circus in Washington last year and it was thought he might accept the invitation.

FIVE LIQUOR RAIDS MADE IN WATERBURY

WATERBURY, Aug. 9—(AP)—Seven men were arrested on liquor law violation charges when federal agents headed by Chief Enforcement Agent Stanton L. Briggs, of Hartford and Agent Edward Raffile, of New Haven, assisted by local police, raided five alleged liquor places near the center of the city this afternoon. Those arrested are Samuel Coyle, 461 West Main street, Patrick Moran, 693 South Main street, Anthony Morkis, 41 Meadow street, Albert Carron, of 15 Meadow street, Jack Locust of North Elm street, Vincent Palladino was placed under arrest as the conductor of the place at 18 Meadow street and Michael Brady will be notified, federal men said, to appear before U. S. Commissioner Edward J. Finn here at 10:30 o'clock tomorrow morning. Bonds for those arrested were set at $500. Varying quantities of beer and small amounts of liquors were seized at the places named.

Brady will be brought before the commissioner in connection with the raid at 693 South Main street, federal agents said.

SIGNED TRUCE TO JUTE AND BURLAP RATE WAR

NEW YORK, Aug. 9—(AP)—James A. Farrell, president of the United States Steel corporation, and head of the Isthmian Steamship line, announced today that through the instrumentality of the United States shipping board, American and British steamship lines have signed a truce to the jute and burlap rate war between India and American Atlantic and gulf ports.

Until a few years ago British companies brought all the jute and burlap from Calcutta and Columbo to New York and other Atlantic and gulf ports. Then the Isthmian line began a direct service, and last year the shipping board also entered the field. An intensive rate war and struggle for tonnage developed until the business became unprofitable.

STORM WARNING ISSUED BY WEATHER BUREAU

WASHINGTON, Aug. 9—(AP)—The weather bureau tonight issued the following advisory storm warning:

Tropical disturbance of considerable intensity attended by gales central tonight probably about latitude 16, longitude 71, moving west northwest at rate of about 18 miles per hour. Vessel captains are urged to send special observations of unusual conditions attending this disturbance for the benefit of shipping and inhabitants of the islands.

REQUESTS DISMISSAL OF SEN. GEORGE H. MOSES

SPRINGFIELD, Mass., Aug. 9—(AP)—Charles L. Burrill, of Boston, candidate for the republican nomination for lieutenant-governor in a letter to Herbert Hoover made public here tonight, asks the latter to dismiss Senator George H. Moses, of New Hampshire as head of his campaign in the east. He declares that the "presence of Senator Moses in your campaign is an affront to the voters of Massachusetts."

Among the charges he makes against Senator Moses are that "three times from his headquarters in New York he has prophesied the loss of a republican senator from Massachusetts;" that he "has sought to appoint as nominee his personal and social favorite who never won political office in his life," and that he "is hostile to the Volstead act."

"May I respectfully urge," the letter concludes, "that Senator Moses be invited to confine his activities to the state of New Hampshire where his idiosyncrasies are enjoyed and where understood. His curious aberrations, the source of many witticisms in the smoking room, do not appeal to the sober citizenry of Massachusetts."

MARKED IMPROVEMENT IN CORN PROSPECTS

WASHINGTON, Aug. 9—(AP)—A marked improvement in crop prospects during the month of July, particularly in the great plains area extending from Texas and central Colorado to Montana, was noted today by the crop reporting board of the department of agriculture which forecasts yields per acre about four per cent above the average of recent years.

Nearly all the grains and especially wheat and corn shared in the general advance due to excellent weather in most sections. The corn forecast of 3,020,000,000 bushels, based on conditions August 1, is an increase of 11 per cent in the department's production outlook of 2,736,000,000 bushels on July 1.

The report estimated the combined production of winter and spring wheat at 891,000,000 bushels compared with the July 1 estimate of 800,000,000 and last year's harvest of 873,000,000.

The apple crop forecast was for 178,970,000 bushels, a substantial increase over last year's very short crop of 123,455,000 bushels, but about ten per cent below the five year average production.

MRS. HELEN MARSHALL COMMITTED SUICIDE

NEW YORK, Aug. 9—(AP)—The police tonight reported that Mrs. Helen Marshall, wife of Minian Marshall, a vice president of the National City bank, committed suicide today by hanging in a bedroom of the Marshall's nine room apartment on Riverside drive. Mr. Marshall found the body suspended by an electric iron cord from a door in the bedroom. Ill health, it was said, caused the act.

The Marshall apartment is on the seventh floor of an exclusive apartment building.

Mrs. Marshall left a note, addressed to her husband. It was said to have declared she was sorry for what she was about to do, stated that her husband was "the best man in the world," and asked his forgiveness.

Mrs. Marshall had suffered from headaches for two months, and had been attended by the family physician, Dr. Horace E. Ayers.

HEARINGS CONCLUDED ON NEW BEDFORD STRIKE

NEW BEDFORD, Mass., Aug. 9—(AP)—The state board of conciliation and arbitration today concluded public hearings for the presentation of evidence in connection with its investigation of the textile strike here. A report placing the blame for the strike and its continuance will be rendered by the board at a later date.

It was apparent that whatever may be the outcome of the investigation, at the present time, the manufacturers and strikers were still far apart in their differences.

WIDOW WOULD NOT TALK OF LOWENSTEIN ESTATE

LONDON, Aug. 9—(AP)—Mrs. Alfred Lowenstein, widow of the Belgian financier who was killed in a fall from his airplane while over the English channel, refused tonight to comment on the published reports that Captain Lowenstein left an estate of 3,000,000 pounds after suffering losses of 12,000,000 pounds during the three weeks preceding his death.

Mme. Lowenstein, who is staying in a London hotel, also declined to comment on the terms of her husband's will or her own plans for the future.

PEACE AND ORDER PREVAIL IN JUGOSLAVIA

BELGRADE, Jugoslavia, Aug. 9—(AP)—Peace and order have thus far followed the death last night of Stefanas Raditch, leader of the Croatian peasant party. Chiefs of all political organizations have called up their followers to maintain calm, and they are exerting their influence against outbreaks.

This condition is expected to last at least until after the funeral of the picturesque Croat leader. The services will be held Sunday morning in Zagreb ancient capital of Croatia.

WINDHAM COUNTY FARMERS HOLD ANNUAL FIELD DAY

(Special to The Bulletin)

WILLIMANTIC, Aug. 9—There was an attendance of about 150 at the annual field day of the Windham County Farmers' association today. Visits were made to the farms of Kingsley Brown and L. P. Oehrig in Windham Center and Donald Kramer on Windham road in this city, the trip being made in automobiles belonging to the members of the organization. Shortly after noon a basket lunch was enjoyed and at 2:30 o'clock the formal speaking program was held on the green at Windham Center, addresses being made by the following: A. H. Amidon, president of the association; Alexander Maitland, vice president and treasurer; Whitman Danielson, secretary; Raymond H. Wing, county agent; Marion S. Watson, county club agent at Putnam; Benjamin W. Ellis, director of the extension service at Storrs; I. G. Davis, professor of agricultural economics at the Connecticut Agricultural college; and Frank L. Davis, assistant director of the New England dairy and food council and former Windham county agent.

The committee in charge of the field day comprised Carl B. Jewett of Hampton; S. H. Peckham of Woodstock; C. E. Salmon of Brooklyn; George A. Cook and Thomas Mara of Windham and J. Z. LaBelle of Killingly.

HURLED INTO DITCH FROM HIS AUTO

(Special to The Bulletin)

WILLIMANTIC, Aug. 9 — Amos Porter of No. 237 Valley street was rendered unconscious by being hurled in a ditch from his automobile at "Shanty Corners," about half way between the Columbia town line and Katzman's Corner about eleven o'clock Wedesday night. When he regained his senses he found the machine badly wrecked and ablaze, it being subsequently destroyed. Mr. Porter was unconscious about a half hour. He claimed that his left rear wheel collapsed and he was thrown from the car when the machine started to overturn. State police from the Stafford Springs barracks investigated the mishap today.

Invitations have been issued for the marriage of Miss Muriel Arline Harris, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Charles Edwin Harris of Easthampton, Mass., to Walter Scott Jordan, son of Mrs. Fred D. Jordan of No. 190 North street, this city. The ceremony will take place September 1st at the First Congregational church in Easthampton at four o'clock.

In police court this morning James Mullen of Lebanon was fined $5 and costs byb Deputy Judge Russell A. Andrews for intoxication. Another continuance was granted by the court, this time until next Monday morning, in the case of Mrs. Sarah Street of Suffield, charged with evasion of responsibility following an automobile accident.

Colonel J. Dwight Chaffee of No. 715 Main street, retired silk manufacturer, celebrated his 82nd birthday in a quiet manner at his home today. Mr. Chaffee was born in Chaffeeville in the town of Manafield, which was named after his father, Orwell S. Chaffee, and has been a resident of this city for the past thirty-eight years. He was formerly the owner of the Chaffee Manufacturing company whose products were silk braids, cords and fish lines for a period of thirty years. He retired last September when the interests of the concern were disposed of.

Mrs. P. S. Hills of "The Ridges" and Mrs. P H Albright of Winfield, Kansas, who are on a European tour, met the Rev. Harry S. McCready and his sister, Miss Sadie McCready of Portland, Me., formerly of this city, who are also touring the European countries, at Lake Luzerne, Switzerland, on July 26th. The meeting occasioned a pleasant surprise for both parties.

A miscellaneous shower was tendered Miss Beatrice Guilford Tuesday evening at the home of Mrs. Hazel Smith of Ash street. Games and singing were enjoyed and Miss Guilford received many choice gifts. A buffet lunch and cold drinks were served by Mrs. Grace Ashton and Mrs. Smith.

There were eight tables of whist in play at the Catholic Daughters' weekly whist in their rooms in the Capitol Theatre building Wednesday afternoon. Miss Mildred Pickett was chairman of the committee of arrangements which served refreshments. Mrs. Arthur P. Benner won the first prize while Mrs. Barbara Scranton received the consolation award.

Miss Alice Knight, her brother, William and Amos Porter, all of this city, spent Monday evening at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Richard H. Whyte in Windham Center. Mr. Porter gave an interesting account of his experiences in foreign countries while in the navy. Miss Knight entertained delightfully at the piano with banjo accompaniment by her brother. The evening was made still more enjoyable with singing and refreshments were served.

Mrs Paul Livingston, librarian at Yale university, who is a cottage guest at Columbia lake, is a patient in St. Joseph's hospital with a dislocation of the ankle and fractures of the tibia bone sustained Wednesday when she slipped and fell while nearing the water. Dr. Frederick E. Wilcox was called and attended her injuries.

The employes of the Tubridy-Weldon company held their annual outing Wednesday as the guests of the proprietor, Mrs. L. J. Tubridy at Pleasant View, R. I. Dinner was served and a very enjoyable day spent.

COLUMBIA LAKE MAN WAS FIRED UPON

(Special to The Bulletin)

WILLIMANTIC, Aug. 9—A shooting affair early last night on the west side of Columbia lake is under investigation by state police of Stafford barracks and Deputy Sheriff Harvey S. Collins of Columbia. C. B. Black, who has a place at the lake was the man at whom the shot was fired. Grand Juror Joseph N. Clark said this afternoon Black accused Raymond Keese of firing the shot at him while he was walking along the road. The shot, according to the statement made to the grand juror, was fired from a house near the lake owned by the father of Keese's wife. No arrests have been made.

MEMORIAL FIELD FOR WILLIMANTIC VETERANS

(Special to The Bulletin)

WILLIMANTIC, Aug. 9—Windham field will be purchased by the city as a memorial for veterans of all wars, according to the action taken tonight at a meeting of the special committee appointed with power by Mayor Charles A. Gates for that purpose. The committee gave a sub-committee authority to purchase the field at a price not to exceed $12,000 and another subcommittee was appointed to consist of Joseph R. Morrison, Wilfrid A. Gaunon and Alderman William E. Webber with General Chairman William E. Webber as ex-officio member to equip the park after the purchase is effected.

STATE POULTRYMEN TO MAKE ANNUAL TOUR

(Special to The Bulletin)

STORRS, Aug. 9—Connecticut poultrymen are expected to turn out in large numbers for the annual field trip of the Connecticut Poultry association, which beginning next Monday morning, will take chicken men of the state on a five-day tour of New Jersey where many of the largest and best poultry farms in that state will be visited.

"A real vacation with a financial return" is the way State Poultry Specialist Roy E. Jones of Storrs describes this year's poultry association tour. For in addition to observing how successful Jersey poultrymen run their farms, the Connecticut delegation will have the opportunity for one evening of play at Atlantic City; a visit to naval aviation station at Lakehurst, N. J., where the dirigible Los Angeles will be inspected; a tour of inspection of the New Jersey State Game Farm, a visit to Rutgers university and the agricultural experiment station, and also a visit at Princeton university. A number of poultry supply houses, incubator manufacturers, and the like will also be visited.

Poultry keepers and others interested in making this trip still have time to make reservations, according to Mr. Jones, who also made an estimate of what the trip would cost. Because of heavy traffic, the trip is being made this year in large busses rather than using many smaller cars. About 637 miles will be covered in five days, and the cost per person will be $16. Special rates have been obtained from hotels for rooms and meals, and Mr. Jones states that the expense for these should not be over $20.

The tour will get under way next Monday at 8 a. m. from the corner of High and Allyn streets, Hartford. Stops will be made to pick up passengers at the following places: 9.30 a. m. Garde Hotel, New Haven; 10.15 a. m. Stratfield Hotel, Bridgeport; 10:45 a. m. Davenport Hotel, Stamford; 11.00 a. m. Maples Hotel, Greenwich.

Trenton will be the stopping place of the tour on Monday night. Bridgeton, on the edge of the famous Vineland poultry district will be the headquarters Tuesday evening, and on Wednesday night the Connecticut delegation will stay at Atlantic City. On Thursday night the tour will stop at Asbury Park, and on Friday the return to Connecticut will be made.

UNION

Rev. and Mrs. Charles G. Fogg and their son, Edwin W. Fogg, called on friends here last Sunday afternoon while en route from their home in West Gloucester, Mass., to their island camp near Staffordville.

Mr. and Mrs. Robert Paine and their little daughter Marion motored from their home in Providence to spend a day with his uncle, L. M. Reed, and family recently.

Miss Mary Bradway and her friend, Miss Gertrude Miller, are spending a week at Northfield, Mass.

Miss Anna C. Sedlak, who is employed as a nurse in Municipal hospital, Hartford, spent two days last week with her parents, Mr. and Mrs. John Sedlak, and with her sister, Mrs. William Stehlick, at Staffordville.

There is quite an amount of hay waiting to be harvested. It was an unusually heavy crop, and with rain nearly every day or night it has been a hard proposition for the haymakers for many weeks.

Union is looking forward to meeting many friends on Saturday, Aug. 18, and Sunday, Aug. 19. The celebration will be held in the grove at the Center on Saturday. The events will be on daylight time. The speaking program will come at 1 o'clock. Phoenix band of Stafford will furnish music. A contest in baseball is announced for the single men and married men, as usual. There will be an Old Home day service in the church on Sunday, Aug. 19, to which everybody is cordially invited. The morning service will open as usual at 10 o'clock standard time.

Rev. and Mrs. H. A. Coolidge spent a day at Watch Hill, R. I., recently. They were accompanied by Mrs. Coolidge's sister and niece, Mrs. S. T. Dunckiee and Miss Alice G. Dunckiee, of San Monica, Calif., and friends from Beverley, Mass.

JEWETT CITY

TOWN TURNS OUT FOR BASEBALL PROCESSION

(Special to The Bulletin)

JEWETT CITY, Aug. 9—The whole town turned out Thursday evening and lined the streets to see the parade from Soule street to the ball ground. A state trooper with his motorcycle headed the procession and was followed by a platoon of police including Officers Veglard, Kolbus, Loranger and Siebelcaud. The Voluntown band, Eino Karjala, leader, came next.

Ed Blake and Chet Dudkowski attired in swallow tail coats, overalls and beaver hats made a touching picture on horseback. William McGovern drove an ancient carryall in which were seated Mayor Jodoin, Treasurer John Barnett and Burgesses McBroom, McDermott and Olson. Mr. McGovern wore a handsome purple velvet coat and his high hat was a finishing touch of elegance.

The piece de resistance was the old town hearse driven by Bib LeClaire attired in a fur coat. Beside him sat Bambino Hiscox, his high hat and black coat matching up with a pair of yellow overalls and denim shirt. A life size photograph of him was attached to the rear end of the hearse and appropriate mottoes adorned the sides.

George Tormey, the umpire carried a protective gun and was guarded by Jack Smith, Bub Benjamin, John O. Shea and Ed. Knox. Two of the base umpires, Ell Lague and Sol Paquette were also guarded. Cozy Dolan rode in Bud Jodoin's truck as a baby carriage large enough could not be obtained at such short notice. A number of automobiles followed.

The streets and sidewalks were fairly jammed with onlookers. At the ball ground over 2,000 people laughed and cheered. There were 110 automobiles parked on all sides. There is no town which is more of a home town than is Jewett City, when a town affair is slated. A tall hat collection brought in $69 which will be used to pay expenses, and leave a sum to which more will be added by two other ball games probably and then there will be a surprise for the public.

The Voluntown band played all during the game. They have been organized only a year and a half and on every hand they received most complimentary mention. The whole affair was one of the best get together times ever staged here.

Mayor Jodoin threw the first ball, and played like an old timer all through the game. Umpire Tormey is still alive to tell the tale.

It was an expectant crowd and the biggest and most enthusiastic crowd that has gathered at Ashland park to witness a baseball game since 1927; the year that Ashland cleaned up everything in the state.

Both foul lines were overrun and the grandstand filled when the parade arrived at the park. Everything went off like clock work and the promoters are to be complimented on the arrangements.

No sooner had the line of march broken up than Hal Chase stood at the plate with a big club in hand ready for the first pitch. Warden Jodoin was in the box and before the crowd realized it had officially opened play Ed's pitch was right through the grove and Hal took a lusky swing and would sure liked to have layed on it but that wouldn't do. Jim Dolan alias Cozy, heralded as the champ and the hope of the single men toed the slab. He was a determined looking roundsman and sure made an impressive appearance in his white flannel knickers. He shaped up very well but not as a pitcher and on the second ball pitched the married men had the jump as Hal crashed one to left for a single and but for a milk leg would have stretched it to two.

Milk Shake Chet Stafford, pitching for the married men, was the second hitter and on his infield out Hal went to second. A wild pitch advanced him to third. Bambino Hiscox ruined the ambitions Dolan had as a pitcher with a shot back at him that nearly dismembered him. Cozy managed to throw him out at first, Chase holding third. Mayor Jodoin then connected for a ripping single that scored Hal with the first run and the married men were out front never to be overtaken.

The mayor promptly stole second and scored on Eudor Leclaire's line single to left. Captain Chet Dudkowski, who by the way put up one of the finest exhibitions of third basing ever seen at the park, crashed another and then Johnny Leclaire of hardware fame smacked the longest hit of the game, a triple to deep center which would easily have been a homer but for the assistance of a spectator who threw the ball in. Right here the first argument of the game took place but Umpire Tormey, with stern gestures, ruled everybody out of order. This was Johnny's first game as a benedict and he put up a fine exhibition.

With a four run lead the plans of the married men to get the jump on their rivals was pretty well established and when the single men went out in order in their half it looked as though it would be a walkaway for Chet Dudkowski's proteges but this did not prove out very well as after the first inning it was a real battle but always with the married men leading. Captain Blake chased his much heralded twirling ace, Cozy Dolan, to the showers in the third inning. He came back after a rest but the base hits bounded off the married men's bats just the same. Pucky Rioux pitched pretty good ball for three innings but seemed in a hurry to get somewhere and didn't get anywhere. Dick Dudkowski also tried his hand at serving them up but there was no stopping the boys with the experience.

In the field the married men also showed to advantage making two snappy double plays at critical times. The most graceful play of the game came in the final inning when Mayor Jodoin was rushed into the box by the married men because of his speed ball and the approaching darkness. On the play in question a slow roller was hit to Bambino Hiscox between first and second, the mayor with a dash of speed covered first and with the grace of Annette Kellerman, Hitch tossed the ball to his honor.

The single men had some good players also and their outstanding star was Bib Leclaire with his vest pocket catches in center. Chief Boucher although reputed to have ability had little chance to show it in right field. Captain Blake tried several positions in an attempt to strike a winning combination and finally settled down on first base.

Cup Leclaire, a good ball player, was sadly out of position at third for the single men.

Rip Collins made a big hit in right field for the married men and if a few more balls had been hit in his territory the single men would have one.

Perhaps the most amusing play of the game occurred when Bud Jodoin of the single men was tagged out at second by E. Leclaire. It would be hard to describe this play.

The umpires, George Tormey, on balls and strikes and Ted Shea, Ell Lague and Sol Paquette on the bases had a comparatively easy time of it probably due to the advance safety preparations which were made. Tormey was more busy with the megaphone making various announcements than he was with balls and strikes.

The final score of 14 to 9 would indicate that the single men will have to strengthen up considerably for the second game of the series which will be played next Thursday night.

Free dancing in the Ashland casino after the game attracted the majority of the crowd who witnessed the ball game and the entire program is deserving of its place among the many notable community efforts attempted in Jewett City.

Follow the crowd to the dollar day sale at Zegeer's store, today and tomorrow. All summer merchandise selling less than half price. Big reductions on men's furnishing. Before going elsewhere come to our store and save money.—adv.

OBITUARY

Mrs. Herbert Gibson

The community was shocked Thursday to learn of the sudden death of Mrs. Herbert Gibson at her home on Green avenue. She has been in ill-health for some time, suffering from heart trouble. Her body was removed to Gager's undertaking rooms in Norwich and Friday afternoon will be taken to the home of her father in Hamilton avenue.

Mrs. Gibson was born in England 45 years ago and was the daughter of Thomas and Jane Hatton Ibbison. During her residence in Jewett City she was a member of the Congregational church of Jewett City uniting by letter January 3 1926. She was a member of the Ladies' society and was one of the most helpful and active on its committees. She is survived by her husband, A fourteen year old daughter Josephine of Jewett City and her father and three brothers William, James and Thomas of Norwich.

Joseph Rosenberg had an experience during the severe rainstorm Sunday which bid fair to being a disaster financially. He was driving home from New York when a few miles out of Norwich, the heavens opened and the rain descended almost without warning. On top of the machine were packed one hundred valuable dresses in paste board boxes. If it had not been for a thickly leaved tree under which he could park, the whole would have been ruined. For twenty-five minutes he had to remain there and his goods were saved by that means.

Mr. and Mrs. Allan Prior of Hartford, who are spending their vacation in North Woodstock were callers in town on Thursday.

Little four year old Matthew Exley, Jr., was successfully operated upon at St. Joseph's hospital Thursday. His mother goes Sunday to remain two weeks with him at the hospital.

Miss Frances Montgomery is visiting in Gloucester, Mass.

LEDYARD

Miss Matilda Avery of Colchester who is connected with the public libraries of the state has for the past two weeks been at the Bill library in Ledyard assisting and directing with Mrs. Ursula E. Avery, librarian at the Bill library. An inventory of the books contained therein, will be taken. Miss Louise Clark, Miss Lillian Main, Miss Hazel Gray and Miss Martha Babcock are helping in the work. It is expected it will take quite a while to complete the work.

"Son of man, stand upon thy feet as I can speak to you." was the subject of the discourse given by Rev. Ralph Krout in the Congregational church on Sunday morning.

Billings T. Avery and Andrew M. Avery have been appointed appraisers of the estate of Delano Sheldon, late of Ledyard.

Mr. and Mrs. Carl Holdridge, Paul Holdridge and Miss Priscilla Goodenough of Jewett City left on Monday morning for a week's vacation in the White Mountains.

Mrs. C. L. Vallette, who has visiting Mrs. C. D. Geer for the past two weeks has gone to Hartford to visit friends there before returning to her home in New York.

Mrs. Robert Gould of New York was a guest of Mrs. C. D. Geer during the week end.

Carl Holdridge was the leader of the Christian Endeavor meeting on Sunday evening.

This Nurse Tells How

To Heal and Prevent Infant Rash, Scalding and Chafing

Northampton, Mass.—"In my work as a nurse I find nothing heals rashes, chafing or a sore, inflamed skin so quickly as Sykes Comfort Powder. I am sending you a picture of a baby who suffered dreadfully from a baby rash—and I used Sykes Comfort Powder with great success after everything else had failed to heal it."—Mrs. C. K. Humphries, Nurse, Northampton, Mass.

The reason Sykes Comfort Powder is so successful in healing and preventing chafing, scalding, rashes and skin irritations is because it contains six, healing, antiseptic ingredients not found in ordinary talcums. Nurses call it "A Healing Wonder."

THE WORLD HAS A NEW AND FINER MOTOR CAR

Twin Ignition means Power, Speed, Economy

People who already have driven the new Twin-Ignition-motored Nash "400" have instantly realized its superiority in performance to cars with older types of motors.

In this new car, they discover more power and speed than they will ever care to use. They find a real thrill in the snap of Twin-Ignition traffic getaway.

Has Nash accomplished these remarkable results by building a larger motor—one with an enormous appetite for gasoline?

Or by building a high-compression motor that needs special, high-priced fuels?

The answer to both questions is, "No": Nash has developed new principles of high-compression motor construction which create more power, more speed, with ordinary gasoline, and less of it!

Today the Twin-Ignition, 12-spark-plug, high-compression motor powers all Nash "400" Advanced and Special Six models.

We'll let you drive a Twin-Ignition-motored Nash "400", anytime.

"OVER THE COUNTER"

DEAR DOT:

Well, I guess our old friend Mark Twain was right when he said, "If you don't like New England weather—just wait a minute!" The way we've been danced around from hot to cold and vice-versa would indicate that that old saw comes near hitting the spot. There's something cheerful about it however. There is the variety and again you'll never suffer from hardening of the arteries in this climate.

I was thinking the other day that I would like to write a book entitled The Romance of Commerce. That there is Romance in Commerce strikes me especially when I read over the advertisements in Th. Bulletin. Just stop to think of what a group of advertisements represent. You find there an entrancing combination of the old and new but whether in disguised form or native state, all the products of Nature brought to the mart for your convenience and comfort from the far corners of the world.

Advertisements keep you in touch with what Man is doing with Nature's Gifts. The result is presented to you in a skilfully made product retailed by the home-town Merchant.

The Merchant tells you the story of the World's Progress through his Advertisements. The Intelligent person grasps the opportunity for Economical and Educational benefits by reading the advertisements thoroughly. He purchases what he needs and the Merchant is encouraged to tell him more of the story of the World's Progress.

I find it very profitable to mention Bulletin advertising when making a purchase. It offers an inducement to the advertiser to use better advertisements and in many instances to offer better values of which you are free to take advantage.

I must stop now, however, and save up the rest of the material for my book.

Hoping that my little merchandising letters have been of some assistance to you, I am,

Yours, JANE.

COKE KINDLINGS

A SIMILARITY IN PRICES OF ALL SUMMER GOODS

Similar, in that they are all small; sort of overcome by the heat.

There aren't enough of any of them to brag about, nor enough to make a window display of any one kind.

So we grouped them; a few of this and a few of that, but all of them at such a low price that you can't fail to observe it.

If you happen to need any of the articles which are on display, just step into the store and look them over.

Our windows are intended to be of interest, and in that respect they are somewhat of a success; it is not unusual for some of our competitors to call us on the phone and make some inquiries regarding sizes, prices, etc. "for a lady in Windham" or sometimes "for someone in Storrs"—and we always tell them.

We figure that if they can't keep busy "minding their own business" they will not profit so very much by what they learn of ours.

Take a look into the window.

HELPING POSTAL DEFICIT

In connection with the postal deficit which the postmaster general anticipates in view of the increase that must be paid for transportation of the mails by the railroads for the past three years and henceforth, it is anticipated that the extra business that will be done through the lowering of the rates will increase the revenue. But it is hardly probable that the gain will counteract the $100,000,000 gain in the department's deficit which the postmaster general fears.

Congress was responsible for the lowering of rates, some of which was done against department advice, and lower rates usually mean more business. But the change in the rates and the bigger business that is done in the handling of tons of franked mail will not help to lower the deficit.

When it is disclosed in Washington that since the close of the last session of congress letters and literature to the amount of five tons a day, and carrying the frank of members of the house of representatives have been sent out, it can be appreciated that this boost in business is not going to help the revenue of the post office department.

This is the year of a presidential election, a year when all members of the lower house of congress are elected and a third of the senate. With such a large quantity of franked matter going through the mails so early in the campaign it is evident that it will be tremendously increased within the next several weeks. There is no limit to what may be expected in this direction, except it be the ability to prepare the matter for mailing and the ability of the postal service to handle it. How it is abused is shown by the action of one candidate for the senate in the state of Texas flooding the mails with 12 tons of matter for free distribution in his state. That means the postoffice department must handle it even though the big percentage of it goes into the waste basket unopened.

The franking privilege has been the cause for frequent attack but its evils still prevail. Its effect upon postal expenses is perfectly obvious.

GREATER FLYING SAFETY

It is possible these days through statistics to show that there has been a great advancement made in safety while flying. There are still enough accidents and fatalities but it is evident that a large number of these is due to stunting. In recognition of this and a desire to reduce the accidents Assistant Secretary Davison of the war department has prohibited the participation of army aviators in any air demonstration where stunt flying is permitted.

This must be looked upon as a move in the interest of greater safety. It should mean the prevention of some, at least, needless fatalities among the army flying force and it will be surprising if it does not stimulate others to similar action. If army and other fliers are forbidden to make any demonstrations in the air where stunt flying is allowed it seems logical that the number of fields where such is tolerated will quickly decrease.

Stunt flying has its hazards. There can be no other view, although when a flier is able to go through the various maneuvres it indicates not only skillful handling but evident ability to meet emergencies. It also demonstrates the stability of the machine. But if stunting is going to wipe out some of the best air pilots for no necessary reason it is a wise provision that aims at stopping it. Apparently the army is committed to such a policy and it will get widespread support.

In commercial aviation during last year planes on a fixed schedule flew a total of 2,650,000 miles while light commercial planes covered a distance of 19,000,000 miles. This flying does not mean the resort to stunts. It is a straight business proposition and during the year seven were killed in commercial aviation, six of them being pilots. That record of 350,000 miles of flying for each fatality indicates what may be expected from the elimination of the stunt flying with its hazards to those involved and all others who may be flying at such points. The need is by all means for greater safety instead of less.

THE ST. LAWRENCE WATERWAY

It is inevitable that there should be much discussion of the St. Lawrence waterway proposition at this time in view of the demands for it that comes from the states surrounding the lakes. They seek such an outlet to the ocean and they understand the part which the government must play in getting it. They know that the sentiment of the administration is favorable and they likewise know that Mr. Hoover is similarly inclined.

Advocacy of the different plans has resulted in no decision being reached as to which should be adopted. It is a big proposition, involving the expenditure of a large sum of money, but before any plans can be selected or any contracts let there must be an agreement on the part of the respective countries—the United States and Canada—as to whether they will join hands in the undertaking. Sentiment in both countries favors such a move but whether it is in the majority has never been determined.

Advantages rests with both countries. Those seeking the transportation that would be provided are urging it on this side of the border while those recognizing the advantages from the increased shipping facilities and the improved power opportunities are urging action on the other side.

There has been an interesting statement put forth by D. W. McLachlan, a Canadian member of the joint board of engineers which surveyed the project in which he shows that a vessel sailing from Port Arthur to Montreal would travel on the Canadian side of the line a distance of 481 miles and on the American side 671, while the international boundary would be followed for a distance of 63 miles. Thus it would appear that it is by no means a one sided proposition. It is a matter that involves both countries. It is the cheapest development that could be made and it is far more feasible than anything else that has been recommended. While national welfare is bound to get consideration in such a matter it is a project which permits of that on both sides of the line.

REBUKING REED

Eyes have been turned this week upon Missouri to note the effect of the primary in that state, with particular reference to the choice of candidates for the office of United States senator to succeed James A. Reed.

Senator Reed announced some time ago that he would not be a candidate to succeed himself. He was a candidate for the democratic nomination for president and maintained his fight "to the end of the road." He was among the also rans at Houston, pledged his support to the ticket nominated and immediately went back home to shape the state situation so that his successor would be in harmony with his views. He also made the fight there to the "end of the road". It was a hard and bitter fight. His candidate was J. A. Collett who is a wet. He was contesting against C. M. Hay a pronounced dry and long time foe of Reed. Senator Reed therefore had a double purpose in working for a Collett victory. It would not only eliminate a political foe but it would put a wet candidate on the Missouri ticket to help the presidential situation.

The voters of Missouri have been to the polls and expressed their preference. They have selected Mr. Hay as the democratic candidate for the senate, while the republicans have nominated Roscoe C. Patterson. In both instances the nominees are listed as dry.

It is impossible to look upon the outcome as other than a severe rebuke to the efforts of Senator Reed but also it indicates that the sentiment of the people of that state is for dry candidates and the effect of this action is not being lost upon those who are looking for straws for the presidential race from the Missouri primary.

STRENGTHENING DAMS

Various parts of the country have experienced high water and floods. This has meant that the dams in those regions have been put to an unusual test. Some of them have not been able to stand the strain. They have given away and with highly disastrous results. Bad as the floods were, the added water back of collapsing dams increased death and havoc.

Even though the lessons from weak dams and poorly constructed dams have been obvious, there have been repeated instances where on subsequent occasions similar disasters have occurred because warnings were not heeded, investigations were not made, or if they were made sufficiently prompt steps were not taken to prevent old and weak structures from giving way.

There was a general recognition of the desirability of testing all dams following the going out of certain ones which caused so many deaths and so much destruction. Probably such tests served to allay fear and satisfy the demands, but there cannot fail to be a feeling of greater safety when operations are actually started to repair or replace dams of uncertain age where fears for their stability have been entertained for some time.

It is gratifying that existing dams have always withstood every test that has been made upon them. Many of them are without question so constructed as to do so. That gratification grows all the stronger when structures which have caused anxiety in the past, even though they have not collapsed, receive the attention that will replace uncertainty by certainty. Prevention is better than the folly of waiting until something actually happens.

EDITORIAL NOTES

The man on the corner says: If you want to pick a fine afternoon get the advice of the clerks.

Unlike most Americans, Mr. Blackmer doesn't seem to relish the idea of coming home from Europe.

If you think you can do it, try to convince the iceman these days that he's the most fortunate individual on earth.

Chicago is telling the country that there is no danger in that city outside of the murder belt. Why doesn't Chicago eliminate that?

Report has it that the prince of Wales has taken off his waistcoat because of the heat. Will it ever be warm enough for him to appear in his shirtsleeves?

Those who worry about what might happen if Tunney should change his mind, should realize that he can go back and get the championship when he wants it if he doesn't wait too long.

Having been making a political swing around the country after returning from the Houston convention and said to be so tired he needs a rest, the people of New York city may wonder some day why such a mayor is necessary.

THE WORLD AT FOURTEEN.

"Women waste an awful lot of time" said Ernestine, who had dropped in on her way home across the street, "talking. Now, if they actually said something it wouldn't matter so much, but you can't imagine the way they go on being polite and chatty and not meaning anything!

"I'm always so busy when mother's friends are in that I never noticed it before, but after yesterday I'll say I've had a liberal education! You see, mother was to take telephone reservations for the club party and she had to go in town to see the dentists and so I was to answer the phone and take them for her. Just as she went out the door she said, 'By the way, everybody will begin by saying, "Is this Mrs. Adams?" And it will save time and a tiresome explanation for you just to say yes and take their names down.' I was thrilled at the idea and I practiced saying in quite a deep voice, 'Yes, this is Mrs. Adams,' and it was so funny I couldn't stop laughing, all by myself, in the house. Only, mother's voice isn't deep, but about the same as mine. When you come to think about it you sort of feel that a grownup, married woman should have a voice that sounds kind of dignified and important—maybe thinking about it was what made me talk that way to the first telephone call, which was Mrs. Grumm.

"'This is Mrs. Grumm, Mrs. Adams,' she said. 'Dear me, I expect you feel just dreadful with that awful cold—your voice shows it—have you tried the new soda cure for colds, my dear?'

"That sounded grand to me, for I adore sodas, so I said no but I'd certainly like to and would a chocolate soda help and how many would I have to take. Mrs. Grumm sort of hesitated and then laughed the way people laugh when they think you expect them to, only they don't know what it is all about. Then she said, 'well, really, but soda did help even if I didn't believe it, and to please put her down for two reservations. The next time I get a cold, and I'm sure I'll have one soon, I'm certainly going to try it.

"'Yes, this is Mrs. Adams,' I said to the next person and right away she burst out, 'Oh, this is Josephine Fish. I don't see how you kept so calm when that atrocious Barker woman spoke up yesterday! My dear, how did you keep your wonderful poise? Weren't you a tall upset and mad? If I were in your place I'd have blown up sky high and told her exactly what I thought.

"'All of us were talking about it and said it was only your naturally sweet disposition and tact. My goodness, I can't begin to remember all the things the Josephine lady said and I was scared to death, so when she stopped a second to catch her breath I broke in, trying to be calm and reserved, you know, and said "Will you please tell me the number of reservations you want," and she sort of gasped and said, oh, she was sorry, she didn't know it was a private matter and just to forget she's said anything and put her down for one.

"I got along all right with the next half-dozen because they just gave me their names and rang off. Then came Mrs. Summers, Jessie Summers is in my class, only mother doesn't care for Mrs. Summers. She wears funny clothes and from the back you'd think she was about 16, and she talks fast and high—but she has the most luscious cream cake at her house, and doesn't care how we girls muss things up, and I am sure if mother knew her better she's see her good points. Mrs. Summers said put her down for two reservations, and, Oh, Mrs. Adams, I have a friend visiting me; she's a widow; you can't imagine what that girl stood before she just up and left the brute—and she's so attractive! She could marry a marvelous man right this minute if she wanted to—I want you to come to a nice, cozy luncheon with us next Friday, will you? I would like you to hear Helen's story from her own lips, and she's so anxious to make friends here, and you know everybody—I hope you can come?"

"She sounded awfully anxious, as though her heart was set on it, and I said, why, of course I'd come, that it would be lovely—and that's what upset mother most when she got home and asked what had happened over the phone."

"She said she wouldn't be caught dead going to lunch at the Summers woman's house, and that she had been trying for ages to edge into mother's crowd, and why did I take it upon myself and what on earth should she do? You feel just dreadful with that awful cold—your voice shows it—have you tried the new soda cure for colds, my dear?"

"That sounded grand to me, for I adore sodas, so I said no but I'd certainly like to and would a chocolate soda help and how many would I have to take. Mrs. Grumm sort of hesitated and then laughed the way people laugh when they think you expect them to, only they don't know what it is all about. Then she said, well, really, but soda did help even if I didn't believe it, and to please put her down for two reservations. The next time I get a cold, and I'm sure I'll have one soon, I'm certainly going to try it.

"'Yes, this is Mrs. Adams,' I said to the next person and right away she burst out, 'Oh, this is Josephine Fish. I don't see how you kept so calm when that atrocious Barker woman spoke up yesterday! My dear, how did you keep your wonderful poise? Weren't you a tall upset and mad? If I were in your place I'd have blown up sky high and told her exactly what I thought.

"'All of us were talking about it and said it was only your naturally sweet disposition and tact. My goodness, I can't begin to remember all the things the Josephine lady said and I was scared to death, so when she stopped a second to catch her breath I broke in, trying to be calm and reserved, you know, and said "Will you please tell me the number of reservations you want," and she sort of gasped and said, oh, she was sorry, she didn't know it was a private matter and just to forget she's said anything and put her down for one.

YOUR HEALTH

ALLERGY

By Zella White Stewart, M. D., Iowa City, Iowa.

"What is one man's meat may be another man's poison."

Hay fever and asthma are due to allergy—a hypersensitiveness to protein—and attacks may be caused by inhalations of dust from dander, hair of animals, or pollen from plants; or wheezing and sneezing may come from proteins in such foods as eggs, cheese, and wheat. Surprising reactions occur to tests; over two hundred skin tests have been found positive.

One patient has hay fever from March to fall frosts; the sneezing starts from pollens of oak, maple and elm trees, followed by grass and ragweed; he reports great improvement from vaccines and avoidance of the causes.

The fight against these diseases may be sacrificial. A patient was forced to move because of feathers in the apartment below. One woman can ride in a Ford and not in a Lincoln on account of the mohair lining. One man who reacted to feathers had to sell his chicken farm; a little girl was forced to give up her canary.

Feathers are the cause of most cases of asthma. One woman had asthma fifteen years, had slept on feathers fifteen years; moved, lost her feather bed lost her asthma. One woman had asthma three years: frequent injections of adrenalin were necessary. When removed to a room free from feathers and wool she experienced immediate relief. No more asthma, no more adrenalin.

One boy reacted to dog and feathers, and when feathers were banished from the house, not only was he cured, but a sister became free from colds and bronchitis.

Dr. T. suffered from asthma. She reacted to horse hair, feathers, potatoes and strawberries. Upon removal of these the asthma was cured, and sinus trouble, which had resisted operations, cleared up.

A boy in Minnesota had asthma. A trip to Texas cured him. He begged for his bull pup, which was sent south. The trouble returned: he reacted to dog hair. Pup eliminated—boy cured—climate exonerated.

A professor in biochemistry suffered severely from asthma before it was discovered it was from the cats in his research laboratory. No cats, no asthma!

Orris root is a great offender. A woman had asthma for twelve years and had powdered her nose for twelve years. Change of climate was of no avail; she carried her asthma with her in her powder puff: cured by powder minus orris root.

The cause can be found in every case, when the patient is tested repeatedly and his surroundings carefully investigated.

LETTERS TO THE EDITOR

The Buckingham Memorial

Mr. Editor: I, too, admire "Dad" Shaw's letters. They are interesting. As careful as a writer can be he sometimes hits the cord that starts a tune. This time it was condition of the Buckingham Memorial. Letter-writing gives a different tone than talking but I for one, not a member of either of the ladies' orders of the G. A. R. but a true born daughter of a living Civil war veteran, am interested in the Memorial. I know of a Relief Corps member having everything planned out to get the assistance of a well known business man who handles local drives to start a drive to repair the leaking roof and scrape and paint the outside walls of the Buckingham Memorial. When brought up at a meeting some of the elderly members of the corps put their foot down hard and said "No: it is begging." Now are the drives for our Y. M. C. A., hospital, Salvation Army, Boy Scouts and other organizations which go over the top, looked upon as begging or charity? No! Why not put this over the top. Let the public point to the Buckingham Memorial and say I helped the few old veterans to look with pride on the building they enjoy to sit in, on the porch and under the magnolia tree for the few last days they have to stay with us. And then let us hope they give the Building to all future veterans who have come after them in serving our flag and country. Dad Shaw, W. R. C. and the Central Village admirer of the G. A. R., have started something. Now let the public give their dimes and dollars as freely as possible. I believe John H. Perkins of the Dime bank and Arthur L. Peale of McKinley avenue look after the G. A. R. building for the vets.

A REAL DAUGHTER OF A VETERAN.

Face the Facts

Mr. Editor: It is refreshing to read A. B. Lincoln's letter under the above caption in the Bulletin of today.

People who only inhale and utter opinions will not be interested in what Mr. Lincoln and other great authorities have to say about alcohol and its place in the list of physical agencies that act upon the human system only disastrously. For the time is long past when it could pass, either as a food or a medicine.

Long before that it was well known as a deranger of the human brain and a moral corruptor of society and a universal curse beyond comparison.

A former Norwich temperance promoter and advocate before we had the Volstead law used to make this public declaration:

"Show me a man that is in favor of the liquor traffic and I will show you a man who either likes it himself, or is interested in its sale by having friends in the business, or rents buildings for conducting the trade."

This definition holds good everlastingly. Any nominally moral or religious man who has a word to say against the 18th amendment to the Constitution or would cast his vote for the election of a public officer who publicly or privately has a good word for the stuff, past, present or future, is a foe to society and its moral health and political progress. Just as it has been designated by the Rev. J. R. Straton of New York, and yet we find members of his congregation, who of course should stand by in support of him, uttering their wooden headed disclaimers ahead of the discussion, showing their attitude. One would think that bare decency would cause them to keep their mouths shut until after the battle between the contestants, if they cannot be loyal to their own interests.

The Boulder Dam Proposition

Danielson, Conn., Aug. 8.

Mr. Editor: It is a pleasure for an Imperial valley resident, temporarily sojourning at his boyhood home in Connecticut, to note your editorial on the Boulder Canyon dam question and to realize that a problem affecting more than 25 per cent of the area of the United States is at last recognized as no longer one of purely local interest.

It is possible to visualize the problem of the Colorado for the benefit of your readers briefly by mentally transferring it to the New England states. Let Connecticut represent Lower California, in Mexico, Massachusetts take the place of California, with the Colorado river in the place of the Connecticut, running between Arizona and Nevada instead of between New ampshire and Vermont.

Suppose the Connecticut drained all of eastern Canada as far west as Lake Erie, in addition to its present area. Then something of the problem that faces the Imperial valley, far below sea-level, may be realized. All of its water for irrigation is derived from the Colorado river, which also runs along its outer edge in Mexico. The river, being above sea-level, is kept within its banks during the long flood season, only by rock revetted levees, against which the river rages.

Carrying a heavy percentage of silt or soil, the Colorado constantly tends to dam itself up at the mouth, the Gulf of California, causing the silt to be deposited through the delta and in turn raising the water level against the levees. Ten years ago the Imperial valley, at a cost of $500,000, cut a new channel for the river through the delta. The time is approaching when this job again must be undertaken at an expense of several times this amount.

The United States government has in times past recognized a responsibility to maintain flood control on the Colorado as well as on the Mississippi by appropriations of more than a million dollars for aid of levee work. However, as the job must be done in the republic of Mexico, many difficulties arise.

California initiated the Boulder Canyon dam project to obtain permanent flood control for the Imperial valley. As no storage basin of adequate size lies below Boulder or Black canyon, this site was selected after investigations of several years and the expenditure of half a million dollars in test diamond drilling and the assembling of data by the United States reclamation service. Part of the funds were provided by the government and the remainder by the city of Los Angeles and the Imperial and Coachella valleys in California.

It was evident congress would not appropriate enough money for a storage dam unless assurance of repayment could be assured. This led to the proposal that electricity be generated through power contracts under the jurisdiction of the secretary of the interior. To assure that the government be reimbursed for its expenditure, the Swing-Johnson bill has provided the government could construct the power plant and sell the power at the switchboard if no reasonable offers were made. Further, the bill provided that before construction of the dam be inaugurated, these contracts must be signed.

The city of Los Angeles desires to use water from the Colorado river to supplement its present needs. This makes it necessary to pump the water over 1,700 feet high. Los Angeles went into the power business to use profitably the drop in its own aqueduct from the Sierra Nevada mountains. To supplement this electricity and to secure a quantity sufficient to pump the Colorado river water to the Pacific coast plains at a reasonable figure, Los Angeles stands ready to handle the government power contracts.

To prevent this move is the purpose of the power trust opposition to the Boulder Canyon dam project. California public utilities, like those of many other states, are operated on the cost-plus system. Government experience with the cost-plus idea in the war taught the futility of attempting to obtain low prices under such plans. The city of Los Angeles has made a startling financial success at low rates of its power business and the power trust fears the comparison on a larger scale. Hence the powerful opposition from that quarter.

In eastern states, the riparian right doctrine governs the flow of rivers.

The Fellowship of Pain.

The post will sing of the house by the road,
Where the friend of mankind abides;
Another will sing of lifting their load,
While walking along by their sides.
Each post, no doubt, sees a service complete
In his own chosen angle or way;
But the Master of man would humbly entreat
For the service of both, I dare say.

Yes, our Master knows both the road and the home,
For the weary who plead for rest;
And those who are out on life's highway to roam,
He will take as His humble guest.
So someone must render an aid to these men,
Through the day as they carry their load,
And give them a shelter when long nights begin,
A home by the side of the road.

There are men who need just a word of good cheer,
And others with wounds to be healed;
There are some who have souls that are burdened with fear,
Yet these to the world are concealed.
Let me speak a kind word to the weak ones each day,
Let me see that the hungry are fed;
For the wounded I pray for a house by the way
With soft cots for their weary heads.

There's a service to give in life's roadway each day,
For the crowds that go rushing by,
And I could not remain in my house by the way
And watch this in silence, not I.
But I'd go to their side, and help bear their load,
And then I would cheerfully say—
"I'm glad I can walk with the men in the road,
As I live in my house by the way."

—By Tessa Webb.

This involves the right of the owner of land on the lower reaches of a river to require the continuance of the flow past his property without diminution. Connecticut has cited the riparian right doctrine to prevent the metropolitan reservoir district of the Boston area from diverting streams which normally would flow through Connecticut.

The western states are governed by the prior right doctrine. This enables the owner of land who first uses the water for irrigation to continue its use, regardless of his position up or down the river. Practically all of the land in the Rocky mountains and on the Pacific coast is absolutely dependent upon irrigation or storage during some portion of the year. Without the prior right laws, continuance of any community would be precarious.

Building of a storage dam on the Colorado would, in the view of the authorities of the states of Wyoming, Colorado, Utah, New Mexico, tend to permit the states of Arizona, Nevada and California to acquire water rights in excess of those now possessed, the low flow of the river being exhausted, because the Imperial valley diverts the entire Colorado river at low stages.

The upper states also fear they would be deprived of water which in later years may profitably be used by them. In Lower California, Mexico has nearly a million acres of land susceptible of irrigation. Since not enough water is available for all the land along the river, each acre irrigated in Mexico means one less in the United States.

This situation led to the Colorado river compact, providing for distribution of the water between the upper and lower basins.

California surrenders its prior rights when it signs the Colorado river compact, and has made its signing contingent upon adequate storage.

The proposed dam is to be built between the Arizona and Nevada banks. So far, Arizona has refused to sign the Colorado river compact without forcing terms from California so onerous as to jeopardize the financial success of the entire project, demanding the equivalent of $3,500,000 royalty annually, for Nevada and Arizona, a sum greatly in excess of the tax upon private property in like position.

Nevada is content with a lesser amount. Arizona's position is evidently due to the hope that the project will fail and another may be built farther up the river, entirely on Arizona soil, thereby permitting the state to secure the entire royalty.

Much opposition to the project has been built upon the theory it would not stand close examination. California welcomes the investigation by the special commission of engineers and geologists. If the project is not sound, we, who must pay the bills, are as anxious as anyone to know it.

Recent investigations by the federal trade commission divulged the fact that many supposed independent investigators were on the power trust payroll and all that is asked is that men of that character be not included.

Very few investigators who have personally visited the project have failed to endorse it. House Leader John Tilson of Connecticut is a notable example of those who were opposed until he saw the Colorado river in flood last year. He changed his mind and became one of the Swing-Johnson bill's warmest supporters.

Unfortunately, scarcely another New England representative or senator ever has acquired a personal acquaintance with the exact situation and they seem to have been the victims of inspired propaganda.

If the people of the industrial east realize that the Imperial valley annually purchases more manufactured goods of various kinds from the United States than the Philippine Islands and China, they may acknowledge the loss of this market is worthy of consideration.

KELLY DENIES WALSH CAN DEPOSE HIM

Of course Mr. Walsh has no power to depose me from the democratic state central committee, said Judge Thomas J. Kelly of this city, the member from the 19th district, when questioned Thursday night concerning the report of such a threat made by Chairman James J. Walsh of the state central committee. The only way Judge Kelly can cease to be a member of the state central committee at the present time would be by resigning and he does not intend to resign, he says.

The row between Walsh and Kelly came to a head Wednesday night at Ocean beach at a conference of committee members of the second congressional district at which, it is understood State Chairman Walsh advanced a suggestion for a district meeting with a dinner at Norwich. This was opposed by Judge Kelly and when the state chairman suggested that the Norwich man retire from the state central committee in favor of some one more in harmony with the ideas of the organization as presented by Walsh, the Norwich man left the meeting.

Caustic criticism was also made by Chairman Walsh it is understood, of John F. Hennon of Jewett City, twentieth district member of the state central committee and the charge was made that there are too many town chairmen in this district who do little except to hold their titles.

The dispute over the place of the convention has its incention in the fact that William M. Citron of Middletown, minority leader of the house in 1927, is going to have to make a fight if he wants to make the run for congress. The district is a big one, including four counties, and it is felt that the place of the convention may be of a strategical advantage to the candidate whose delegates are concentrated in the environs of the convention town. Citron's men naturally, would like to have the convention in Middletown, but Kelly is chairman of the committee, and has the selection of the convention place. He says the convention is going to be in Norwich, which is not going to hurt the candidacy of ex-Senator Hermon Gibbs of Norwich, unsuccessful candidate for congress two years ago, who wishes to try again.

There has been filed an invitation from the Willimantic chamber of commerce to hold the district convention there, but that doesn't move Mr. Kelly even a little bit. Willimantic is not far from Norwich, in fact is much closer to the nucleus of the Gibbs strength than it is to Citron's hallwick, but Willimantic happens to be the home town of Robert O. Snow, former superintendent of the state capitol building under the comptrollership of the late Daniel Dunn and Mr. Snow has been writing letters to his friends in various parts of the district in which he has set forth his willingness to serve the district in the lower house of congress.

While supporters of the other contenders made light of Mr. Snow's chances, it was learned from Windham county leaders that he will come into the convention with a sizeable block of delegates from that territory and probably will have it in his power to cause a deadlocked convention.

MAY AND OCTOBER ARE CONNECTICUT MOVING MONTHS

More than 75,000 families in Connecticut move their places of residence each year according to an estimate based upon orders filed with gas companies for changes in the registration of gas meters. Since gas has become a universally used fuel for cooking and water heating, the gas companies are usually among the first to whom people confide information that they are about to make a change of residence.

In fact, if one is to have gas for cooking and heating in his new residence, he must notify the gas company of his intention of moving, for the company must alter the records of its meter reading and bookkeeping departments before the gas supply is shut off at the old residence and turned on at the new. This is especially true when the place of residence is shifted to a new building for then it is necessary for the gas company not only to alter its records, but also to install a meter. When changes of residence are made to buildings which have been previously occupied it is customary for the company to leave the meter which served for the previous tenant and to change the registration of that meter in its books.

The gas companies have found that more people choose to do their moving in the months of May and October than in other months. Both fall just between season when the use of gas for heating is at its height. During those months, the gas company service crews are kept continuously busy shutting off meters in one building and connecting them in others. The opening of new real estate subdivisions and residential districts also puts much work to the gas company, for in these cases new mains must be laid in order that the new residents may find gas awaiting them.

IMMERGRUEN LODGE TEAM DRILLED FOR DEGREE

The uniformed degree team of Immergruen lodge, No. 10, O. D. H. S., of this city, consisting of 24 women under the leadership of Mrs. Carl W. Schlienz, attended the meeting of Edelweiss lodge, No. 11, O. D. H. S., Wednesday evening at New London and executed drills during the initiation of a New London lodge candidate. The Norwich degree team was loudly praised by the New London lodge for its work.

FOUR IN HOSPITAL AFTER HARTFORD AND WATERBURY CARS COLLIDE

(Special to The Bulletin)

COLCHESTER, Aug. 9—One more automobile crash at Salem Four Corners on the Hartford-New London turnpike occurred today, Hartford and Waterbury men driving the two machines involved. Four persons, occupants of the Hartford car, are patients in the Lawrence-Memorial hospital at New London with more or less severe injuries.

Mrs. Joseph Andelman of 1910 Main street, Hartford, has a fractured right clavicle, possible fractured skull, lacerations and abrasions. Her husband, who, it is understand, was the driver of one of the machines, has numerous lacerations. Frank Rose of 32 Florence street, Hartford, suffered bruises and shock. His wife had her left hip injured.

Thomas Quigley of Waterbury, who was driving the other machine in the collision was not injured, it is understood.

The crash took place shortly before noon today. The Waterbury machine, which was a Buick roadster, was proceeding from East Haddam towards the corner and as it reached the Hartford turnpike ran into the right side of the Andelman car, which was an Auburn sedan, and which was traveling towards New London.

The force of the blow tore the body of the sedan completely off the chassis and its occupants were stunned and dazed as they were extricated from the wreckage to be taken to the hospital in the ambulance which had been summoned.

On the way to the hospital the ambulance broke down, it was reported, delaying the arrival of the injured persons at the institution.

The Waterbury roadster had its radiator crushed and the axle of one front wheel broken.

Mr. Rose is the proprietor of the Rose Furniture exchange at No. 1242 Main street, Hartford, and Mr. Andelman is the owner of "Palm Gardens," an East Hartford road house.

There were two children in the car, beside the other passengers it is understood, but both escaped serious injury. One was a daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Rose, the other Fenia Lipman, who lives with the Rose family.

State policemen from the barracks at Groton made an investigation of the crash.

Half an hour after this accident another crash was narrowly averted at the corners.

FUNDS FOR SANATORIA ARE HOLDING OUT WELL

According to the books of the state tuberculosis commission of the amount appropriated for the maintenance of the five sanatoria during the current biennium ending June 30, 1929, a little over half has been spent for the first half of the biennium, showing that the commission has an excellent chance of not having to ask for a deficiency appropriation for their maintenance. Only once since the commission was organized in 1910 has it had to go to the legislature for such an appropriation.

For the current two year period there was $1,800,000 available for the maintenance of these five state institutions, Uncas-on-Thames at Norwich, Laurel Heights at Shelton, Seaside in East Lyme, Undercliff at Meriden and Cedarcrest at Hartford. Of these funds the expenditures for the fiscal year ended June 30, 1928, or the first half of the biennium, totaled $903,528.43, according to the commission's books, leaving a balance of $896,471.57 for the present fiscal year, or second half of the biennium. Included in these expenditures for the last fiscal year were numerous repairs and alterations, which items are not expected to be as heavy during the present year.

During the current biennium all five institutions have been running at full capacity in infirmary patients. At Uncas-on-Thames, where there are more of this class of patient than at any of the other sanatoria, there was no vacancy during the last fiscal year, 222 patients receiving treatment there the year round. For so-called "shack" cases, there have been only about fifty vacancies a year altogether at the five hospitals during the last two or three years. The infirmary cases are more numerous, however, and during the present biennium there has been a waiting list of about 170 persons.

It is interesting to note, says the commission report, that of these 170 persons on the waiting list, about ninety-five or 100 are men. There have been more than seventy men on the waiting list for the last two or three years.

The five sanatoria have never witnessed such a busy year as the fiscal year just ended, the report states. About 800 patients were, and still are, being cared for at the five institutions, the greatest number they have ever had. The commission recently tried to get the legislature to appropriate enough money for another infirmary but failed. There is an urgent demand for it, the commission feels.

WILL WITNESS TRIAL OF SHEEP HERDING DOGS

Frank T. Maples, former secretary of the New London County Agricultural society, and Franklin A. Smith of New London are leaving next Monday to attend the field trial of sheep herding dogs to be held on Fillmore farms, Bennington, Vt. This meet is under the auspices of the New England Sheep Breeders' association, and will bring together the greatest and best representation ever held in the United States. The skill and training of the dogs will be demonstrated by single and team dogs sent out to the field to herd and pen the sheep. The meet will be held on a farm near Bennington which has the largest herd of Dorset horned sheep in New England.

Prof. Tirrell of Storrs college, who is to again judge the cattle and sheep at the county fair this year, will also attend the meeting at Bennington.

Mr. Maples will make arrangements to secure the winning team as a free attraction at the coming fair. This will prove extremely interesting and entertaining, as the dogs will perform with such sheep as will be exhibited at the fair proving the actual value of their training by working with sheep they have never been in contact with.

This feature will be one of the many in helping to make this year's fair distinctive and interesting.

OBITUARY

Joseph T. Rondeau

The death of Joseph T. Rondeau, 27, of No. 257 Main street, who was taken to the Backus hospital in the ambulance from his home about 1 o'clock Thursday morning from alleged overindulgence in liquor, occurred about two hours later at the hospital. Acute alcoholism was given as the cause for death by Medical Examiner Dr. C. C. Gildersleeve.

Mr. Rondeau was born in Taftville, the son of Napoleon and Naovina Potvin Rondeau, and for some time had been employed by the Sunshine Laundry. In 1927 at Detroit he was united in marriage with Margaret C. Foley of New Jersey, who survives him with a son, James Joseph. He also leaves five brothers, Peter, Henry, Napoleon, Adelard and Paul Rondeau and five sisters, Mary Louise, Eldie, Rose, Delema and Aura.

Entertained in New London

Mrs. Ernest Newbury, department president of the Daughters of Union Veterans; Mrs. Lillian Brewster, department secretary; Miss Gladys Newbury, department guide; Mr. and Mrs. Milford E. Newbury, Miss Faith Louise Newbury and Floyd Hiscox, all of this city, were special guests Wednesday afternoon and evening of Mrs. Harriet Anderson of Brookside Farm, New London, when she entertained Ana Rogers tent, Daughters of Union Veterans of the Civil War, and members of W. W. Perkins Women's Relief corps and Jared Avery camp, Sons of Union Veterans of the Civil War, all of New London.

Bishop John J. Nilan announced the transfer of the Rev. Thomas P. Mooney from St. Patrick's church, Mystic, to the pastorate of the newly organized parish at Bridgeport. The Rev. John P. Kennedy of Sacred Heart church, New Haven, goes to Mystic as pastor.

MEMORIAL TABLET FOR 56TH REGIMENT RECEIVED

The 56th regiment memorial tablet, dedicated to the men of the 56th who made the supreme sacrifice, has arrived in New London and is on exhibition in the window of a florist store.

The dedication of this tablet took place last September at Fort H. G. Wright during the 10th reunion of the regiment but because the tablet had not been completed a card board replica was used, as plans for the dedication had been made and widely advertised.

The handsome bronze tablet has been on exhibition in various Connecticut cities where 56th regiment veterans live and finally Christopher B. Berry, president of the 56th association for this county, had the tablet brought to New London.

After it has rested in New London for several days, it will be sent to Bridgeport to be on exhibition at the annual reunion there of the 56th regiment the second Sunday in September. Then it will go to Fort Wright where it will be set as a permanent resting place.

The tablet measures three feet square and the inscription on the bronze is as follows:

"56th.

"In Memoriam

"This tablet—hallowed be the memory of those who made the supreme sacrifice is erected in commemoration of the men of the—56th Regiment, C. A. C.—who during the World war of 1917-1918 served their country with loyalty and zeal.

"Erected by the surviving members of the 56th C. A. C. at their 10th anniversary, 1927, Fort Wright, L. I. S.

STATE'S POWER UTILITIES HELP FARM EXPERIMENTS

Connecticut power and light utilities who have for the past five years been participating in the extensive experimentation work on several New Hampshire farms to determine possible uses for electricity in farm operation have decided with other New England companies to continue the work for another two years in order that complete data upon all operations may be had.

Through the statistics compiled on the experiment, the utility companies hope to determine what percentage of human, animal and machine labor involved on these farms may be profitably performed by electricity, and to learn for themselves whether or not the use of electricity in farming is sufficient to pay an adequate return upon the huge investment which would be required to extend lines into rural sections of Connecticut and the other New England states.

This work was begun in 1925, seven representative farms being selected with a view toward collecting data which would be applicable to New England in general. These farms, comprising dairy, fruit, poultry and general produce farms were equipped for electric service and appliances for carrying out the work by electricity were installed on each. The equipment was metered in such a way that detailed records for each appliance could be secured. Careful data has been kept on each farm by the University of New Hampshire Experiment Station which has been in charge of the experiment. It has been deemed necessary to continue operations for another two years, however, and the Connecticut utilities have readily consented to extend their co-operation over the longer period of time.

PATENT IS GRANTED TO NORWICH INVENTOR

Wheeler H. Vibber of New London and Zaida B. Webb of this city have just been granted patents by the United States patent office.

An electric grounding connection which was recognized by the patent office as having four recognizable claims is the basis of the grant to Vibber. Part interest has been assigned to the Gillette-Vibber Co. of New London. The connection is composed of a clasp band adapted to encircle a conductor pipe, a bracket, and means for securing the bracket to the clasp band. One end of a grounding conduit is secured in a portion of the bracket. The bracket is capable of distortion so as to adapt it to attachment in various angular positions relative to the conductor pipe, according to the positions of the conduit.

Application for this device was filed Feb. 6, 1925.

A garden doll, application for a patent on which was filed April 4, 1924, and which was allowed to have two patentable features, is the invention of Zaida Webb. The doll is made to simulate a plant, buds imitating hands and feet, and the head shaped like a flower. The body portion has an opening to contain powder or similar substance.

CAFETERIA SUPPER ON LEFFINGWELL CHURCH LAWN

Cafeteria supper served under the trees on the lawn at Leffingwell Baptist church Thursday evening by the Young People's union had a well-satisfied patronage. Salads, baked beans, frankfurts, rolls, pies, orangeades and coffee were on the bill of fare, which was served under the direction of the committee, Miss Caroline Beebe, chairman, assisted by Miss Mary Hracyk.

Recovering from Gun Wound

Nilo Hevunen, 15, of Plainfield, still remains a patient here at the Backus hospital, where he has been under observation since July 29, but his condition is improved. The boy was accidentally shot in the groin by a playmate, who was handling a gun.

Lions Enjoyed Outing

Norwich Lions club went by automobile to Ye Castle inn at Saybrook Thursday afternoon for their annual outing. Supper was served at 6 o'clock, followed by a programme of sports.

OPPOSITION IN WESTERLY TO STREET CHANGES

(Special to The Bulletin)

WESTERLY, Aug. 9—A public hearing by the town council on proposed changes of zoning laws and building lines on High, Broad and Main streets was called to order with 20 present, in the council chamber at 8 o'clock tonight.

Absentee councilmen were Naccarata and Fraser. Blueprints prepared by the Westerly highway department lay on the council table, showing a straight line proposed on the south side of Broad street from the Washington Trust Co. building to Christ Episcopal church and eight feet taken from the Mitchell plot on the east side of High street and from Wilcox park on Broad between the high school and library and a ten-foot set back line from the Pawcatuck river.

Mrs. Harry R. Milner, half owner in the Rhode Island hotel plot, asked President Burdick why the Whitton plan was not adhered to in which no change on the south side of Broad street was called for. She received the reply that he had not been familiar with all the conditions and that the Rhode Island hotel had since burned.

Harry R. Milner asked who had brought up the question of changing the present building lines and received the reply that it was the highway committee. Engineer Leon of the highway committee stated it was the town council and that they had been asked to establish a line for the proposed new building on the Colonial club property. The landscape architect for changes in Wilcox park on Broad street had also asked for new grades and the establishment of a grade line was essential, a proposed plan calling for removal of platform, landing and two steps in front of the Westerly town hall. Mrs. W. Milner wanted to know if plans called for the cutting off of Union street corner at the Welch block and the president said the meeting was to establish building lines. Attention was directed to the Walton block on High street and Engineer Leon replied that a fire would alter conditions there. He said that a line given to the Washington Trust building, he was informed, gave four feet for highway purposes. Mrs. Milner said all the contemplated changes would take from 150 to 200 years.

Dr. M. H. Scanlon asked about the cost of the work. Under whatever guise land was taken, confiscated property should be paid for, he said. Max Scorgorsky declared the matter one which should be brought before a special town meeting and Dr. Scanlon added a recommended plan was a polite way of grabbing land. John O. Mills of the Westerly Furniture Co. stated that if his building burned eight feet would be taken and no more land was available at the rear on which to build. After Mrs. Milner called attention to the fact that no one had spoken in favor of the projects, Henry L. Burdick said that he was in favor of the plan but not the proposed methods. William Segar predicted the town would not approve the proposed changes.

Mr. Milner insisted on knowing the party behind the movement, when President Burdick declared it was not one man but up to the town council and Mr. Milner closed by saying that "if you do not condemn property and do it right it was absolutely absurd."

The council considered the matter after the public hearing was closed and it is expected that action will be taken at the regular September meeting.

HOT WEATHER DECLINE IN STORRS EGG LAYING

The extremely hot weather of the past few days forced the hens in the Storrs laying contest to slacken their efforts during the fortieth week and production figures again showed a decline. A total of 5,105 eggs were laid for a production of 52.1 per cent. This is 373 eggs less than the score of the preceding seven-day period and 188 eggs less than the count for the corresponding week a year ago. Up to Monday night the contest flock had produced a grand total of 219,254 eggs. This is an average of 1,566 eggs for each of the 140 competing entries or better than 156 eggs per bird. In forty weeks the present competition has gained 11,038 eggs or almost 8 eggs per bird over last years laying trial.

George Lowry's leading entry of White Leghorns from West Willington, Conn., held true to its record-breaking pace despite the intense heat and, to repeat an old story, these ten birds headed the week's honor roll again. This time the score was 61 eggs, and now these birds from Connecticut have placed first on the honor roll, or tied for first, in thirteen of the past fourteen weeks.

George B. Ferris' pen of White Leghorns from Grand Rapids, Mich., duplicated their performance of the past week to take second place on the honor roll, this time with a score of 59 eggs. The Rhode Island Reds entered by Clarence E. Lee from Auburn, N. Y., and the White Leghorns owned by Hollywood Poultry farm from Woodinville, Wash., tied for third position with scores of 58 eggs each. Another White Leghorn entry of George Lowry placed fourth for the week with a lay of 55 eggs.

Only one change took place among the leaders in the principal varieties during the past week and that was in the White Wyandotte division. The pen owned by Tom Barron from Catforth, near Preston, England, which has been leading the Wyandotte class since early in January, has finally given way to the pen owned by the Fisher Poultry farm of Ayton, Ontario. The Fisher entry has a score of 1589 eggs for forty weeks, 16 eggs more than Barron's total. In the White Rock class, it appears that the supremacy of E. A. Hirt's birds from South Weymouth, Mass., are being threatened by the Granite Springs farm entry from Granite Springs, N. Y. The latter entry has been coming fast of late and is now only four eggs short of the 1,583 egg total of Hirt's pen.

A total of 2,360 eggs or an average of 236 eggs per bird, have already been laid by George Lowry's leading pen of White Leghorns. The Storrs record for pen production is 2,669 eggs, established last year by the Hollywood Poultry farm entry. Lowry's pen, which is now laying at better than an 85 per cent. rate, has eleven weeks in which to equal or better the record set up by Hollywood. In other words, Lowry's birds need to lay only 310 eggs, or slightly over 28 eggs per week for the remaining eleven weeks, to establish a new Storrs record.

It must be conceded that, barring accidents, Lowry will win this year's Storrs contest. Furthermore, it now appears that he has a good chance of having the second-high pen as well. His No. 65 entry, with a score of 2,110 eggs is only 27 eggs behind the present runner-up, a Red entry owned by Charlescote Farm from Sherborn, Mass. In the past week Lowry laid 55 eggs as compared with a 32-egg production by Charlescote, indicating that at this rate the positions of these two pens will soon be reversed. At the same time the entry of Hollywood Poultry farm must be accorded consideration in nominating the runner-up of this year's competition. These birds stand fourth among the Leghorns and fifth among all competitors with a score of 2,055 eggs to their credit. Their present rate of production is high enough to indicate that this pen may climb higher in the remaining weeks of competition.

The leading pens in each of the principal varieties:

Barred Rocks—R. W. Davis & Sons, Rockland, Me., 1738; R. Walter Bishop, Guilford, Ct., 1697; Kerr Chickeries, Frenchtown, N. J., 1641.

White Rocks—E. A. Hirt, South Weymouth, Mass., 1583; Granite Springs Farm, Granite Springs, N. Y., 1641.

White Wyandottes—Fisher Poultry farm, Ayton, Ont., 1869; Tom Barron, Catforth, Eng., 1853.

NORWICH RESPONSE "GLORIOUS" FOR FRESH AIR CHILDREN

The following letter has been received by H. D. Larrabee, president of the Norwich chamber of commerce, in acknowledgement of the list of 75 fresh air children forwarded to the New York Herald-Tribune fresh air fund:

New York, Aug. 7, 1928.

Mr. Harold D. Larrabee,
Norwich, Conn.

Dear Mr. Larrabee:

Your glorious list of invitations for children to be entertained in Norwich is at hand and we are hard at work on it. We shall do our best to select for your friendly town hosts a pleasant group of children.

Your children are to make their going and return trips in accordance with the following schedule:

Going Trip

Aug. 15, arriving Norwich at 4:01 p. m.

Return Trip

Aug. 29, leaving Norwich at 1:10 p. m.

Please note that the arrival and departure of the children are both via Central Vermont R. R. The New Haven seems to schedule no train service through and of course there are too many children to be accommodated in the ordinary buses.

Your committee has turned in one of the best reports of the year to date.

The Fresh Air Fund is heartily grateful to you, to the members of your committee, and to the hosts for your kind and efficient co-operation in a good work. May your own vacations all be happy!

Cordially yours,
LESLIE M. CONLY.

In checking up the list of the people who have contributed to help the 75 fresh air children for a two weeks rest in Norwich, it was found that the following names have not been as yet acknowledged:

Mrs. Lena Miller, Miss Grace Anslow, Mrs. Susan W. Sevin, Miss Marion Bliven, Miss Helen Drescher, Mrs. Helen Hardy, Mrs. Chas. Hutzler, Miss Emma Hutzler, Dr. Lillian Lynes, Miss Bessie Grimes, Miss Edith A. Fellows, Mrs. E. A. Rich, Dr. Emma K. Dunham.

KOP-KOZIOL GO LOOMS AS FEATURE BOUT OF TONIGHT'S AMATEUR SHOW

A five-man team of boxers from Worcester will feature the return of amateur boxing here tonight when the Duwells present their first outdoor show of the season at the Duwell field. Led by Eero Peterson who has often been in this vicinity against the fastest of the simon pures the Massachusetts five will arrive here in Norwich at about five o'clock this afternoon and camp at the Duwell club until the gong sounds its first and opening toll. The entries of the Worcester boxers were received late last night after word had been sent here by J. Frank Facey of the New England association earlier in the week that a strong Massachusetts team would be on hand for the opening of the Duwell ill.

In addition to Peterson there will be Jerry Kane 145, Johnny Yaesha 114, Jerry Golden 112, and Harmon Turello 126, in the out of state contingent. For competition the Duwell boxing committee had a score of eastern Connecticut and eastern Rhode Island scrappers to pick from.

The entry by towns is as follows:

Norwich: Al Koziol, 135; Johnny Kop, 135; Jimmy Quinn, 126; Al Beagle, 142; Freddie Plante, 122.

Jewett City: Benny Salinski, 123; Al Gauvin, 126; Benny Demski, 160; Freddie Miller, 145; Jimmy Wakely, 115.

Westerly: Charlie Chane, 135; Frankie Spasato, 118; Freddie Rita; Tony Morretti, 112, and Joe Bruno, 145.

In the 135 pound class it will be noticed that Koziol and Kop, both of this city, loom as the strongest contenders and it seems almost certain that they will finally have it out. Earlier in the week it was announced that it would have to be necessary to go out of town to get a competitor for the hard-hitting Koziol, with the result that Kop finally flew off the handle. Kop claims to hold a decision over the windmill and insists that he still is the better boy, in spite of all the issues that the Rhode Island champ is burdened with. Should these two boys get into the same ring together there is no question but that the fans will see the best scrap ever staged in this vicinity as the pair actually hate each other.

A glance at the entry will also reveal that there are a number of other good matches in the making. Work on the outdoor arena was completed late last night and everything is in readiness to handle the largest crowd ever to witness a boxing show in this city. Because of the fact that this bill is the one operating under A. A. U. sanction in the state at the present time it is probable that all previous records for attendance will be smashed. There are seats for 1300 fans at the arena.

SO. AMER. SWIMMER IS NEW 400 METERS CHAMPION

By THOMAS T. TOPPING

(Associated Press Sports Writer)

AMSTERDAM STADIUM, Aug. 9—(AP)—Albert Zorrilla, of Argentina, emerged triumphant today in the 400 meters swim, considered the blue ribbon event of the Olympic water sports, because it demands of the victor both speed and endurance.

The graceful South American speedster, who lives in the United States and perfected his technique as a New A. C. swimmer, succeeded as champion the American sprint king, Johnny Weissmuller, who defaulted his title in order to play water polo. The women's 220 meter breast stroke crown also went to a foreigner but in three other final events the Yankee representatives came through in great style.

The American mermaids, Adelaide Lambert, New York; Albina Osipowitch, Worcester, Mass; Eleanor Garratti, San Rafael, Calif., and Martha Norelius, New York, showing what may be termed literally clean pairs of heels, captured the women's 400 meter relay championship. George Kojac, New York; Walter Laufer, Chicago, and Paul Wyatt, Uniontown, Pa., finished one, two, three in the 100 meter back stroke final and Helen Meany, Georgia Coleman and Dorothy Poynton monopolized the first three places in the women's spring board diving.

In the two races in which they were defeated, though, the Americans were beaten badly. Clarence Crabbe, Honolulu; Austin Clapp, Hollywood, Calif., and Ray Ruddy, New York, the three Yankee standard bearers in the 400 meter classic, trailed in fourth, fifth and last places respectively and the United States also failed to place in the women's 200 meter breast stroke. It was won by Fraulein Schrader, of Germany, with Marie Baron, of Holland, second, and Gertrude Hoffman, Kingston, Pa., the only American who qualified, finishing fifth.

In preliminary tests the United States men's 800 meter relay team qualified for the final with consummate ease and is favored to annex another championship. Walter Colonth of Northwestern university, Mike Galitzen, Los Angeles, and Pete Desjardines, Mamaroneck, N. Y., the three men divers entered in the high diving, finished respectively first, second and first in their various qualifying series and this championship also appears to be within the reach of the Yankees.

America's water polo team, however, wrote "finis" across its Olympic career when it lost to France by 2 goals to 1 in a match in which France was playing six men against seven much of the time, Referee John Hodgson, of Great Britain keeping the Frenchman, Triboulet, out of the water for seven minutes. The best American water polo players may expect now is fourth place with fifth more probable.

Kojac created both a world's and Olymic mark of 1:08 1-5 for the 100 meters back stroke; the American girls shattered the Olympic record for 400 meter relay with 4:47 3-5, and Zorrilla, the Argentine, placed the Olympic 400 meter free style mark at 5:01 3-5.

Zorrilla had to beat out Arne Borg, the "Swedish hurricane" and favorite, and Andrew Charlton, the Australian strong boy, to win his brilliant victory, in addition to the three Americans.

The South American appeared to be the most surprised person in the swimming stadium after he had won. "I had expected to break the Olympic record," he said, "but somehow I felt both Borg and Charlton and perhaps Crabbe would also make it look bad.

"Honestly, my fondest dreams were to finish within the first three."

KAPLAN AND FLOWERS READY FOR BOUT TONIGHT

Kid Kaplan of Meriden and Bruce Flowers of New Rochelle are fit and ready for their ten-round bout at the Bulkeley stadium, local Eastern league baseball park, tonight at Hartford.

Both Kaplan and Flowers wound up their training yesterday. Flowers at the Charter Oak gym at Hartford and Kaplan at his camp at Silver Lake on the Meriden-Berlin town line.

"Y" TAKES THIRD PLACE IN LEAGUE

The Y. M. C. A. came out of a slugging match with a 13 to 9 victory over the Thermos Thursday night in the Industrial league at the Academy campus and went into undisputed possession of third place in the league standing.

It was no night for pitchers, five of them were treated in a rough manner. Johnny Greene and Lefty Lucier started but both retired under fire. Jim Mullins came in for Greene and he was also belted while Dudek finished the game in pretty fair shape. Faxon finished for the "Y" and managed to hold the lead that his mates clouted out for him.

It was one of the wierdest games seen at the campus in many a moon. The "Y" took the lead in the first with one run but the Thermos went ahead in the second with three tallies. However, the Yers knotted the count in the third and went two ahead in the fourth. The Bottlers, however still had plenty of life left and then drove Lucier out with six runs in their half of this fourth stanza, making the score read 9 to 5. With victory looking fairly safe the Thermos went all to pieces in the fifth and the "Y" ran in eight counters before the brakes could be applied. The game was called in the seventh because of darkness. Bill Burns, hard-hitting "Y" shortstop, led the stickers with a double and two singles in four attempts while but two players on each team sit safely. The longest hit, a double, went to Greene.

Tonight's Game.

Now that the smoke of last night's slugging affray has blown away the field will be cleared for tonight's engagement between the second-place threat, the United States Finishers and the Polish Citizens club. The Bleachery cannot afford to lose tonight if they would overhaul the Richmonds but in the Citizens they will meet a team that has had just enough of defeat for one season and intends to grab a few victories for the remainder of the way, regardless of whose chances it will damage.

The Bleachery now is the one target of the league to catch the Radiators and their heavy hitting of late threatens to give the Ironmen quite a lot of bother before the final curtain falls.

Lefty Dumas looks like the Greenville hurler while Pete Labenski, Eddie Koslowski or Tony West will pitch for the Citizens. The game starts at 6.15 o'clock.

DEVINE WINS WAY TO OLYMPIC BOXING SEMI-FINALS

AMSTERDAM, Aug. 9—(AP)— Three Americans fought their way into the semi finals of the Olympic boxing competition today, while two more were eliminated. John L. Daley of Waltham, Mass., bantamweight, Harry Devine of Worcester, Mass., featherweight, and Stephen Holaiko of Buffalo lightweight, won their quarter final bouts by decisions. Lt. Harry Henderson of the navy, America's middleweight entry, was put out by the decision of the judges.

Alex Kaletchitz, New York heavyweight, who came to Amsterdam as a substitute and got into competition when Royal Elliot of Alhambra, Cal., regular American heavy came down with a cold, proved a complete disappointment. In his first bout, after drawing a bye in the preliminaries, Kaletchitz lost to Sorsdal of Norway by a technical knockout in the first round.

D. Kaletchitz was knocked down three times before the referee halted the carnage with the American helpless on the floor.

Henderson's defeat did not meet with the approval of the spectators who thought the American had a slight margin over Hermanek of Czechoslovakia. The first two rounds were very close with the boxers trading punches on even terms, but the Czech had the better of the toe to toe exchanges in the third frame.

All three of the victories for the United States were won by good margins. Daley took all three rounds to get the decision over Szelea, Hungarian bantam. The Hungarian was down for no counts twice in the second and third rounds.

After a slow start which resulted in the first round being scored as even, Devine took the next two from Vakeva of Finland to get an easy victory. Holaiko staged a fast bout with Pascal Buonfiglio of Argentina, taking the last two rounds to get the decision. Holaiko got credit for one knockdown in the second round, flooring the Argentine with a right to the chin.

In the semi final bouts tomorrow, Devine meets Vanklaveren of Holland, Daley meets Isaacs of South Africa and Holaiko meets Berggren of Sweden.

The places in the semi finals are distributed among seventeen nations with Argentina and Italy leading in numbers with four each. South Africa is tied with the United States in qualifiers, having three. France, Denmark, Holland, Belgium, and Sweden have two each, while Canada, Great Britain, Germany, Czechoslovakia, New Zealand, Norway, Ireland and Hungary each have one semifinalist.

BOSTON'S PROTEST OF GAME IS NOT ALLOWED

NEW YORK, Aug. 9—(AP)—Boston's protest of a game lost in Chicago on July 11 by a score of 4 to 2 was disallowed today, John A. Heydler, president of the National league, announced tonight. The protest was made because Boston runners "had not been permitted to advance two bases on a wild throw into the stand," and Mr. Heydler's ruling hinged upon the position of the runners at the time the throw was made.

The league president pointed out that runners are entitled only to the base to which they are running and one in addition on such throws, the actual position of the runners at the time the ball is thrown to determine the bases to which they may advance.

In the game in question Delaney was on second, Richbourg on first and Smith at bat, with two out. Smith singled, and Wilson, Chicago centre fielder, threw wildly to the plate in attempting to cut off Delaney's run, the ball bounding into the stand. Charles Rigler, umpire-in-chief, ruled that Richbourg had not reached second or Smith first when Wilson started his throw, and accordingly held them to third and second, respectively.

As the protest then simmered down to a question of an umpire's judgment and not one or rule technicalities, the president refused to over-rule the arbiter's decision.

WANER PICKS UP ONE POINT ON HORNSBY

(By The Associated Press)

Although only three members of the Big Six were in action yesterday, two of them registered slight gains and the third, Babe Ruth, hung grimly onto his average of .332 by getting one out of three as the Yanks whipped the Red Sox at Boston, 7 to 1. The Babe missed a gain by only a fraction of a point.

Paul Waner got a double and a single at Pittsburgh to gain one point to .371, thereby reducing the margin of the idle Hornsby to twelve points for leadership in the National league and the Big Six. Frank Frisch got a single and a home run in the same game, putting on three points for a total of .322.

Hornsby and Heilmann were forced into idleness by the schedule, and Cobb again remained out of the game.

DUWELLS WIN FIRST LEAGUE GAME

The Duwells won their first game in the Junior Twilight league, Thursday evening, defeating the Elks 10 to 8 in a hectic battle. Although the Elks got off to a strong lead in the first two innings piling up seven runs to one for the East Siders, the Duwells overhauled them in the last two frames, scoring nine runs and winning the game.

Cy Jenks pitched for the winners and after the first two innings, when the Elks made seven of their eight hits, settled down and pitched great ball. Fuller started on the mound for the losers and was in fine form until the fourth when the Duwells landed on him for four hits and as many runs. Reardon pitched the fifth and although he allowed but one hit, errors and his own wildness lost him the game.

Scoring two in the first on a single by Fitzgerald and a long home run by Geer, the Elks got off to an early lead. The Duwells in their half scored a single tally on a double by Passmore and a scratchy triple by Monty. In the next frame, however, the Elks got to Jenks for five hits which together with a couple of errors gave them five runs and a substantial lead.

In the fourth, the East Siders, made a big dent in this lead, scoring four runs on singles by Goeffert, Adams, and Jenks, a double by Matthews and an error by Burns. After the Elks had added another counter in the fifth, the Duwells proceeded to win the game scoring five runs on a single hit. Reardon got himself into trouble by hitting Monty, the lead-off man. Monty stole second and after Donovan popped to second, took third as Dickerman grounded out to the pitcher. Bamber then threw wild to Reardon and Monty crossed the plate. Goeffert walked and stole second. Adams took his base on interference by Bamber, the Elks catcher. Goeffert stole third, and Adams stole second. Jenks hit a grounder to Burns and when the latter threw wild over first, both Goeffert and Adams scored, Jenks going to second. Matthews singled inside third base, sending Jenks to third. Matthews stole second, and when Reardon made a wild pitch, both Jenks and Matthews scored. Rizzoto then fanned for the final out. The Elks were unable to do anything in their half, Jenks retiring the side in order.

SMOKE SHOP CLASHES WITH ALL STARS SUNDAY

Sunday at the Hollyhock Island diamond the fast Smoke Shop A. C. crosses bats with the Willimantic All Stars, a team which has thus far made a good showing against all comers. The Smoke Shop team will line up the same as in previous games with the exception of Hal Cummings, N. F. A. Star, who will play in the outfield. Those who have seen the Smoke Shop boys in action well expect a stiff battle from start to finish.

The All Stars' lineup includes the four Heller brothers, who have a remarkable record in all sports. Hart will pitch and Tew will catch for Willimantic while Lefty Lucier or antisusi will pitch for the Smoke Shop. Santiausi is a new comer to local baseball but has a record of having beaten the Salem Town team and the Philadelphia Colored Giants. The lineups are:

Willimantic—Warren ss, Tinker lf, A. Heller cf, H. Heller rf, S. Heller 3b, M. Heller 1b, Tew c, Haggerty 2b, Hart p.

Smoke Shop—A. Tombari or Sadinsky lf, Cummings rf, Morin 2b, Greene cf, Gibbs ss, S. Tombari 3b, Berchinzo 1b, P. Tombari c, Lucier or Santiusi p.

ATHLETICS CONTINNUE MARCH BY BEATING SENATORS

PHILADELPHIA, Aug. 9—(AP)—The Athletics maintained their rapid pace in the pennant race here today when they defeated the Senators by 8 to 3 in the first Philadelphia home game since the victorious sweep of the Mackmen through the west. The Athletics failed to gain as the Yankees defeated the Red Sox at Boston, 7 to 1.

Al Simmons' twelfth home run, hit off Garland Braxton, the star Washington southpaw, with the bases filled in the sixth, decided the issue in favor of Howard Ehmke. This drive put the Athletics into a lead which Washington never closed. Braxton was pounded for one more run in the seventh, and three were added in the eighth off Burke.

Ehmke allowed the visitors just three hits, and seldom was in any real danger, although the Senators had a lead of one when Simmons broke up the game.

HEINMACH HOLDS RED SOX TO FOUR HITS IN DEBUT

BOSTON, Aug. 9 — (AP) — Fred Heimach, St. Paul recruit, held the Red Sox to four hits in his debut as a Yankee this afternoon while the champions pounded Ed Morris and Burney Griffin for a 7 to 1 victory. This success enabled the Yankees to cling to their lead of four and one-half games, as the Athletics also won.

The lone Boston run came in the first inning on two passes, Ken Williams' single and Regan's sacrifice fly. Every New York run was made in the sixth when Morris was knocked out of the box with none out. Combs led off the big inning with a triple. Other factors were two errors by Gerber, passes to Ruth and Durocher, singles by Gehrig and Koenig and Meusel's double tonight, made by accident as he ducked back from a close pitch.

Heimach was with the Athletics and the Red Sox before going to St. Paul two years ago. He fanned eight men today and walked only two. Two of the four off his delvery were scratchy.

PIRATES CUT LEAD OF CARDS TO FOUR GAMES

PITTSBURGH, Aug. 9—(AP)— The Pirates returned home from the east today to defeat the Cardinals by 5 to 4 for the eighth straight Pittsburgh triumph, which shaved the lead of the Red Birds over the Giants to four games.

Frank Frisch wasted a home run with one on in the seventh, bringing the score to its final status, but the Cardinals fought to the end. Taylor Douthit doubled with two out in the ninth, but Burleigh Grimes rushed to the aid of Carmen Hill and caused Holm to roll to Adams, who made a fine stop.

The Pirates greeted Jesse Haines with a shower of three runs in the first and forced him to retire in favor of Arthur Reinhart with none out in the fourth after two more markers had been added or placed on base. The victory gave the Pirates a record of twenty-four games won in their last thirty-one.

WATERBURY, Aug. 9—(AP)—Jack Kelly of this city won a decision over Al Pooler of Danbury in the feature six-round bout of the Woostir A. A. card at Brassco park tonight. Kelly weighed 166, Pooler 162. Other results.

Leo Lariviere, outpointed Vic Morley, Hartford, 6-148.

Lucien Bromiliard, Danielson, defeated Billy Fitz, 6-138.

Lucien Gregory, scored technical knockout over Nat Grandeau, Danielson, 1-125.

Mike Toronto, Bridgeport, defeated Lucien Lariviere, 4-164.

Irish Johnny Hayes, Danbury, defeated Charles Goulette, Danielson, 4-130.

FOUR AMERICAN CREWS IN OLYMPIC FINALS TODAY

SLOTEN, Holland, Aug. 9—(AP)—With four crews out of seven in the final races of the Olympic rowing regatta tomorrow, the United States has a good chance to better its record of two world title winners made in the Paris Olympics of 1924 when the Americans won the team championship by a single point.

This was an off-day at Sloten as there were only two events scheduled. In one of them, the semi finals in double sculls, Charles McIlvaine and Paul Costello, of Philadelphia, defeated the Austrian pair of Lozert and Fiesel by two lengths to join their three boatloads of countrymen in the finals. Their time was 7 minutes, 2 2-5 seconds for the 2,000 meter course which is used for all the Olympic races. In the other race the Swiss four bared crew with coxswain beat Poland by three lengths and entered the final where it meets Italy. The Canadian double scullers, having drawn a bye, went over the course at a leisurely pace which was 21 seconds slower than McIlvaine and Costello made.

The other crews took light workouts.

Upon the Pacific coast crew which races England rests the responsibility of giving the United States three straight Olympic victories in the eight-oared class, as the Naval academy eight was victorious at Antwerp in 1920 and Yale at Paris in 1924.

That California will come through triumphant is the belief of all American rowing experts but against the young westerners is arrayed a valorous crew of experienced Britons from the Thames.

Another event of great interest is Ken Myers' bid for sculling honors against Bob Pearce, the Australian superman who won his races so easily that he rules favorite over the locomotive fireman from Philadelphia who has been preparing since April to uphold America's name in the sculling event. Myers has a fighting chance against the Australian.

The British empire blocks America's way in two other finals, as the United States double scullers meet the Canadians and the American four without coxswain rows as English university crew from Cambridge.

GOSHEN

Saturday when the mercury was hovering in the nineties the first heat prostration occurred here. George Burdick while working for Mr. Cohen in the hay field collapsed with exhaustion. Resting for a time in the shade he was revived.

August 16th is the date set for the Goshen Sunday school picnic to be held at Mohegan park.

Over 160 from Lebanon attended the New London County Farm Bureau field day meet held at Goshen Point, Waterford Saturday.

Arthur Lathrop of Hartford was home over the week end.

Miss Annie Gillette led the Christian Endeavor meeting Sunday evening and gave an interesting account of the institute she attended last week at Northfield, Mass.

Mrs. J. R. Case and Miss Grace Elizabeth Case of Danbury were guests this week at Maple Hill farm.

Mildred Manning has returned to her home in Lebanon after a stay of nearly four weeks with her uncle, J. A. Randall.

Miss Clara Gillette left Wednesday morning to attend the general conference at Northfield, Mass.

Mr. and Mrs. E. W. Jones entertained at the week end friends from Massachusetts.

The chirp of the first fall crickets were heard this week.

DANIELSON

KILLINGLY YOUTHS REMAIN IN CRITICAL CONDITION

(Special to The Bulletin)

DANIELSON, Aug. 9—A report from the Day-Kimball hospital received here late this afternoon stated that the two youths injured Wednesday evening in an automobile-motorcycle collision on the Green Hollow road are in a critical condition and show no improvement. Both boys, Mitsi Maleak, aged 14, and Chester Petreas, both of Killingly, are suffering with fractures of the skull and in addition Petreas sustained a compound fracture of the jaw, where he was thrown through the windshield of the Arnold machine. Miss Nellie Bloxham, superintendent of the Day-Kimball hospital, said late tonight that as yet the doctors have not discovered the boys affected with internal injuries, their chances of recovery being greater if these would not appear.

At first it was thought these youths came from Norwich, but later at the hospital their residences were determined to be in Killingly. Officer James Carmody and Officer Strand of Danielson state police barracks, stated last evening after they completed their investigation of the collision, the motorcycle being operated was unregistered and Petreas failed to carry with him an operator's license.

The members of the Danielson Rotary club met this noon at the Attawaugan hotel where their weekly business was transacted and luncheon was held. Directly after the meeting the members accepted an invitation of Manager Henry Johnson and retired to the Majestic theatre where they witnessed a special showing of the official pictures of the Tunney-Heeney fight classic held last month in New York. After the showing each member was fully convinced that the retired champion defeated his opponent without question.

Funeral services were held this morning in the Sacred Heart church in Wauregan at 9 o'clock for Mrs. Sarah Mulgrue, who died there on Tuesday. A mass of requiem was celebrated by Rev. Fr. Quinn, pastor of the church. The bearers were William Gaffney, James Ward, James Noon, Fred Reynolds, Arthur Govern and John Govern. Burial was in the Sacred Heart cemetery in Wauregan, with services at the grave by Father Quinn. Funeral arrangements were in charge of L. E. Kennedy.

A band concert was held last evening at Davis park, with selections being furnished by the St. James band of St. James church. After the concert a collection was taken up by the members of the band, proceeds to be used for the purchase of new instruments. A ruling of the musicians is that no funds can be accepted for the services. It is said that another concert and perhaps a series of appearances are to be given by the band during September.

In Brooklyn this morning state road builders were engaged in the removal of a number of buildings in the path of the new highway. Today the construction was centered about the Unitarian church. The large steam shovels and other machinery being used were excavating for the roadbed, while others were laying rock and other material. It was determined this morning that construction will continue far into the cold weather months, before the work will be completed.

On the Providence road contract, directly off Main street, construction has ceased since the contractor, Eugene Goteille of Worcester, mysteriously disappeared several weeks ago. The machinery being used on this roadway stands idle, coated with rust from the weather during the number of weeks work has been stopped.

According to information in Worcester papers today, police are following up the information given in Canada, that Goteille left for a visit in Oklahoma. No reports could be obtained today relative to when the road, striking out from Main street, will be completed.

W. Irving Bullard, formerly of Danielson and an occasional visitor here, was a donor of an aeronautic loving cup for winners of airplane contests held in Boston recently. Mr. Bullard has taken an interest in the progress of aviation and, like many other Americans, is doing much to further the new method of transportation.

Sunday will be the opening day of the Greene camp meeting at the Greene camps in Greene, R. I. As at other camp meetings, numerous Danielson residents will journey there to take part in the activities.

Onslaughts are now being made upon berry patches by Danielson pickers, who by their efforts are reaping their harvests from the wild bush fruit. Today several pickers were observed returning home after a day's "pick" with the pails laden to the brims indicating that the yield this season is heavy. One reports the high bush berries, typical of the swamp regions, are plentiful, but are fast going to seed, because of the inability of the gatherers to overcome the barriers of water and obtain them.

In the town court this morning before Judge W. F. Woodward, Joseph L. Basinet of Putnam pleaded guilty to a charge of operating a car with defective brakes. For this offense he was fined $5 and costs of the court. Basinet was arrested by State Officer James Carmody of Danielson barracks, after the officer tested his car.

Mrs. A. P. Wood of Academy street is spending a few days at the Greene camp ground in Greene, R. I.

H. G. Franklin, a teller at the Danielson Trust Co., has returned from a week's trip through New Hampshire.

Leo Viens is a member of the special detachment of the Headquarters Co., C. N. G., and is with his company at Niantic.

Excellent weather conditions here during the past few days have enabled workers on the Brooklyn Savings bank building, at the corner of Main and Academy streets, to extend operations to a point where one may easily ascertain what the appearance of the block will be like when completed.

Information regarding the manner in which Roland G. Lalone and Arthur G. Raymond, branded as the "Ice Box" bandits, are passing the long tiring summer months in confinement at the county jail in Brooklyn, is not being released. Since their extradition from Massachusetts to Connecticut, to stand trial for the murder of State Policeman Irving H. Nelson in Pomfret on Good Friday night, last, the men, according to information received before the ban was placed, spend their time in the reading of newspapers and other literature allowed them. They still remain in their solitary mood, refusing to discuss reasons why they are being held at the jail, and remain cold to the heavy guard that is keeping constant vigil over them.

As the days pass for them, the state is busy preparing the trial, set to begin on Sept. 14 in Willimantic, consisting of the gathering of evidence and perhaps locating new witnesses, which will perhaps send the youthful banditi to their deaths for the murder of the former Danielson state officer.

Since being engaged, the defense counsel has remained quiet, failing to release any comment on the coming trial, when they will endeavor to clear Lalone and Raymond of the serious charges placed against them.

PUTNAM

COUNTY HOOVER-CURTIS CLUB TO BE ORGANIZED

(Special to To Bulletin)

PUTNAM, Aug. 9—Tomorrow afternoon at 5 o'clock, daylight saving time, a conference of the republicans of Windham county will be held at the Bald Hill farm of Clarence W. Bowen in Woodstock for the purpose of organizing a Windham County Hoover-Curtis Republican club. Among other things to be discussed at the meeting will be the plans for a mass meeting at Woodstock common on Saturday Sept. 15th at which it is hoped that Hon. George H. Moses, U. S. senator from New Hampshire, and vice chairman of the Hoover-Curtis advisory campaign committee will be one of the speakers. Senator Moses has given his promise to be one of the speakers at the mass meeting. The organization of a Hoover-Curtis club tomorrow seems very appropriate as it will be the birthday of Herbert Hoover.

CRIB TO BE ERECTED AS FIRST STEP IN SEWAGE DISPOSAL

(Special to The Bulletin)

PUTNAM, Aug. 9—The first step to be taken in Putnam towards the relieving of the rivers of the sewerage disposal of the city, will be on Saturday when Sanitary Engineer W. R. Copeland, of the state water commission comes to Putnam to confer with City Engineer George W Perry, relative to the erection of a crib to be located near the sewer outlet south of Arch street, where the city waste enters and assists in polluting the Quinebaug.

City Engineer Perry said this afternoon, he was in communication with Engineer Coneland and he was informed by him that work on the erection of the crib will commence during the coming week. The state now requires that all cities and towns disposing of their sewerage through the rivers must take steps to erect filter beds and discontinue the use of the streams as an outlet.

Engineer Perry said that the crib to be built by the city and to be equipped with a measuring gauge, furnished by the state, will be used to determine the amount of sewerage passing into the Quinebaug from Putnam. This bed or crib will be in operation for a period extending over a year's time, and at the end of that period, information obtained from the gauge will give the city a knowledge of exactly how large filtration beds will have to be to take charge of disposing of the sewerage.

According to a talk given by Engineer Copeland at a recent meeting of the common council the city will have to take action towards the construction of such filtration beds for sewer disposal, within a period of five years, this ruling being passed at the last meeting of the legislature.

Engineer Perry stated today that the erection of such a plant will involve the spending of several thousands of dollars by the city because of the expensive scientific methods and machinery necessary for the operation of the proposed plant.

The company filtration plant of the gas plant of the Eastern Connecticut Power company, on Arch street is fast nearing completion. This movement by the gas plant is the first actual step towards removing from the streams excessive waste material. All refuse from the plant, caused during the manufacture of gas, will be removed from the river when the plant is put into operation in the near future.

An item of interest to people of Putnam and Pomfret in the "Brief Telegrams" column of the Bulletin on Thursday morning was that of Charles Van Brunt Cushman of Pomfret purchasing a race horse and paying the sum of $75,000 for the animal.

The horse was purchased at Saratoga Springs, N. Y., and is a two year old colt, by Whiskbroom II, out of Pavement, a daughter of All Gold. Mr. Cushman, is a chief stockowner of the Eastland Farms syndicate in Pomfret and other country places. He has been a horse lover for a number of years, and his stock have won many featured events at the leading tracks of the country.

A marked improvement of the highway at the intersection of Front and South Main streets was made today by the city highway department through the paving of the additional 10 feet of highway, donated to the city by the Gulf Refining company. The curbing has been cut back at this site and the street widened. The police department feeling that the hazard of cars colliding has been eliminated, it has removed the silent policeman to a spot further south on South Main street and traffic proceeding from Front street to School street is now permitted to make to the left of the silent officer.

In addition to grading this spot and covering it with tar and rock, the department today was engaged in the scraping of South Main street, recently oiled, and removing the many high spots in the highway.

Many have been invited to taste a real apricot, cultivated in Putnam, which is considered a novelty. The fruit offered came from Putnam's lone apricot tree, growing in the yards of the New Haven railroad on Buck street. A bit of interesting history of how the tree happened to grow there has recently come to light, and since the announcement of the tree growing and bearing fruit was made in the column of the Bulletin about three weeks ago, much attention has been directed to it.

The tree, according to a story from Mrs. D. F. X. MacEvoy of Church street, sprouted from a stone planted by her twenty-seven years ago when she lived in the house now occupied by the yard officials of the local railroad yards and used as offices. Mrs. MacEvoy, says that the shoot sprung forth from the earth embedded stone, and she later transplanted it to its present location, because of the waste coming from the engines. When the company took over the property, the tree continued to grow, unnoticed. Recently, William E. Sault, divisional assistant superintendent of the New Haven division, whose office is in Putnam, investigated the species of the rare fruit on what was thought to be growing on a peach tree. An expert viewed the fruit and informed Mr. Sault that it was apricot, a rare fruit in the north. Ma. Sault, revealed his find to his numerous friends who only laughed, but today it was proven them, by the opportunity to eat of such a production, and by the story related by Mrs. MacEvoy, who planted the tree over a quarter of a century ago.

Putnam ring fans were delighted to learn of the fifth victory of Harry Devine as an American Olympic representative in Amsterdam on Thursday by his victory over the Italian star, Montelore, winning on a decision. The win over the Italian allows Devine to enter the semi-finals in the Olympic squared ring, opportunity to clinch more laurels for the United States.

Devine has appeared in Putnam, on numerous bills promoted by the Putnam Sporting club, and has proved to be a favorite of the local fans. He is a product of Worcester amateurs.

John B. Byrne of Putnam, former state bank commissioner of the state and now vice president of the Hartford-Connecticut Trust company has been elected a trustee of the West Hartford Trust company, of which Clarence Boyce, former treasurer of the Carxill Trust company of this city, is treasurer and secretary. Byrne also holds other positions of this nature in other leading capitol city banks.

Frank L. Davis, former agent of the Windham County Farmers association, now of Boston, and the members of his family, are in Putnam and Windham Center today, attending the field outing of the association being held today. Mr. Davis was one of the leading speakers on the programme.

Captain William J. Jarvis and Sergt. George Liard of the local police, returned last evening from the State Police association gathering held in New Britain. Capt. Jarvis was elected vice president of the association of Connecticut policemen, to succeed Sergt. Liard who resigned at this meeting.

The sudden rise in the mercury today, drove hundreds to the nearby water resorts to pass the afternoon. Even though a number of complaints have been received relative to the swimming hole at Harrisville, being infested with concealed roots of massive trees, located near the water, over a hundred were seen to be bathing there this afternoon, obtaining relief from the sudden heat wave. It is thought that no steps will be taken this year to eliminate the bed of the river from its hidden hazards, and due care must be exercised by those resorting to the pool of water, to prevent tragedy.

One half side of the new cement state highway, through the village of Attawaugan, about three miles south of Putnam has been completed, the lamst pour being made by the road builders this morning. A testing machine was about today and the strength of the concrete proved to be standard. The standing of this test will soon result, within a day or so, in the opening up of the highway for the distance of nearly two miles. Today the contractors were preparing the remaining half of the road for its dressing of concrete, which is estimated will take about another month before the stretch is completely finished and opened to traffic. Since the road has been under construction, traffic delays, especially among the motor coach lines passing over this route, is due to the method of one way traffic, which is in existance.

A bridge that will span the little mill stream, known as the "Five-Mile," will soon be built, material to be of concrete. When this structure is completed the dangerous curve that has been the scene of numerous collisions will be eliminated and a straight of way will be provided from the outskirts of Dayville to Grove street in Putnam.

County Pomona Picnic.

Worthy Master Sudney Hall and Mrs. Marion B. Beckwith, lecturer, of New London county Pomona grange, No. 6, Patrons of Husbandry, have announced a Pomona picnic for next Thursday at Atlantic Beach. An informal program of sports and games will be carried out.

CAN WALK FIVE MILES A DAY

After Taking Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound

Providence, R. I.—"It is two years ago since I first took Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound for my nerves and other bad feelings and it has been helping me all this time so that I am able to do all my work now and walk about five miles a day besides. I am still taking your medicine and feel like a young woman although I am about 45 years old now. I feel well and happy and if anyone wishes to write to me about your medicine I will be glad to answer."—Mrs. J. TAGLIAMONTI, 11 Pequot Street, Providence, R. I.

WHAT GOOD NATURED COMPETITION WILL DO.

(Written Specially for The Bulletin)

A good many years ago, while I was vacationing up in the Maritime provinces of the Dominion, I heard of a Nova Scotia farmer who had been awarded a prize by the county agricultural society for the production of something over a thousand bushels of potatoes from a measured acre.

I set down the story as one of those designed by real estate agents for the benefit of the foreign trade, and dismissed it from my mind as, per se, too highly improbable.

But now comes California with an official record, certified by the state department of agriculture, of a yield of 64,707 pounds from an acre in San Joaquin river valley about six miles west of Stockton. That means a bushel yield of 1,073, reckoning sixty pounds to the bushel.

It seems that two neighbor ranchers have been some years engaged in a friendly competition to see who could grow the biggest crop acre. One is named Fred Randge; the other Roscoe Zuckerman. Two years ago Zuckerman got a yield of 62,298 pounds off one acre. Last year Ringe went him several better with a production of 64,707 pounds. This season both are doing their best to achieve an even bigger yield. Each one has about 3,000 acres planted on what is locally known as "delta land."

For the benefit of those unfamiliar with California soils it is explained that this is really a deep peat soil, doubtless accumulated in past ages in what was once, if it is not now, a delta of the river. It is made up of very much the same peat which is turned in Ireland and other parts of Europe as a fuel. That it, too, is highly combustible is shown by the methods employed by the rival ranchers in preparing it for a crop.

To begin with, the top four inches is burned. The delta is artificially irrigated, and is a dead level. The irrigation is so controlled as to soak the peat up to within four inches of the surface. When the top has burned down to that level the fire goes out of itself. Then the plot is plowed to a depth of twelve inches disked and double-disked so as thoroughly to mix the peat ash of the surface with them virgin peat from below. A "special fertilizer" is then added of which we are only told that it contains twenty-three per cent. potash, the ground is still further worked to the texture of garden soil, and the land flooded to pack it down.

I don't happen to know of any large areas of peat in Connecticut. Nor do I know of any irrigation project like this of the San Joaquin delta. Nor of any 3,000 acre plats level enough to permit such mathmetically exact flooding to within just four inches of the surface. Nor of any very extensive areas, outside the Connecticut river valley, which could be plowed 12 inches deep without striking the rocky backbone of the state. So it is not likely that these California rivals will be challenged by any one in Connecticut.

At the same time, the story seems rather interesting. It seems to suggest several more or less useful reflections.

In the first place, there's the matter of soil. Most of our New England dirt is made up from the decomposition of granite rocks. The resultant soil has mighty little in it that wasn't in the original granite. And about the only form of plant food locked up in granite is potash. Nitrogen and phosphorus are almost totally missing. The soil of the San Joaquin delta, however, is almost pure peat. That is, it has in it oodles of nitrogen and some phosphorus but less potash. The burning of the surface gives some and heavy dosage with a twenty-three per cent potash mineral fertilizer adds more.

That is, the California soil has lots of humus and nitrogen and phosphorus, but lacks potash; the Connecticut soil has plenty of potash, but is woefully deficient in nitrogen and phosphorus and humus.

Wouldn't it seem reasonable, then, to infer that a Connecticut farmer who wanted to force his soil to its utmost of potato production would need to load it up with nitrates and phosphates and, most important of all, humus? Of course, this is purely a priori reasoning, and subject to the verdict of hard facts as elicited by practical experimentation. But it surely looks like a sensible idea to start off with.

I don't happen to have in reach any statistics about the average acre production of potatoes in Connecticut. But I don't suppose it greatly exceeds the nation-wide average, which is but a little over a hundred bushels to the acre. Also it is well known that Connecticut doesn't produce as many potatoes as it consumes. It has to import from other states to supply its lack.

Now, while one would be silly to expect it ever to rival the productivity of virgin California soils, artificially irrigated, exactly according to the varying demands of the crop, it is not at all absurd to believe that, if any considerable number of its farmers took as much thought and as much pains and did as much work, comparatively speaking, as the San Joaquin potato-rivals are doing, they could come a good deal nearer to supplying their own home markets.

Such a consummation would be not only in the line of economic efficiency, but point in the direction of bigger farm profits. We are not told how much money the San Joaquin competitors are making. But it is evident, from the ability to pay for the preparation and planting of 3,000 acres each, this season, that their past efforts haven't seriously impoverished them. They must have made something last year, to pay for the wages and the water and the seed involved in this year's planting.

Another interesting suggestion which I get from this San Joaquin potato race is of the value of competition in spurring the activities of even farmers. The desire to excel is one of the fundamentals of human nature. It is shown not only in the prize-ring and the ball field and the golf course and the race track but in practically every other form of human effort. Its existence among farmers has been recognized for many years in a superficial and desultory fashion by the managers of county fairs in their premium offers.

But there's a big difference between competing with a whole county, and beating your next-door neighbor at his own game. There's a "kick" in the latter which isn't apparent in the former.

When Fred Rindge of the San Joaquin delta found that Neighbor Zuckerman had produced 62,298 pounds of potatoes on an acre of land no better than his, he promptly got into high gear himself and topped Zuckerman with a yield of 64,707 pounds. Now, Zuckerman is after a 65,000 pound yield, and Rindge is working like the Old Scratch himself to keep ahead. They are both doing more for the ultimate hope of bragging over the other, than either would do, solely for a few dollars profit.

For years the annual boys corn contests have been pushing beyond all calculable bounds the acre yield of corn. The prize open to the winner is highly desirable. Not only does he get fancy prices for his big crop, but he also gets a trip to Washington and a medal and other things. Above all, he gets his name and sometimes his picture into the papers. That last, let me tell you, means more than all the rest to the average boy or man. It lifts him, temporarily at least, out of the ranks and places him at the head of the parade, even in front of the imposing drum-major.

Naturally, this sort of competition leads to a good many "stunts which are more showy than useful. But there has to be a skeleton of some sort for even a "stunt" to grow around. There must be something substantial to supply additional foundation for future "stunts." They're not all gas or hot air. One swallow doesn't make a summer. But one swallow today usually means a flock of swallows tomorrow or next week, with summer close on their tails. The man who makes a new record of achievement, this season, has done more than excel the past; he has blazed a way along which the future will over pass this mark.

Progress isn't so much like the steadily rolling river, flowing with unvarying current. It is more like an incoming ocean tide whose every succeeding wave reaches a little nearer to high-water mark, it advances "by fits and by jerks," as the local saying has it. As each wave of the flooding tide recedes the superficial observer, admitting that it has wet the sand an inch higher up than the preceding, may ask sneering, "What has it amounted to?" In itself very little, truly. But the more thoughtful watcher knows that that inch gain of the breaking wave means an inch rise of the vast ocean body behind it. Which amounts to considerable, as must be admitted.

I don't expect ever to hear of thousand-bushel potato yields reported from any Connecticut acre. But a little good-natured competition between potato-growers in favorable situations would, I suspect, show that the present average production could be largely increased.

If the old saying is accepted that he is a true benefactor of the race who makes two blades of grass grow where but one grew before, surely the man who makes two bushels of potatoes grow where only one formerly grew is a greater benefactor.

And if a friendly rivalry brings about such a result, then the rivalry is a good thing, to that extent.

—Allee-samee, I wish the reporter who has told us about those San Joaquin potato-growers had gone a little further and explained what they do about bugs and blights.

It's one thing to raise a bouncing crop for market, but quite another thing to raise it for the bugs to eat and the blight to rot.

Even as things are, a good many Connecticut potato-growers would harvest bigger crops if there were some way absolutely to stop those beetles and head off that blight.

THE FARMER

NOANK

Boat Catherine with Capt. Fred Fitzpatrick at the wheel and Mate Arthur McDonald, was out at the Race, hauling lobster pots and was getting them good, and came across pot No. 14 with only one lobster. It was a queer shellfish. Mate McDonald had to get an axe out of the cabin to break the side out of the pot to get the monster out. Captain Fitzpatrick never saw such a funny lobster. It was all claws, not very fat. Getting a large catch of lobsters, they started back for the dock where the lobsters were sold. The monster shellfish weighed 14 pounds and the claws were nine inches long and five and one-half inches wide and it had six pounds of meat. It had the old lobstermen guessing, all claws and no meat. Enough for a good sandwich. It will be on exhibition for a day. The huge lobster would be all right in a museum or in a sideshow at a circus. Several New York autos and Massachusetts autos stopped with about 40 people to see the queer shellfish.

The trolley waiting room used to leave a light lit until 1:30 o'clock in the morning so the people could see their way along. There is no light on East Main street, making it the darkest place in the village. Many people are kicking about it.

A large crowd from the village attended the St. Patrick's lawn fete in Mystic on Wednesday.

The Martha Winthrop club of New London held its annual outing on Wednesday and selected the Clark Studios Tea Garden in Noank for the occasion. Luncheon was served on the terrace, after which the entire party played bridge. Miss Thelma Douglas won the first prize, Mrs. J. R. Latham second and Mrs. William Geist, third.

Miss Helen Clark has returned from a short visit in New Haven with friends.

Ashby MacGraw was down at the town dock with his father, who works at the fish market. Young MacGraw was playing on the dock and in some way fell overboard. Clarence Mallett was working nearby on his auto and heard his cries. He came on the run and went to jump from a small dock to the big dock and jumped right overboard. He got the boy to shore.

Mrs. J. H. Webster is confined to her home with sickness.

C. Hunt of Boston was a caller in Noank on Wednesday.

Beulah Clark is spending a week with relatives in Wallingford.

Stanley Specht of Newark, N. J., is spending a vacation of two weeks at his home in the village.

WESTERLY

WOMAN TRIED TO TAKE HER OWN LIFE

(Special to The Bulletin)

WESTERLY, Aug. 9—Mrs. Sarah Narchise, 49, wife of John Selvadio, 8 Pierce street lane, made an unsuccessful attempted to take her life about 8 o'clock on Thursday morning by inhaling illuminating gas. As related by a neighbor Mrs. Selvadio went across the street to say good bye to a neighbor, saying that she was going to make way with herself.

Fearing that Mrs. Selvadio would carry out her threat to kill herself, a hurry call was sent to Richard Pienataro, residing at 68 Pierce street, who hastened to the Selvadio home and finding the door locked broke in the door. Mrs. Selvadio was reported as found in a stupor over a gas stove in which the burners were turned on where she had inhaled the gas. A large crowd assembled and Rhode Island State Trooper Nolan, who was doing his first night of duty in the Pierce street section since two additional Rhode Island state policemen were engaged by the town of Westerly noticing the neighbors travelling in one direction, followed and was of assistance in rendering first aid until Medical Examiner Dr. Michael H. Scanlon, hastily summoned by telephone, arrived. Motorcycle Officer Robert M. Kessell assisted in caring for the crowd which steadily increased in size.

Dr. Scanlon directed the woman taken to the detention room at the police station as it was feared that she was of unsound mind. Mistaking directions, Trooper Nolan had the woman taken to the Westerly hospital and from there she was returned to the police station. Chief of police had Dr. Scanlon and Dr. Harry Crandall examine Mrs. Selvadio, and on their recommendation accompanied the woman to the Rhode Island State hospital in Providence for observation.

She is the mother of nine children, five being small. Her condition was reported as brought about by a fight on the previous evening in which she received a black eye, family cares in which she thought her family was against her, and worry over some members of her family.

The large steam shovel which has been at work the past week in clearing out the debris at the rear of the burned Rhode Island hotel block on Dixon square late Wednesday afternoon dropped its front end into one of the store basements where it was being operated. The rear of the shovel was in the court at the former rear entrance to the Smith Flower store and when it proceeded too far over the demolished wall of the former Dodge clothing store the floor beams gave way under the added weight of fallen debris and heavy shovel. The shovel was soon extricated and was able to accomplish much on Thursday in pulling out from the twisted mass of wreckage, the large floor beams.

Members of the Westerly highway department were engaged on Thursday in placing the large heavy traffic beacon, formerly at the junction of High, Oak streets and Railroad avenue, and recently stored in the Westerly railroad station yard, at the junction of Canal street and Railroad avenue. Pavements were removed to permit a conduit electrical connection with the electric light pole on the sidewalk in front of the Alba Inn property, to care for the operation of blinker lights.

Westerly Bridge club, consisting of members, Mrs. N. F. Tuckerman, Mrs. G. Franklin Cock, Mrs. E. G. Watrous, Mrs. L. Ward Alger, Mrs. Grafton I. Palmer, Mrs. Hiram Edmond and Miss Bernice Burdick met at Harry Peckham's Inn on Granite street Thursday evening for a chicken dinner. Following the dinner two tables of bridge were in play in the Inn rooms.

Favorable weather brought out a large attendance upon the eighth of the open air band concerts in the bandstand in the summer series of concerts in Wilcox park. The following program was rendered:

Hope Council, No. 6, Junior Order of United American Mechanics, has accepted an invitation from Stonington Council, No. 5, to participate with that organization in the dedication of a memorial flag staff this coming Saturday afternoon at 4 o'clock.

On Wednesday evening a Jewett sedan, operated by Francis E. Hardwick of Bradford, collided with the rear of an Essex coach driven by Eben Dike of Fain's inn on Beach street alongside River Bend cemetery. When Dike, who was driving in a southerly direction, suddenly slowed up to permit another car to pass, the Jewett, which was approaching from behind, struck Dike's machine with sufficient force to smash the left rear fender of the Essex and tear off the running board on that side.

The windshield of Hardwick's car was broken and the right front tire blown out. Hardwick was accompanied by his wife and child.

WESTMINISTER

The community was shocked to hear of the tragic death of Frank Koch, who was instantly killed in an automobile accident Friday evening in North Woodbury, Conn. Mr. Koch was the eldest son of the late Charles Koch and spent most of his boyhood in Westminster. After the death of father five years ago, the family moved to Jefferson Heights, L. I., and later to North Woodbury, where they bought a home. Mr. Koch leaves a wife and one child; his mother, Mrs. Katherine Koch; three sisters and one brother, several aunts and uncles and numerous cousins.

Mr. and Mrs. John Golden of New Rochelle called on friends while passing through town Saturday. They were on an automobile tour through New England.

Miss Bonita Dusenberrie, who has been a guest of her grandmother, Mrs. W. J. Johnson, has gone to New York, where she will spend several weeks with relatives before returning to her home in Charlotte, N. C.

Addie Robbins is visiting her sister, Mrs. George Couch, in Danielson.

Richard Jones, with a party of friends, motored up from Jersey City to spend the week-end with Mr. Jones' parents, Mr. and Mrs. James Jones.

Miss Selma Hoffman has returned to her home in Jersey City after a brief visit with her grandparents, Mr. and Mrs. James Jones.

Mrs. Hattie Palmer of Willimantic was a week-end visitor at Mrs. Agnes Wood's.

Elmer Richmond was in town Saturday to attend the auction held at the farm formerly owned by him. There was a good crowd and the stock brought good prices.

Haying should be a thing of the past, but there are acres and acres of grass still uncut up this way. It has been a discouraging season. There are reports of blight on potatoes, also beans and other garden produce. The apple crop will be light.

Mrs. M. J. Johnson has closed her house here and gone to Pelham Manor, N. Y., where she will spend the winter.

At least once in every man's career he is ambitious to patent some freak invention.

SAILOR GIVEN LIFE SENTENCE FOR ATTACK ON SCHOOL TEACHER

NEW YORK, Aug. 9—(AP)—Extreme nervousness, arising from the further advance in money rates, characterised the trading in today's stock market. Despite persistent efforts of pools to mark up their favorites, a long line of popular issues were ranged behind minus signs at the close, several of the losses running from 2 to 8 points. Business showed a marked reduction in volume, the day's sales aggregating only 1,584,200 shares.

Call money held firm at 7 per cent. all day, with banks calling about $15,010,000 in loans. Time money was marked up to 6 1-4 per cent., the highest since July 1921, with banks apparently showing little eagerness to make large loans at that figure. This was construed in some quarters as an indication that even higher rates are likely within the next 30 to 60 days. Commercial paper ruled unchanged at 5 1-4 to 5 1-2 per cent. Contrary to expectations in some speculative quarters, no change was made today in the 5 per cent. re-discount rate of the New York federal reserve bank.

The weekly federal reserve report on brokers' loans for the week ended Wednesday showed an increase of $14,485,000, bringing the total to $4,273,884,000. The detailed statement showed a decrease of $67,979,000 in the loans of banks for their own account, and increases of $51,124,000 in loans for the account of out-of-town banks and $31,243,000 for the account of others, bringing the last-named total to $1,863,974,001.

Outside the stock market, chief speculative interest centered in the cotton market, which broke $7 to $7.50 a bale on selling beased on the belief that the government crop estimate, issued yesterday, was much too low in view of the recent excellent crop weather.

Directors of the General Motors Corporation declared only the regular quarterly dividend of $1.25 today, setting at rest rumors that the annual rate might be raised to $6, or an extra cash dividend of $2 declared at this time. An extra cash dividend is expected at the November meeting. General Motors common showed a gain of 2 1-8 at 185 3-8 after fluctuating between 187 1-4 and 187 1-8. Last week the stock sold at 195 1-2. Chrysler and Dodge Bros. perferred advanced a point each, and the other active Motors showed only fractional changes.

Montgomery-Ward had another spurt today to a new high record at 199 1-4 and then reacted to 196 7-8, up 3 5-8 net. New peak prices also were registered by Booth Fisheries common and first preferred, Loft, United Biccuit, and Tidewater Oil. Revival of activity in Schulte retail stores was based on reports that the Cutten group had acquired a large block of the stock. American Zinc issues, Consolidated Cigar, Radio, and Warren Bros.

There were several soft spots scattered throughout the list. New low prices for the year, or longer, were registered by the Three Fisk Rubber issues, Nanati Sugar preferred, Consolidated Gas preferred and several other ordinarily inactive issues. Indian Refining preferred broke 20 points on one sale, and sharp declines were registered by Coty, Paramount Famous Lasky, Keith Albee, Warner Bros. Western Union, By-Products Coke, and American Seating.

With the exception of another sharp run up to a new high record at 93 1-4 by St. Louis Southwestern, most of the rails drifted lower.

Wheat rallied 2 1-8 to 2 1-2 cents a bushel, and coffee moved up 10 to 12 points. Sugar prices held steady.

Foreign exchange trading was quiet with a drop of 11 points in Spanish pesetas to 16.69 cents as the only feature. Sterling Cables held around $4.85 1-2.

THE CURB MARKET

NEW YORK, Aug. 9—(AP)—Liquidation resulting from nervousness over the tight money rates, calling of loans by banks, and the Federal Reserve directors' meeting, carried prices generally downward on the curb market today, although there were a few strong points.

Warner Brothers Pictures encountered further heavy selling and dropped 4 points more below its recently established high. Part of the recent buying was ascribed to merger rumors, which were officially denied today. Universal Pictures eased on profit taking and Fox Theatre "A" was under pressure.

United Biscuit, both "A" and "B" shares, were strong points, going to new highs, Adams Mills, Fulton Sylphon, Palmolive Peet and National Rubber Machinery made fair gains, while Q. R. A. Co. shot up 15 points to its previous high in a few sales.

Several automobile shares showed independent strength. Checker Cab advanced to a new high at 38 1-2 on reports of pending earnings. Auburn rallied a point, and Safe-T-Stat improved in active trading. Durant dropped a point. Chain stores were heavy. Melville Shoe dropped a point on selling on the good news with the announcement of a 4-for-1 stock split up, and Sanitary Grocers dropped 12 points in a small turnover.

Oils and pipe lines were weak, Gulf of Pa. and Standard of Kansas dropped more than a point. Cumberland Pipe Line 8 and Eureka 6 points. Prairie Pipe Line rallied a point. Utilities were irregular, American Gas & Electric losing 4 points.

BURGESS BEDTIME STORIES

Chatterer's Long Swim

By THORNTON W. BURGESS

You'll find that fear will still persist
In finding things that don't exist.
—Old Mother Nature.

Chatterer the Red Squirrel would have been enjoying himself but for one thing. That one thing was the uncertainty in regard to Shadow the Weasel. Chatterer had become thoroughly rested. All the time he had sat away out on a branch overhanging the pond of Paddy the Beaver. Looking down, he looked right into the water. He had not been able to jump to that

"Who gave you a terrible fright?" Sammy asked

tree. He had had to climb it from the the ground He knew that anyone who might be following him would have to climb it from theground. He knew that if Shadow the Weasel were still following him he would be able to see Shadow before Shadow could get nearer than the foot of that tree. Had it not been for this he wouldn't have sat there so long for rest.

Sammy Jay came along just about the time that Chatterer was beginning to feel thoroughly rested. "Hello, Chatterer!" exclaimed Sammy Jay. "Aren't you lost away over here?"

New Sammy Jay and Chatterer the Red Squirrel are not the very best of friends. Usually when they meet they quarrel. They say mean things to one another. But Sammy Jay had spoken pleasantly this time. You see, Chatterer was so far from his usual places that it took Sammy by surprise, and somehow Sammy had a friendly feeling. It was the same way with Chatterer.

"No, Sammy, I'm not lost," said Chatterer, "but I've had a terrible fright. I think I'll go home."

"Who gave you a terrible fright?" Sammy asked.

"Shadow the Weasel," replied Chatterer "He was after me once more. I guess he must have given up. But it has made me terribly nervous. One never knows when that fellow may take it into his head to pick up a trail again."

"Then break the trail," said Sammy.

"That's easy for you to say, Sammy," retorted Chatterer. "You fellows who have wings don't leave any trail anyway. And if you did it would be easy enough to break. But we fellows who haven't wings don't find it so easy to break a trail. But I'm going to break it this time and break it good."

"How?" demanded Sammy, who was getting a little curious.

"I'm going to rest a few minutes INSERT CUT HERE longer," replied Chatterer, "and then I'll show you how I'm going to break that trail."

So Chatterer rested a little while longer. Then he ran down that tree to the edge of the water. To such a little fellow the farther shore looked a long, long way off. Chatterer took a long look. Then he waded in and began to swim. Sammy Jay's eyes popped right out with surprise.

"Y-you d-don't mean to say you're going to swim across that pond!" cried Sammy.

Chatterer made no reply. He was too busy. It is no time to talk when you are swimming. He kept his little legs going, paddle, paddle, paddle, as fast as he could. He kept his eyes fixed on a certain tall pine on the other side. He was sure now that Shadow the Weasel wouldn't be able to follow him. But he was a frightened squirrel just the same. It popped into his head that Billy Mink was a fine swimmer, and that Billy, who is a cousin of Shadow the Weasel, might not object to a squirrel dinner Every time he caught a glimpse of the end of a stick breaking the surface of the water he thought it was the head of Billy Mink. Chatterer didn't enjoy that swim. No, sir, he didn't enjoy it one bit.

ANNOUNCEMENTS

Broadway Theatre

After six months of idleness, the redecorated Broadway theatre will open its doors Monday evening, August 13, with the Garrick Players, a well known stock company consisting of Broadway talent. Operating on the rotary plan they will appear here every Monday and Tuesday with presentations of the latest and best stage hits from Broadway.

Only the latest and greatest Broadway successes will find places in their repetoire and each play is sure of presentation in a thoroughly capable Broadway manner. The only matter that won't be Broadway style is the price of admissions.

For the opening presentation Geo. M. Cohan's comedy success, "The Baby Cyclone" will be staged.

Aside from being a co-producer of The Garrick Players, Mr. Robert Stevens is also an actor of note, having scored successfully in "The Bat", "The Cat and the Canary," "Charm," Kosher Kitty Kelly," and many other New York successes.

George Dunigan, clever character comedian who has been associated with such well known players as Mrs. Fiske, Otis Skinner and Holbrook Blinn will also have charge of the technical end of the productions.

Miss Helene Wesley, our charming leading lady will have a splendid opportunity to display her ability in Geo. M. Cohan's tornado of laughter "The Baby Cyclone," the opening play. Miss Wesley is a graduate of the Georgia Tech college and before entering the professional theatre she was an amateur player of note.

Mr. Irving Morrow who will be seen in leading roles, comes of an acting family, his ancestors before him being identified with the stage. Mr. Morrows last engagement of note was with Anne Nichol's celebrated "Able's Irish Rose", touring London and the Orient.

Miss Sally Wall, this beautiful flaxen-haired miss is the ingenue of the company.

Peter Ferguson, dashing juvenile of the organization will fast become a fixture with local theatre goers.

Miss Pearl Young, capable young actress, will be seen in second roles. She became an actress at the tender age of three in the sensational melodrama "The Span of Life".

Charles Mylott has supported such well known stars as Wallace Reid, Blanche Walsh, Blanche Bates, Douglas Fairbanks and Holbrook Blinn. Mr Mylott is a splendid character actor

Jack Byrne, well known stage director will have charge of all productions and Charles Edwards will be the art director. Other members of this production include: Richard Fehr, Roberts Vose, Helen Vincent, Sidney Smith, Jack Dunigan, Rose Adelle.

Popular prices will prevail at all times. Matinees 25 and 50 cents. Evenings 35, 50 and 75 cents. Order your season subscription now.

Breed Theatre

When a novel read by virtually everyone is produced as screen entertainment, the film producer feels the weight of his responsibility to the followers of the novelist.

Probably no novel of modern times has been so widely read as Harold Bell Wright's "The Shepherd of the Hills," which was not only a "best-seller," for over a year after its publication, but a consistently popular book ever since. For that reason, the bringing forth of its screen version is a real responsibility.

Charles R. Rogers, who produced the story in an elaborate film version for First National Pictures, now showing at the Breed theatre, felt this responsibility so keenly that he spent months in careful preparation before a scene of the film was shot. Albert Rogell, who was not only a notable film director but one enthused over the possibilities of the novel as screen material, was selected to direct, as the very first step.

Then an all-star cast was selected with great care. Acting ability plus fitness to the character type required were the two qualifications that won each player who appears in his role. Then location, as many as possible being on the actual story locale, were mapped out. Meanwhile, the adaptation of the novel was being written by Marion Jackson.

After an intensive canvass of the entire film industry, Alec B. Francis was selected to play the title the approval of all readers of the role in "The Shepherd of the Hills"; Molly O'Day and John Boles were chosen to carry the romantic burden; Matthew Betz to play the villain role, and Romaine Fielding to enact the part of the Ozark patriarch, "Old Matt."

Strand Theatre

Showing today and tomorrow at the Strand theatre at popular prices.

"The Patent Leather Kid" is the story of the regeneration of the soul of a very humble private in the army, a boy who through environment and training was a poor citizen and a slacker.

He is drafted into the army against his wishes, is a coward in actual warfare and hates his government and his flag until, in the midst of a battle, his "buddy" is shot. This, combined with the love of a patriotic girl who is dancing in the Y. M. C. A. huts, brings about the sudden transition, and the boy is "reborn," his better qualities are revived and he emerges from the conflict a hero and a good citizen.

Palace Theatre

"Gentlemen Prefer Blondes" opened last night at the Palace theatre for a week's run. It is funnier than the book. And that is saying a whole lot, for Anita Loos' slim little satire on the American gold-digger and the men she fleeced has established itself as one of the comedy classics of the age. Miss Loos' scenario, which she wrote in collaboration with John Emerson, the playwright and screen director, along with Malcolm St. Clair's direction have done the trick.

And don't let's forget one of the greatest casts ever assembled in a comedy picture. In the first place there is Ruth Taylor, who plays the rôle of the innocent looking but oh-so-dangerous Lorelei, the gold-digging heroine. Miss Taylor, it is said, was selected from thousands of candidates, and after seeing her remarkable performance last night, there is no doubt that her choice was a happy one. Besides her, there are Alice White, Ford Sterling, Holmes Herbert, Trixie Friganza, Chester Conklin, Emily Fitzroy, Blanche Friderici, Mack Swain and a lot more familiar comedy players.

The picture is doubly interesting to those who have read Miss Loos' book, for it elaborates on Lorelei's early life, which was only touched upon in the book. She is seen first on a farm in Arkansas, then in Little Rock, then Hollywood and so on to New York and Paris where she finally lands America's richest bachelor. How she does it and how she fleeces all the other men with whom she comes in contact are details which should not be divulged. It is enough to say that she "takes" them, one by one, with only her innocent air and her wide eyes and guileless manner as weapons.

It is a picture which every woman and girl will love, if their applause and laughter last night is any indication, and it is a picture every gentleman should see, too—lest he fall into the error of preferring such a blonde.

In addition to the feature picture five entertaining acts of real good vaudeville are presented.

COLCHESTER

YOUNG PEOPLE HAD MOHEGAN PARK PICNIC

(Special to The Bulletin.)

COLCHESTER, Aug. 9—A crowd of about 150 people attended the picnic held under the auspices of the Colchester and Westchester Congregational churches at Mohegan park in Norwich on Wednesday. People began leaving from the center green about 9 a. m., some of the party riding on the large motor bus which was hired for the occasion. Private cars were furnished by Dr. A. L. Stebbins, E. T. Bunyan, W. E. Adams, C. H. Norton, the Misses Day, Robert E. Green, William McDonald, A. N. Lewis and Mrs. R. W. Lewis.

After arrival at the park, the younger people enjoyed the swings and see-saws, while others enjoyed swimming or boating on the lake. Potato and three-leg races were some of the exciting events of the day. William McDonal dwas in charge of the arrangements for the race events.

A fine lunch, which included salads, cake, pie, ice cream and watermelon, was enjoyed in true picnic fashion. During the day a number of the people motored about the city and admired the beauties of the Rose of New England. About 5 o'clock, the picnic party headed homeward and everyone unanimously agreed that this year's outing was the most successful for several years. Among the out-of-town people who attended the picnic were: Mrs. Elvira Carver and daughter, Miss Ruth Carver, of Centerbrook, and Mr. and Mrs. Trueman Spencer and children of Basking Ridge, N. J.

Fred W. Holmes is enjoying a week's vacation.

Mrs. Joseph Agranovitch is visiting friends and relatives in Sharon Springs, N. Y.

Joseph Johnson of Scott Hill was a guest of relatives on Myrtle avenue on Thursday.

Charles Daniels of Stonington was a guest at the John Higgins home on Myrtle avenue on Wednesday.

Mrs. Evelyn Mandel has returned to her summer home on Linwood avenue after several weeks' visit in New York city.

The Miner property on Norwich avenue has been purchased by Philip Kashkin, proprietor of the Perfect Leather Supply Co. Mr. Kashkin has resided in the former O'Connell residence on Pleasant street for several years and conducts his leather goods business in the former shoe factory building on Norwich avenue.

Miss Clara Park and Raymond J Sullivan were recent visitors in Danbury, where Miss Park will teach domestic science the coming year.

Mrs. Elvira Carver and daughter Miss Ruth Carver, of Centerbrook were callers on friends in town on Wednesday.

Members of the local order of Eastern Star have recently sent a postal card shower to Health Officer William T. Curry of Lebanon, who is critically ill with double pneumonia at the St. Joseph's hospital in Willimantic. A number of local people have visited him at the hospital during the past week. Mr. Curry is quite prominent in local Masonic circles and his many Colchester friends are hoping for his complete recovery.

The Nathaniel Foote chapter house of the Daughters of the American Revolution is to be open to visitors on Saturday afternoon. Mrs. Robert S. Brown of North Westchester will be hostess.

John Higgins of Myrtle avenue is visiting his daughter and her family in Stonington for a few days.

Rep. Frederick W. Holmes was a visitor in Norwich on Wednesday.

Charles L. Strong and Frank Holmes were callers in Hartford on Wednesday.

The Col. Henry Champion chapter, D. A. R., held a meeting in the Nathaniel Foote chapter house on Wednesday afternoon. The usual business was transacted, after which a good program was enjoyed. Papers on historical subjects were read by Miss Susan Pendleton, Mrs. T. D. Martin and Mrs. H. J. Bailey. Ice cream and cake were served by the hostesses, the Misses Pendleton and Miss Gilbert.

The Misses Mildred Sullivan, Doris Riley and Dorothea Raymond, Willard Sullivan and George Raymond, are visiting in Storrs for a week.

DISAPPROVES CLOSED HOURS FOR NEW LONDON BRIDGE

An application from the New London chamber of commerce, requesting certain closed hours of the highway bridge over the Thames, in order to accommodate vehicular traffic has been disapproved by the war department. This announcement was received in a letter addressed to Secretary Gardiner and read at the monthly directors' meeting this week. According to the Providence office of the war department much of the delay to travel over the bridge at busy hours may be easily overcome by boat owners not blowing their opening signals too soon. This matter is to be taken up with the masters of boats by the federal employes and also with those charged with opening the bridge.

Mrs. Esther Pollock, 265 West Main St., says: "Such rich, creamy suds"

"Rinso is the easiest way to wash clothes I ever heard of! I pity women who still use the old way.

"Why, all you do is soak your clothes in the rich, creamy Rinso suds for a while, and all the ground-in dirt loosens right out so you don't have to do any hard rubbing.

"Just soaking gets my wash whiter than if I had spent hours scrubbing and boiling it. No wonder clothes wear longer with so little rubbing.

"I find that Rinso goes farther than other soaps. That's because it's so sudsy."

MRS. ESTHER POLLOCK,
265 West Main St., Norwich, Conn.

Millions know Rinso is safe

Millions of women will never scrub or boil clothes again. "Rinso makes washday so easy," they write us. "Never saw such whiteness!" thousands say. In letter after letter, delighted Rinso users tell us that "Clothes last longer now"—for they aren't scrubbed thin.

Get the big household package of Rinso from your grocer. It's all you need—no bar soaps, chips or powders. Great in washers; the makers of 34 leading washing machines endorse it. For best results, follow directions on the box.

ADVANCE IN MONEY RATES CAUSED NERVOUSNESS IN THE STOCK MARKET

(Special to The Bulletin)

NEW LONDON, Aug. 9—One of the most drastic actions of military court martial has resulted in the trial of Edward Bergevin, familiarly known as "Frenchy" of Gardner, Mass., and Walter Waldman, Hartford, charged with criminally assaulting two young women school teachers and guests at the Hotel Griswold recently. Bergevin is given life imprisonment at a naval prison and Waldman is sentenced to 15 years imprisonment.

Bergevin and Waldman are of the type of sailors, who own automobiles and entertain their female friends in their cars. They formed the acquaintanceship of the young ladies and on two occasions took them for a ride. The third ride was taken about a month ago and at that time the bluejackets were supplied with liquor During the early morning hours and while on a road in the town of Ledyard the sailors started to partake of the liquor but the young ladies refused.

After much of the liquor had been consumed, the sailors attacked the school teachers. One of the young ladies leaped from the auto and fled in the darkness, but the other was restrained, being held in the car where she was assaulted and then left in the highway. The young lady who escaped the same treatment, came upon a milkman to whom she sought assistance and he informed the military authorities of what had occurred. When the sailors returned to the submarine base they were arrested by the guard and placed in the brig. There they remained until their trial was started a fortnight ago and with the evidence submitted to the naval department, the severe sentences were arrived at and returned to the submarine base. Bergevin and Waldman will be taken to prison this week.

ANOTHER MYSTERIOUS EARLY MORNING FIRE

(Special to The Bulletin)

NEW LONDON, Aug. 9—Another fire of a suspicious nature occurred early this morning when the three story building, corner of Meridian and Church streets, owned by the estate of Bryan F. Mahan, was attacked by flames. Timely discovery of the blaze resulted in little damage being done to the building, but damage to the stock in the store of Goodman, tailor, where the fire originated and was confined, will be approximately $500. The cause of the fire has not been determined. Deputy Fire Chief Calvin Edmunds is conducting an investigation.

The fire was discovered shortly after midnight when flames were observed in the rear of the tailoring establishment. An alarm was sent in from Box 21, corner of State and Huntington street. When the firemen arrived at the burning building, the entire rear of the store was a mass of flames. The front entrance was forced and one stream of water was thrown on the burning clothing, quickly subduing the fire, but not until a large quantity of clothing material had been destroyed. A quantity of gasoline that had been stored near the location of the fire, made the blaze a hot one and caused it to spread rapidly. The existence of the gasoline was explained by the statement that it was used for cleansing purposes. The store was closed for business at 7 o'clock and employes declared that they had not been in the store after that. Night Watchman Samuel Barnes was in the store at 10 o'clock and there was no trace of fire at that time. The proprietor of the store, Samuel Goodman, has not been at his place of business, for several weeks as a result of injuries he sustained by being struck by an automobile.

William S. Chappell has sold the dwelling houses, corner of Channing and Vauxhall street, to Anna R. DeGaetano.

Phyllis Brooks Coogan has sold a building lot, Fitch avenue, to Vera R. Matthews.

Harry Ellon has sold to John Ellon, formerly John Ellonsky, an undivided one-half interest in a residence on Parkway.

John Ellon, formerly John Ellonsky, has sold an undivided one-half interest in a dwelling house on Ocean Parkway.

SENT TO JAIL ON CHARGE OF VAGRANCY

(Special to The Bulletin)

NEW LONDON, Aug. 9—Leigh Paris, 20, who has been stopping at the Y. M. C. A., was presented in the police court today charged with vagrancy. But for the fact that Paris is undoubtedly of unsound mentality he would have been presented on a much more serious charge. Paris was on Main street yesterday and approached Patrolman George Perkins, interrogating the officer as to what qualifications one must possess to receive an appointment to the police force. The officer quickly realized that he was dealing with a practical joker and ordered Paris to proceed about his business. Paris walked a short distance and returning to the officer stated that he believed himself qualified for police duty for he declared that he could administer a beating as well as take one. He then started to prove his statement for he attacked the officer. Paris received one or two blows on the head from the officer's blackjack that opened the young man's scalp. Today in court Paris furnished considerable amusement for he stated that he intended to give Perkins a beating to prove his statement and qualifications to become a police officer. Further amusement was furnished when, after Prosecuting Attorney Daniel M. Cronin had made several attempts to get Paris to answer interrogatives, the accused turned to Judge Prince and inquired: "Who is this fellow that is asking me all these questions and what right has he got to talk to me? I won't answer any of his questions, but I will any that you ask me." Paris was sentenced to 10 days in jail. Within a few days he will be examined to determine his sanity.

A degree team is to be formed by Edelweiss lodge, No. 11, O. D. H. S. according to plans made at a meeting held last night in the Herwegh lodge rooms on Main street. Mrs. Rudolph Sarpu will be the captain.

The Martha Winthrop club held a bridge luncheon yesterday at Clark's tea garden, Noank, with about twenty-eight members present. Winners of high score prizes were Miss Thelma Douglas, Mrs. J. R. Latham, and Mrs. W. H. Guest. The affair was arranged by the following committee: Mrs. H. H. Mochon, Mrs. Arthur M. Beckwith, Mrs. Burton Gates and Mrs. H. L. Searles.

Members of the Ann Rogers Lyon tent, Daughters of Union Veterans of the Civil War were entertained by Mrs. Harriet Anderson of Brookside farm yesterday afternoon. The afternoon was spent in the enjoyment of cards and at 6 o'clock a chowder supper was served.

At a meeting of the Catholic Woman's club held tonight in the clubrooms on State street, plans were laid for a summer picnic. Mrs. John F. Hokanso was hostess at the affair.

The Misses Flora and Judy Main, daughters of Mrs. Archibald M. Main of Eastern Point were hostesses to a number of friends last evening. The evening was spent in playing bridge. High score prize winners were Katherine Eggleston, Mary Ware, and Matilda Belcher. Other guests were Nancy Smith, Peggy David, Virginia David, Dorothy Tolcott, Eleanor Tolcott, Julia Avery, Catherine Avery, Elizabeth Avery, Winifred McGuire, Katherine Eggleston, Eleanor Bowen, Mary Belden, Elizabeth Winsop, Jean Foster, Ruth Chandler, Beverly Chalker, Ruth Foljambe, Jane Fitch, Nancy Haskins, Dorothy Cooper, Matilda Belcher, Loretta Murnane, Eleanor Hull, Alice Ware, Elizabeth Ware, Mary Ware and Alice Dobley.

Mrs. Edward Benson of Gorton street was hostess last night at party given in honor of Mrs. Clarence Grimmer of North Carolina, who is a guest of her mother, Mrs. Virginia Wadham of Groton. Those present were Mrs. Frank DuBois, Mrs. C. F. Willard, Mrs. Edna Moses, Mrs. Henry Marquardt, Mrs. Alonzo Ashcraft, Mrs. John Mattson, Mrs. Clinton D Hanover, Mrs. Ralph Calvert and Mrs. Harold W. Cruise. Winners of bridge prizes were Mrs. Wadham and Mrs. Ashcraft.

Mrs. Carl Hammond and Miss Cynthia Waller daughter of Judge and Mrs. Charles B. Waller of Vauxhall street, entertained at a supper party last evening in honor of Miss Elizabeth Marshall, daughter of President and Mrs. Marshall of Connecticut college, who is to be married on August 25 to Edward S. Huntley, treasurer of the Winthrop Trust company. About twenty guests were present and Miss Marshall was presented with a beautiful gift from the assemblage.

Patrolman Frank Linehan, who was injured last week while trying to lift a horse to its feet when it fell on State street, was back on the job today. While still suffering from his injuries he was able to report for duty this morning.

Patients dismissed today from the Lawrence Memorial Associated hospital were eorge and Howard Steven of 16 Belden court; George Richmond of New Britain; Miss Muriel Archer, of Eastern Point, Mrs. Bella Arundel, 103 Golden street; Arthur Demers of Waterford and Mrs. James De Costa, 77 Truman street.

The two masted fishing schooner Andrew E. Hathaway of New Bedford, Mass., went on the rocks of Little Gull island this morning and was rescued by the Coast Guard patrol boat CG 288 and towed into this port shortly after noon. Her engine room and hull was flooded with water.

Shortly after the accident, which was caused by dense fog, two members of the crew of seven rowed to Little Gull and summoned assistance from the coast guard. Owing to an exceptionally calm sea the boat was pulled from the rocks with but little damage being done.

FUNERAL
John J. Pfeiffe.

The funeral of John J. Pfeiffer, Sr., former street commissioner of the town of Groton, was held this afternoon at 2:30 o'clock at the Groton Heights Baptist church and was attended by a large concourse of mourners, including many borough employes. The services were conducted by Rev. George R. Atha. The bearers were Henry E. Marquardt, Jerome Thompson, Chester Glidden, George Marquardt, Horace M. Newbury and George R. Hempstead. Burial was in Avery cemetery, Preston.

Andrew Makircha, a laborer, and residing at 93 Potter street, is a much arrested man within 24 hours, once because he didn't want to be taken into custody and the other because he insisted that he be locked up. Makircha was arrested yesterday charged with intoxication and afterwards was liberated upon obtaining a surety on his bond of $25. He was supposed to be in the police court this morning, but about 8 o'clock he was drunk again on North Bank street. As Makircha was approaching police headquarters, Station House Keeper Frank Corcoran was close behind him and intended to arrest him, but Makircha saved Corcoran the trouble for he entered the police station and declared that he was wrongfully arrested yesterday, but demanded that he be locked up today for he knew he was intoxicated and was glad of it. Corcoran was taking his prisoner to the cell room, when Makircha started on a run down the stairs and Corcoran believed that the former was trying to escape. Instead Makircha continued to run and made a dive for the cell in the first tier and the one that he occupied yesterday. He will be presented in court tomorrow.

Officers of the Worcester, Mass., police department came to New London this evening and with them were two members of the crew of the U. S. S. Camden, Frank J. Clark and Samuel A. Dupont, who had stolen an automobile in Worcester.

Louis Socol, 101 Squire street, was presented in the police court today, charged with reckless driving on Ocean avenue, and was fined $10 and costs. Socol was driving at a speed of 45 miles an hour yesterday when he was arrested by Motorcycle Officer Clarence Martin.

T. R. Clark, 151 Connecticut avenue, was driving on streets of the city yesterday in violation of the city ordinance, which requires that all vehicles have rubber tires or flat steel tires. Clark's auto was towing other autos that did not have tires. In court today Clark was given a suspension of judgment.

Several cases of violation of the city's parking laws were presented, the offenders being as follows, all of them for parking overtime on State and Main streets or for blocking traffic: W. R. Hockett, Hartford; Julia A. Walsh, Orange, N. J.; Donald Fraser, Salem, this state; Elmer E. Howe, Boston; Sidney R. Slosberg, Hartford; William J. Keenan, Edgewood, R. I.; Abe Rheingold, Norwich; Kenneth J. Hoffman, 54 Raymond street, West Hartford; Edward Saunders 10 Wallaston terrace, Dorchester, Mass.; George A. Batting, 12 Clement street, Waterford; James P. Flaherty, 99 Vauxhall street; Santo Sammataro, 2 Denison avenue; and Joseph Soltz, Huntington street. All failed to appear in court and they forfeited bonds of $2 and $5.

A special meeting of the city council will be held Friday afternoon at 5 o'clock to act on the recommendation of City Manager William A. Holt that the contract for installing new toilets in the Bartlett school be awarded to Hychison & Mono, who are the lowest bidders. The bids for the work were opened this noon at the office of City Purchasing Agent John Sheedy.

Several violators of the city's parking laws have been ordered to present themselves in court tomorrow, all of the violations comprising overtime parking. The violators are: Charles Santer, Chester Hill, Melrose, Mass.; Edgar T. Aldrich, 45 Norwood avenue; Charles H. Taylor, 37 West avenue, South Norwalk; Emil Lieberman, 234 Broadway, Norwich; John J. Hobron, 62 North Main street, South Norwalk. Lieberman was arrested for speeding on Jefferson avenue, being apprehended by Motorcycle Officer Clarence Martin.

With the September election approaching, the nominating petitions for members of the city council, board of school visitors and selectmen, are beginning to be filed for record at the office of the city clerk. This afternoon the petition for P. LeRoy Harwood, nominating Mr. Harwood for member of the board of school visitors was received, it being circulated by Nathan Belcher and Frederick W. Edgerton. Also was received the petitions of Harry Frischman for selectman and Ralph W. Wetmore for the same office. Mr. Frischman's petition was circulated by Joseph Perrone and Mr. Wetmore's was circulated by Raymond C. White. Joseph Perrone was nominated for the office of member of council and his petition was circulated by Joseph Perrone.

Her Feet Swollen, Inflamed Finds Instant Relief

Miss Inez Mae Carter, local salesgirl, tells how amazing new discovery soothed away all burning and soreness—at once.

Being a salesgirl in the Reid & Hughes Company, 195-201 Main Street, Miss Carter is on her feet from morning till night. Naturally her poor feet soon became swollen and inflamed. They ached and burned so much that every step almost made her scream with pain. But one day she tried Coolene. Imagine her amazement when she discovered that every sign of soreness vanished at once. Here's what she says:

"As salesgirl in one of this city's busiest stores, it is necessary for me to be on my feet all day. At first I didn't mind this, but soon even carpeted floors began to feel like concrete. I asked one of the salesmen how he managed to keep so fresh and lively. He told me about Coolene, how it ended his foot troubles and made them feel cool all day. The moment I tried Coolene, I felt relief from burning and soreness. I haven't had a corn or a blister since."

Now, you, too, can enjoy instant relief from tired, aching, burning feet. Coolene, a marvelous new kind of ivory-white soothing cream, contains a new combination of rare oils—and frankincense and myrrh—used by the ancients for centuries to heal foot tortures caused by hot desert sands.

It penetrates at once to the inflamed nerves—soothes and cools them—relieves congestion in the tiny veins. Almost instantly all foot miseries vanish and your aching feet feel new and refreshed.

No need now for messy foot-baths, powders or plasters that irritate the skin. Coolene is greaseless, vanishes instantly, cannot stain. Satisfaction guaranteed or small cost refunded. Sold and recommended by good druggists everywhere such as Lee & Osgood, J. A. Morgan, Andrew McLaughlin G. G. Engler.

Mary Jane Schindler, another salesgirl, who must be on her feet many hours a day, says: "Coolene brought instant relief to my sore, burning feet."

MYSTIC D. A. R. CHAPTER HELD ANNUAL PICNIC

(Special to The Bulletin)

MYSTIC, Aug. 9—The annual picnic of the D. A. R. chapter was held at the home of the Misses Annie, Geneva and Edith Rathbun, in Quiambaug, Wednesday. Those having autos furnished transportation. About 75 were present. The members had the privilege of inviting one guest and many of them availed themselves of the opportunity. All were seated at tables placed under the trees in the yard, an ideal place for a picnic, at 1 o'clock and Mrs. Estella B. Bradley, regent, asked that all unite in singing the last verse of America with trumpet accompaniment by Miss Louise Paige, a pupil of Professor Irving Cheyette of Columbia college. Dinner consisted of baked ham, potato salad, hot rolls, pickles, cake, ice cream and coffee. Among guests present were Mrs. Lucy Noyes of the San Antonio Texas chapter, Mrs. Henry Tift of Tifton, Ga., Mrs. Herbert L. Crandall, New London; and Mrs. Saunders of Westerly who were all called upon for remarks concerning their respective chapters. Miss Grace Denison Wheeler read a humorous poem, composed especially for the occasion, which received hearty applause. Later they all went into the house, which is the oldest in that section and is furnished entirely with antiques.

Harry and Fred Whipple of Metunuck Beach, R. I., caled on their cousin Charles Crouch, Tuesday.

NORWICH TOWN

The annual picnic of the First Methodist Episcopal church was held Wednesday at Ocean beach and was declared by all who attended to be a great success. The affair was in charge of Mrs. Rose Carter and it was largely due to her work that the picnic was so enjoyable. At about 8:30 fifty members and friends of the school boarded the special trolley and started in the glorious blaze of the first sunshine this week. Arriving at the beach about 11 o'clock most of the party went in bathing and found the water at a delightful temperature. At one o'clock a fine dinner of salads, assorted sandwiches cakes, fruit and soda was enjoyed. The sports of the afternoon included races and the usual events and were in charge of the pastor, Rev. George Warren Potter, assisted by Ralph Smith. The party returned home reaching the church at 7:30.

The Wolf Cubs held a meeting Wednesday evening at the parsonage in charge of Rev. George Warren Potter the cubmaster. The meeting opened with the Wolf Cub yell, followed by the laws and the Wolf Cub promise. The cubmaster read the fifth bite in the instruction. A game period followed. During the closing ceremony Wolf Cub Scout sFrederick Ross Frederick Miller and Ellis Bentley appeared before the pack and successfully passed their tenderfoot test.

The regular meeting of the Boy Scouts will be omitted this week as the scoutmaster, Rev. George Warren Potter, has been oblized to go to Boston on business. The next meeting will be held next week, on Friday evening, at 7 at the parsonage. Any scouts who need help for the tests will be assisted by Assistant Scoutmaster Tom Baldwin.

GREENEVILLE

Mr. and Mrs. Timothy Brennan and children, Timothy, John and Mary Brennan of Boswell avenue spent Thursday at Watch Hill.

The weather man still continues to be with the clerks on their half holidays this year for another ideal day was enjoyed Thursday with many of the clerks taking advantage of the warm weather and going to the seashore.

Mr. and Mrs. George Stewart have returned to their home 483 Boswell avenue after an automobile trip of 4,350 miles. Their destination was Califax, Louisiana, where Mr. Stewart's parents live. It was his first visit home in 10 years. He served in the army during the World war and has been in the employment of the Connecticut company for the past eight years and when the line was transferred to buses Mr. Stewart was one of the first bus drivers on the Norwich and Danielson route. He stated that the roads in the south were in very good condition and at some points of the route the speed limit was 45 miles an hour. The weather was very favorable during the six weeks that he spent on the trip. At times the temperature reached as high as 102 degrees. In Virginia and Tennessee through the mountain districts the weather was foggy and rainy. Among the points of interest Mr. Stewart stated noted for scenery were Natural Bridge and Endless Caverns. The Endless Caverns were wonderful and spectacular and are at New Market, Va. They are located in the heart of the historic Shenandoah Valley. The Caverns are illuminated by an elaborate system of indirect electric flood lighting. The walls are dry and the air pure. The temperature of the caverns is 56 degrees fahrenheit summer and winter. In the Endless Caverns are to be found the four most wonderful and spectacular formations ever discovered underground, the Oriental Palace, the Snowdrift, the Palace of the Fairies and the Diamond Lake. The camp grounds are elevated, well shaded, fully equipped with rest rooms, showers, electric lights, fire wood, tables and benches.

Joseph Farrell, decorator at the Porteous-Mitchell store, has returned to his home, 158 Prospect street, after spending a two week's vacation at Portland, Me. While there he visited the branch store of Porteous-Mitchell company, where he was at one time employed.

Richard Dixon of Brooklyn, N. Y., is spending a few days at the home of his sister, Mrs. Benjamin Lazaroff of Central avenue. Mr. Dixon is a former resident of Greeneville.

Harold Lipovitch has returned to his home on Central avenue after spending a week's vacation at Ocean beach.

Mrs. Elmer Flynn and children, Marforey, Lois, John and Donald Flynn spent Thursday at Watch Hill, making the trip by automobile.

The Bowen's Newsies took a trip to Block Island on the Nelseco Thursday. While there they played the bellhops of Ocean View hotel with the Newsies winning 8 to 7. The game was called in the sixth inning on an agreement between the teams to enable the Newsies to catch the boat home. The feature of the game was the fine pitching of Ed Quinn and the fielding of Louis Wielland, who made five assists and four putouts. William Machnicki led the batting attack getting two hits out of three times at bat also driving in the tieing and winning runs. The lineup for the Newsies were as follows: John Quinn, c; Edward Quinn, p; Raymond Higgins, 1b; William Machnicki, 2b; Lawrence Wielland, 3b; Richard McNeal, lf; Patrick Hoxan, cf; Ted Murphy, rf.

Mr. and Mrs. Ritchie Bacon of Richmond, Va., are visiting as the guests of Mr. and Mrs. William Pitcher at their home, 134 Prospect street.

Richard Seed of Middlebury, Vt., is spending a few days at the home of his parents, Mr. and Mrs. Richard D. Seed of Baker avenue.

TAFTVILLE

Rev. and Mrs. Arthur Varley of Portland, Conn., have sent out invitations for the marriage of their daughter, Miss Dorothy Varley to Milton E. Lane on Tuesday afternoon, August 21, at 4 o'clock at the First Congregational church of Portland. Rev. and Mrs Varley were former residents of Taftville when Rev. Mr. Varley who is now pastor of the church at Portland, was pastor of the Taftville Congregational church. Mr. Lane is secretary at the state's prison at Wethersfield.

Mr. and Mrs. Dennis C. Murphy and family of South A street moved Wednesday to one of the apartments in the house owned by Charles J. Bolduc on Bliss ville road. Mr. and Mrs. Bolduc and family have moved to Norwich and are residing on Broad street.

Miss Germaine Kocay has resigned her position with the spooling department of the local mills.

A new fence bordering the state highway is being erected by the state highway department in Blissville along the northern end of the Blissville pond.

Mrs. George F. Blood of North Third avenue, of the local mills welfare department is enjoying her annual vacation.

Mrs. John Krauss and Miss Anna Werner who have been guests of Mr. and Mrs. William Enos and family of Maennerchor avenue have returned to their homes in Brooklyn, N. Y.

After a visit of two weeks with his son-in-law and daughter, Mr. and Mrs. Wilbur Dodge and his son and daughter-in-law, Mr. and Mrs. Wilfred Pollard of Block Island, William Pollard has returned to his home on South Second avenue.

The Lisbon Community club was organized Monday evening when 66 of the citizens of the town met in the assembly hall at the new school at Newent. The meeting was called to order by Selectman Harry Hull, and he was elected president of the association. Mrs. George Ross was named vice-president, Miss Sarah Hyde was elected secretary, and the treasurer is Mrs. Frank Mell. The committee elected to draw up the constitution and by-laws consists of George Reimboldt chairman; Frank Mell and Albert Rist. Mrs. Jesse Phillips was elected chairman of the entertainment committee and Mrs. Henry J. Kendall is chairman of the refreshment committee. It is planned to have an entertainment and refreshments at the next meeting. The club is being formed to foster community spirit and further co-operation among the citizens of Lisbon which is fast developing into a thriving community.

Eric Pickering of Pawtucket, R. I., a former Taftville resident is the guest of Arthur Hean of Baltic, and has been calling on friends in the village during the week.

Mrs. W. C. Chadrick of Oakland, R. I., is spending a few days with her daughter, Mrs. Christina De Roy of North B street.

INDUSTRIAL EXPANSION PLANS GIVEN APPROVAL BY CONFERENCE

Consideration of plans for industrial develoument of Norwich, both from within and from without, was taken up at a meeting held Thursday morning in the chamber of commerce rooms by the industrial development committee of which Charles W. Taggart is chairman. In conference with the committee members were leading citizens who had received invitations to the meeting, but a number were unable to attend because of the Thursday half-holiday which kept them confined to their stores in the morning.

Recommendations were adopted which will be presented to the meeting of the board of directors of the chamber of commerce which is to take place this (Friday) night at the Norwich Golf club.

One of the recommendations advocated by the conference was for an early adoption here of the Keene, N. H., plan by which that city acquired 16 new industries in a period of ten years. This differs from some other plans in that local money raised was not invested in stock of the new concerns, nor given as bonuses or to cover moving expenses.

It was all invested in real estate as the Keene plan provides for the erection of factories for reputable concerns, according to their specifications.

The second recommendation adopted had to do with service for manufacturers and, it being the general feeling of those present, that the chamber should do all within their power to assist local industries and with this end in view made specific recommendations which called for a conference with the officials of the New England council for a discussion of the local industrial situation, with the following object in view:

"To promote the interests of the manufacturing industries in Norwich and vicinity; to bring about closer relations among those engaged in manufacturing; and to secure concerted action on their part in the improvement of existing conditions; also through cooperation, investigations and systematic interchange of ideas and information, to secure for members the benefits of the best, most efficient and most economical factory methods in use."

Several factors bearing on the local situation were discussed at length and it was the unanimous opinion of those present that more aggressive action on the part of the chamber and a conservative program of industrial development should be adopted similar to the best practices now being followed in other cities.

GIVES CAMPERS WARNING AGAINST UNBOILED WATER

The old adage that water purifies itself during every eight miles of flow is far from true, according to chemists of Connecticut water supply utilities, and campers, picnickers, hikers and others who heed the midsummer call of the wild would do well to remember the fact. In the past, many such parties knowing that a stream was many miles in length have taken it for granted that the water had purified itself—much to their future regret. Water running a long course does undergo changes, but it so happens also that the longer its course the greater are the chances of pollution.

Those who plan jaunts through the woods and forests on their vacations or on week-end trips are cautioned by the water companies to make certain of the source of their water supply for it is very apt to be far different from the pure supply received in their homes from well protected reservoirs. Springs are usually pure but great care should be taken to see that contaminating factors are absent. Water taken from streams should always be boiled before being used.

Although these same streams may be tributaries of Connecticut reservoirs every precaution should be taken nevertheless. The water companies themselves take extreme caution in order to protect the public health. Surrounding territory of the reservoirs is carefully guarded against danger of pollution. Chemical treatments are often administered to the water to insure purity. Thus, it may be seen that the water of the same streams which furnish the public supply is far different when it reaches the home than when in the stream.

BIG CONSTRUCTION WORK DUE IN JEWETT CITY

There seems to be no inclination on the part of the state of Connecticut to give the towns of Griswold and Lisbon any opportunity for business apathy. Beginning in the near future road contracts that will cost around a half million dollars will be put into operation, right in what properly may be called Jewett City. Two great bridges are to be built, with steel and cement construction work, the like of which has never been known in this section in all its history. Hundreds of men are to be employed. There will be skilled cement workers, highway engineers, steel riveters and the usual many hands assigned to grading and general labor.

Some of the old timers looking over the proposed survey of the new bridge which is to span both the Quinebaug and Pachaug rivers, recalled the time when during the flood of 1886, all the area which is to be the site of the proposed new construction, was occupied by a roaring torrent, which no local bridge or dam was able to withstand.

WOMEN VOTERS LEAGUE TO PICNIC AT STATE FARM

Miss Katherine Ludington, vice-president of the National League of Women Voters, will be the speaker at the morning session of the regular quarterly meeting of the New London County League of Women Voters next Wednesday at the Connecticut State Farm for Women at Niantic.

The meeting will be open to the public and it is expected that many friends of the league as well as members will take advantage of the opportunity to hear Miss Ludington.

The business meeting will start at 11:15 o'clock in the morning. Basket luncheons will be eaten at noon. At the afternoon session, Dr. Jamison, resident physician at the farm, will speak. Miss Edna Leighton Tyler of New London will preside at the meeting.

Tax Equalization Meeting

The tax equalization committee held its usual weekly meeting Thursday evening. This time they met in the superior court jury room at the court house.

ROAD CONDITIONS IN STATE ARE REPORTED

WHITON FAMILY REUNION WITH NEW LONDON MEMBER

By invitation of Hon. Lucius Whiton of New London a reunion of the Whiton Family association is to be held at his home on Saturday, Sept. 1. A. Sherrill Whiton of New York who is well posted on the history of the Whitons in England and America will give an address and it is hoped by the officers that Dr. Walter Whiton, son of Sylvester Whiton, formerly of Hartford, will be present and speak.

William H. Hall of West Hartford is chairman of the programme committee of the association of which Frank W. Whiton of Hartford is president and Mrs. L. K. Shloman of New London is secretary.

CITY G. & E. DEPARTMENT PLANNING FOR PICNIC

If present plans materialize about 270 members of the Norwich gas and electrical department will attend its fifth annual outing at Ashland park, Jewett City, on Aug. 23. A programme has been arranged by the committee in charge including athletic events for all, a bake by "King George" Jacques and dancing in the club house from 5 to 11 o'clock. The picnickers are to gather at the local office and will have the use of the grounds and clubhouse until 11 o'clock in the evening. In years past the department has held its outing at Red Top, but Ashland park was chosen this year as it has better facilities for a picnic. General Manager C. W. Taggart is in general charge of the outing, assisted by the various department heads.

HOT WEATHER DAYS SEND SUBSCRIBERS TO TELEPHONES

As the mercury goes up, so ascends the daily number of telephone calls in Connecticut, and the hotter the weather the greater the tendency among subscribers to use their telephones. There is no midsummer slump in the telephone industry and telephone operators handle more calls in sweltering weather than at any other time—with few exceptions—during the year.

This is particularly true of toll calls which ascend in a sharp curve as the temperature rises. The rise in toll calls during the summer is attributed largely to vacationists. Connecticut's numerous shore and country vacation spots are always crowded during July and August with people from Connecticut cities and other states. Most of these people, at various times during their vacations, find it necessary to make telephone calls to their homes or offices. In this way toll traffic to points within the state and to other states is greatly increased.

Hot weather also causes an increase in local telephone calls in Connecticut. Local business and social telephone use shows a marked increase in hot weather. Undoubtedly the present summer will witness the largest use of the telephone ever made in this state. Last year the number of calls increased in a far greater ratio than the number of new telephones and an even greater increase is likely this year.

HOOVER BUSY ON THE EVE OF HIS ACCEPTANCE SPEECH

From Early Morning Until Late Afternoon Mr. Hoover Was Engaged in a Round of Conferences With Dr. Work, Senator Moses and Others High in Republican Circles —Gov. Fisher Predicts That Pennsylvania Will Stand Strongly Republican in the November Election—Hoover Celebrated His 54th Birthday and Received Many Messages of Congratulation.

STANFORD UNIVERSITY, Cal., Aug. 10—(AP)—Awaiting formal notification tomorrow in this university's mammoth athletic bowl, Herbert Hoover celebrated the 54th anniversary of his birth today by applying himself a little more closely than usual to the task set for him by the republican party in making him its 1928 presidential standard bearer.

From early morning until late afternoon he was engaged in a round of political conferences with Dr. Hubert Work, chairman of the republican national committee; Senator George H. Moses, of New Hampshire, one of the party leaders in the east, and others high in republican councils.

At the end of the day, however, he laid aside these duties to be the guest of newspaper correspondents and news photographers at a birthday banquet at a Palo Alto hotel. Later he returned home to end the day with relatives.

Mr. Hoover began the day with a conference with Dr. Work, who arrived last night. For several hours the two studied reports brought west by Dr. Work, after which they visited the university stadium to test he amplifiers set up for tomorrow's ceremony.

Dr. Work, Gov. Fisher of Pennsylvania, and Senator Moses were luncheon guests after which Mr. Hoover conferred with the New Hampshire senator over political conditions in the eastern states.

Both Dr. Work and Senator Moses were silent concerning their conferences with Mr. Hoover.

Gov. Fisher confidently predicted that Pennsylvania would stand staunchly republican in the forthcoming election. The republicans were presenting a solid front, he said, while there already had been deflections in the democratic ranks, the most important being that of Vance McCormick, Harrisburg publisher and former chairman of the democratic national committee.

Neither Hoover nor Moses would discuss the letter sent to the republican nominee by Charles L. Burrill, republican candidate for lieutenant-governor of Massachusetts, demanding the resignation of Moses as eastern campaign manager. When Moses was asked at the Hoover home if he had any comment, the secretary advised him to say nothing.

"That's just what I said last night in San Francisco," Moses replied, "and that's just what I have to say now—nothing."

"Come on then, let's be going," the nominee said, and he and the senator entered an automobile to drive to the stadium where the chairman of the notification committee tested out the loud speakers which are to carry his voice tomorrow to the throng gathered in the bowl.

While bands parade and play, airplanes will stunt overhead and aerial bombs will be exploded for the entertainment of the crowd during the early afternoon. The actual speaking program is not to start until five minutes before 4 o'clock, Pacific coast time. Then Governor C. C. Young of California will call the meeting to order and in a five-minute address present Senator Moses.

The New Hampshire senator has prepared a characteristically brief address, the reading of which will require only ten minutes. As he presents this state's most distinguished son, the bands will play "The Star Spangled Banner" and Hoover then will begin the reading of his acceptance address. This is expected to require at least an hour.

The birthday dinner by the news writers and photographers was more or less a stunt affair, with the skits symbolic of events leading up to Hoover's nomination with fictitious messages from all of his late opponents in the pre-convention campaign as well as from his democratic foe in the fight for the presidency.

Many messages congratulating him upon his birthday were received by the nominee. Chief among the congratulatory missives was a huge birthday card, elaborately designed and bearing greetings from President and Mrs. Coolidge, members of the national republican committee and other prominent friends of Mr. Hoover.

HAS NO DOUBT HOOVER WILL CARRY RHODE ISLAND

NEW YORK, Aug. 10—(AP)—Senator Jesse H. Metcalf of Rhode Island, recently appointed chairman of the republican finance committee for that state, issued a statement today that "although we will have a hard fight in our state, I do not think there is a doubt but that Hoover will carry Rhode Island and the rest of the country as well."

"This will be no campaign of ballyhoo. It will be one for patriotic thinking people and if there have been any doubts heretofore, when Mr. Hoover's speech is heard by the country Saturday, the popular song 'The Sidewalks of New York' will be changed to 'My Country 'Tis of The.'"

PREDICTS HOOVER WILL CARRY MASS. BY 150,000 VOTES

WASHINGTON, Aug. 10—(AP)—Harmony exists in republican ranks in Massachusetts, it was reported here today by Representative Treadway of that state, where Charles L. Burrill, candidate for the republican nomination for lieutenant-governor, has protested to Herbert Hoover against activities of Senator Moses of New Hampshire.

Representative Treadway dismissed the Burrill incident with a smile and predicted a victory for Mr. Hoover in Massachusetts by a majority of not less than 150,000.

"There is absolute harmony in the republican ranks," Treadway said. "I will say Senator Moses is an astute politician. Charlie Burrill is a very vigorous campaigner. There you are. I have no doubt Senator Moses will not lose his job."

TWO YOUNG ALPINISTS PERISHED IN THE ALPS

VIENNA, Aug. 10—(AP)—Two young Alpinists died and a third was rescued with frozen feet today after being marooned for three days and nights in an attempt to scale the sides of Bachstein, the tallest peak of its range in the Austrian Alps. Four others in the party were rescued unharmed by the exposure, according to reports from Schladming.

The seven young mountain climbers, all accomplished and experienced, had ascended about 8,000 of the 9,500 feet to the summit when they encountered a snowstorm which prevented either proceeding or returning.

They took shelter on a ledge. One youth, named Sturm, went mad and his companions clamped him to the rock. However, he freed himself and disappeared over the precipice.

It was impossible to reach the survivors directly but a rescue party climbed above them and lowered a rope. One by one they were drawn up but as the fifth, named Windsteig, was being hoisted the rope broke and he was hurled back down the mountain side to his death.

Before a new rope could be knotted together night shut down and the last of the party was not rescued until the next morning. His feet had frozen and it was necessary to carry him down the mountain to a hospital on a sled.

Before Windsteig started the ascent he had said to his mother, "If I am not back by Tuesday, Mother, then I shall be dead."

HARTFORD, Aug. 10—(AP)—Torrential rain that started shortly after 10 o'clock tonight and fell steadily for more than an hour to the accompaniment of vivid flashes of lightning threw sections of Hartford into darkness, flooded a number of streets and caused a partial disruption of trolley and telephone service. Automobile traffic was paralyzed on a few streets by the storm which drowned pavements beneath a foot of water. No damage was reported from the lightning.

N. Y. POLICE SERGEANT INJURED BY BOMB

NEW YORK, Aug. 11—(AP)—Police Sergeant John Green was taken to Bellevue hospital today suffering from severe injuries received in a bomb explosion in Second avenue near 34th street. The bomb exploded near a Second avenue barber shop. A strike of East Side barbers is in progress.

Sergeant Green's hand was badly mangled, his chest lacerated and both eyes burned when the bomb exploded as he held it. His condition was regarded as critical.

VAST SEIZURE OF LIQUOR IS IMPENDING IN ONTARIO

WINDSOR, Ont., Aug. 10—(AP)—Subpoenas were served today on charges brought by the Ontario liquor control board which may result, if convictions are obtained, in confiscation of millions of dollars worth of liquor and fines totalling $36,000 or the imprisonment of 36 exporters.

The subpoenas charged the 36 exporters with illegal possession of liquor and their stocks were placed under police guard. In case of conviction the judges may impose fines from a minimum of $100 to a maximum of $1,000 on each defendant, or may order jail terms instead of fines.

Heading the list of exporters subpoenaed are Harry Low, head of the Carling Brewery-Erie Transit Co. syndicate and Sid Nathanson, head of the Intertransit Co., an exporting concern for wide-spread liquor interests.

Low and Nathanson were ordered to appear in police court on Monday and the other defendants probably will be arraigned early next week.

POSSIBILITY OF RETURN FLOW OF GOLD TO U. S.

NEW YORK, Aug. 10—(AP)—Reports from London of the purchase of $3,125,000 gold for ear-marking by the Federal Reserve bank of New York introduced a new factor into the credit situation today—the possibility of a return flow of gold to this country.

While the report was interpreted somewhat bullishly on the stock market, no easing influence was felt on the money market, call money advancing to 8 per cent and time money to 6 1-2 for some dates as banks called another $25,000,000 in loans. At the same time 150-180 day acceptances moved up to 5 1-4 per cent.

Federal Reserve bank officials refused to confirm or deny the purchase, although the transaction in effect was confirmed by their statement that it was "customers' business and not open to discussion."

COOLIDGE TO KEEP UP THE ARMY AND NAVY

SUPERIOR, Wis., Aug. 10—(AP)—President Coolidge does not intend to allow the strength and efficiency of the American army and navy to be tampered with or weakened on account of the anti-war treaty now under negotiation with fourteen other nations.

He looks upon the United States military establishment as moderate and as designed exclusively for defensive purposes. The anti-war covenant binds the signatory powers to refrain specifically from attack upon each other and therefore in the opinion of the chief executive, has little connection with matter pertaining purely to national defense.

CABLED PARAGRAPHS

LONDON, Aug. 10—(AP)—The Archbishops of Canterbury and York issued a statement advising the clergy of the parish churches of England to offer prayers of thanksgiving on the occasion of the signing of the Kellogg anti-war pact in Paris on Aug. 27.

PLYMOUTH, Eng., Aug. 10—(AP)—Elsie Janis, American actress, was held up for a short time on her arriving in England today because she couldn't produce her labor permit. Her mother explained that the permit was somewhere in their baggage and the authorities allowed Miss Janis to land.

NAPLES, Italy, Aug. 10—(AP)—The observatory on Vesuvius announced a new sudden activity of the volcano during the last 12 hours. It was most pronounced in the southwest quarter of the crater, as was the eruption on Tuesday. The observatory expects that the disturbance will continue for several days.

PLANNING TO ROW FROM BOSTON TO ST. JOHN, N. B.

BOSTON, Aug. 10—(AP)—The start of a 500 mile wherry trip, probably the longest on record, will be made here tomorrow morning when Dr. T. K. "Tommy" Richards, Harvard athletic association surgeon, and Lothrop Withington, Boston attorney and former Crimson football and crew star, leave for St. John, N. B., in their 28 foot craft. They plan to row back if the weather is favorable.

Neither of the oarsmen, who have attempted many long rowing trips, including one from Norfolk, Va., to Boston are contemplating any record-breaking rowing feat.

Their boat, a combination of three types of vessels, was built according to Dr. Richards' own ideas of seagoing wherries. In its speed and lines the craft resembles a wherry but for seaworthiness the shape has been modified along the lines suggested by the Eskimo kyack, and a fisherman's dory. It is built of Spanish cedar with a brass keel and is 28 feet long and 32 inches wide all over.

The oarsmen intend to camp along the way and their camping equipment, the result of a two years world wide search by Dr. Richards, includes a tent which weighs but 29 ounces, air mattresses and sleeping bags which, though very warm, weigh but two and a half pounds.

They plan to take advantage of the tide, which means they will sometimes row during the night. They expect to man the oars on an average of ten hours a day, during which they hope to cover 75 miles.

FLOOD IN EVERGLADES ABOUT 25 MILES WIDE

MIAMI, Fla., August 10—(AP)—A vast sheet of flood waters, 25 miles wide in places and of undetermined length, lay tonight in the Everglades lowlands west of Fort Pierce and around the eastern and northern shores of Lake Okeechobee as a result of torrential rains accompanying the West Indian hurricane.

Within the expanse were many marooned families, thousands of acres of fertile tilled lands, citrus groves and settlements. Definite news from many communities awaited the recession of waters. Highways, for the most part, still were blocked by washouts or overflow.

Okeechobee City, with about 1200 population, was the largest affected town. Storm damage to the city was estimated at many thousands of dollars.

Efforts to reach Indiantown, where two men were reported killed, were unavailing as the highway to that place, 20 miles southeast of Okeechobee was impassable and the railroad out of service. Water was said to be found feet deep in the town.

Lake Okeechobee itself has risen 2 1-2 feet.

Fifty persons were marooned at Hulls Grove, five miles west of Jupiter, when the Loxahatchee river rose and swirled over the country for miles.

NEW ALBANY, IND., BOY SHOT IN RAID BY DRY AGENTS

NEW ALBANY, Ind., Aug. 10—(AP)—Claude Smith, 16, was shot in the left arm and five other persons including Miss Eula Smith, 15, were arrested, in a raid by prohibition officers on the home of James Smith, 50, near Hardinsburg early today. The Smith boy was brought to a hospital here where his arm was amputated.

George Winkler of Indianapolis, deputy prohibition administrator for Indiana declared the shooting occurred during a scuffle and was accidental and exonerated Charles Liebert, New Albany agent who fired the shot. Turner Devine, one of those arrested, said one of the officers fired because Smith did not get out of bed quickly enough.

A 150 gallon still, 13 barrels of mash, a small quantity of liquor and other contraband was found near the house, the agents said.

SIX NEW CERTIFIED PUBLIC ACCOUNTANTS

NEW BRITAIN, Aug. 10—(AP)—Six applicants of 30 who took the examinations last May for certified public accountants have passed the tests, it became known today. They are, William A. Day, New Britain; Charles W. Church, Bridgeport; G. E. Nye, Gorton; Theron L. Ludington, Hartford; D. C. Duffun, Bristol, and Walter Musgrove, Hartford.

18 Persons Injured Wreck On N. Y. C.

Diner and Pullman Car Left the Rails and Hung Over Edge of 15 Foot Embankment.

FONDA, N. Y., Aug. 10—(AP)—Eighteen persons were injured today, one seriously, and a score badly shaken when a diner and a Pullman chair car were snapped from the rear of New York Central train 58, the "Metropolitan," left the rails and hung over the edge of a 15-foot embankment about a mile east of here. The train, eastbound from Chicago to New York was traveling fast and the accident occurred where the railroad curves near to the state highway.

The most gravely injured was: William Houston, Buffalo, passenger, badly burned by escaping steam, condition reported serious.

All of the injured were taken to St. Mary's hospital, Amsterdam. Ten remained in the hospital tonight, including:

John B. Strobel, Albany, N. Y., brakeman, severe cut on arm.

Mannie Martin, Negro, Buffalo, waiter on diner, painfully burned.

Miss Katherine Rutledge, Stamford, Conn.

All except Strobel and Martin sustained shock, cuts and bruises. Some of those remaining in the hospital will be able to leave for their homes tomorrow.

The cause of the derailment had not been ascertained tonight.

When the two cars pulled away from the train and left the track, they tore up the eastbound passenger track for about 300 feet, before stopping on the edge of the embankment. The westbound passenger track was reported little damaged. While the wreckage was being cleared away, passenger trains were routed over the freight tracks.

HIGH RECORD PRODUCTION OF POTATOES IN NEW ENGLAND

BOSTON, Aug. 10—(AP)—A new high record in the production of potatoes is indicated for this year, according to the New England crop reporting service, which today estimated the present production at 459,737,000 bushels. This would be 52,963,000 bushels greater than the total of 406,964,000 bushels harvested last year. Improved growing conditions in July are given as the reason for the increase.

The New England crop is estimated at 47,055,000 bushels, compared with 45,598,000 bushels harvested last year and 47,240,000, the five-year average from 1923 to 1927. This moderate yield forecast for New England reflects the probable bad effect of the rains of the last three months rather than the appearance of the crop at present.

The Maine crop is estimated at 38,000 bushels, leading the country. Last year the Maine harvest was 37,288 bushels.

The prospect for the country's apple crop remains little changed from a month ago and the estimated aggregate production is 33,277,000 barrels. The total last year was 25,900,000 barrels and the five-year average from 1923 to 1927 is 32,442,500 bushels.

The apple prospect for New England declined sharply during July and is now estimated at 1,661,000 barrels compared with 1,635,000 barrels last year and 1,922,400 barrels, the five-year average.

Peaches are a bumper crop and only slightly short of the record crop of 1926.

MORE THAN 100 YACHTS IN NEWPORT HARBOR

NEWPORT, R. I., Aug. 10—(AP)—More than 100 of the approximately 200 yachts participating in the annual cruise of the New York Yach club were crowded in the harbor here tonight in preparation for the 43rd race for the Astor cup tomorrow. The yachts sailed here from New London, the scheduled run for the J. P. Morgan cup having been cancelled by Commodore Vincent Astor, owing to a dense fog and absence of breeze.

The Astor cup race tomorrow will provide competition for two prizes, one for the schooner class and another for the sloops. It will be sailed without time limit over the customary 38 mile triangular course, starting and finishing at Brenton Reef light ship in Narragansett bay. If the weather is favorable a large entry list is expected.

Chief interest in the schooner class centers in the competition between the arch rivals, the Vanitie and the Resolute while the Valiant and the Prestige promise to furnish the competition among the sloops.

DIAMOND MERCHANT AND HIS AIR PILOT KILLED

CAPE TOWN, South Africa, Aug. 10.—(AP)—R. G. Chandler, a diamond merchant of Kimberley, and his pilot were killed today when their airplane crashed. Mr. Chandler used the plane to travel from one diamond digging to another.

In the wreckage of the machine were found nearly $20,000 in money and a large box of diamonds.

Woman Shot Dead By Jealous Wife

Mrs. Logan Perkins Killed Woman Whom She Charged With Breaking Up Her Home.

SOMERSET, Ky., Aug. 10—(AP)—Mrs. Logan Perkins, 27, of Whitley City, wife of a McCreary county, Kentucky, circuit clerk, was in jail facing a charge of murder here today after having shot a woman to death whom she charged with breaking up her home.

Shortly after midnight this morning, Mrs. Perkins walked down the aisle of a southbound passenger train as it was passing Ferguson, two miles south of here, stopped behind a seat where her husband was talking with Miss Pearl Owens, 27, of Louisville, and fired twice killing Miss Owens instantly.

While passengers in the day coach scrambled for safety Conductor Dan Deneen snatched the pistol from Mrs. Perkins' hand before she had an opportunity to fire again. She was arrested and taken to a hospital here where it was said she was in a state of nervous collapse. She will be arraigned at a preliminary hearing tomorrow.

Perkins, who said he had boarded the train at Somerset and had taken a seat beside Miss Owens with whom he was acquainted, declared that his wife was jealous. He said he had made no appointment to meet Miss Owens.

GOV. SMITH AT FUNERAL OF GEORGE E. BRENNAN

CHICAGO, Aug. 10— (AP) —Eyes dimmed with tears looked down upon the body of George E. Brennan today when Gov. Alfred E. Smith said farewell to an old friend.

For a lingering moment, the democratic nominee for the presidency stood beside the coffin of the man who had championed his cause, before he turned, in silence, never to look at him again.

Governor Smith was only a sorrowing friend today, from the time he arrived on the 20th Century Limited at 10:20 a. m. until he returned to New York on the same train some three hours later. He had only one purpose in making the hurried trip to Chicago, and that was to attend the funeral of his ally. From the train he went direct to the residence of the former Illinois national committeeman on Sheridan road. Expressing his sympathy to the bereaved widow and family, Governor Smith lingered only to view the body.

Going to Our Lady of Mt. Carmel church for the public services, Governor Smith sat solemnly for an hour as the requiem high mass of the Catholic church was celebrated. There was no glowing eulogy nor other tribute—Mr. Brennan's own. The governor occupied a pew near the altar, opposite the Brennan family.

As the services ended, the nominee walked solemnly from the chapel and stood with bowed head as the body of his comrade was carried past him to its final resting place.

FRAUD ALLEGED IN KANSAS CITY PRIMARY

ST. LOUIS, Aug. 10—(AP)—David M. Proctor, dry candidate who ran third in the republican senatorial primary, tonight wired Nathan Frank, wet, who placed second, that "wholesale frauds" were practiced in Kansas City in the election, and that Frank is "in fact and in law the republican senatorial nominee."

Frank was defeated by Roscoe C. Patterson of Springfield, a dry, by a plurality of 7,156 votes in returns from 3,562 precincts out of 4,143. The vote was Patterson 99,206, Frank 92,00 and Proctor 80,763.

Proctor, who is in San Antonio, Texas, charged that the Kansas City democratic machine, the republican election and police machinery and "a certain newspaper" stole from Frank and himself 10,000 votes and "literally gave an equal number in a lump sum to Patterson."

Frank was in Asbury Park, N. J., tonight.

CHAMBERMAID SAVED LIVES IN BURNING TAVERN

LONDON, Aug. 10.— (AP) —Betty Faulkner, a 20 year old chambermaid, saved many lives in the burning of a tavern today but perished in the flames when she tried to rescue her fiancee, Walter Thorpe, and his mother and brother. When the inn caught fire she awakened the other lodgers who escaped, but she disregarded their warnings and went back to arouse the Thropes. All four died together.

MINOR REVOLUTION IN INTERIOR OF BRAZIL

ASUNCION, Paraguay, Aug. 10.—(AP)—A revolutionary movement has cropped up in the state of Matto Grosso, Brazil, according to a telegram received by the minister of the interior from the town of Pedro Juan Caballero, on the Brazilian frontier. It is believed here that Pedro Celestino, who is thought to be in Rio Janeiro, is the leader of the revolt.

TROPICAL STORM HAS SWUNG INTO SOUTHERN GEORGIA

Gales and Drenching Rains Have Caused Minor Damage to Southern Georgia Cities and Towns—In Florida a Palm Beach Red Cross Unit Reached Fifty Marooned Persons at Hull Groves—Around Kissimmee Half the Grapefruit Has Been Destroyed and 20 Per Cent of Oranges Were Ruined.

ATLANTA, Ga., Aug. 10—(AP)—Whimsically changing its course after entering the Gulf of Mexico, the tropical storm which struck the south central Florida mainland three days ago was in southern Georgia tonight blowing back toward the Atlantic ocean.

Gales and drenching rains caused minor damage to southern Georgia cities and towns. In Florida, an extensive territory back of Fort Pierce and surrounding the Lake Okeechobee district was inundated, with families marooned and little direct news of Tuesday night's storm.

Estimates of the damage in Florida varied but the citrus industry was known to have suffered heavily in sections, especially in St. Lucie county where the Florida Citrus exchange estimated a 90 per cent loss in grapefruit and 20 per cent in oranges. Around Kissimmee, inland some 50 miles from Fort Pierce, half the grapefruit was lost and oranges were damaged 20 per cent. Other points in the area reported citrus losses varying from 5 to 40 per cent.

Reports from outlying districts that four or five persons had been killed remained unconfirmed, but nothing has been heard from a flying boat which left Nassau, Bahamas, Wednesday for Bimini, with two met aboard. Little hope was held for their safety although aviators said the plane may have sought shelter on some isolated island.

While the flood waters around Lake Okeechobee were receding tonight, some threat remained at a power dam near Inglis, Fla. If a change in the wind caused the water to pile against the dam, officials said they would have to open flood gates, probably inundating a wide section between that place and the gulf 18 miles away.

A Palm Beach Red Cross unit today reached 50 marooned persons at Hull Groves, five miles west of Jupiter.

Thomasville, Valdosta, Moultrie and smaller communities were the places affected by the blow last night in Georgia.

Belen college observatory in Havana, Cuba, reported that the second tropical disturbance, of considerable intensity, now central southeast of Jamaica, likely would confine itself to the Caribbean sea. The storm was moving west-northwest and it was not believed it would recoil to the northeast and toward the American mainland.

ROBBER WAS KILLED IN EAST END OF PARIS

PARIS, Aug. 10—(AP)—A robber was killed in the east end of Paris today after he had slain a jeweler, forced the latter's wife to jump from a second story window and had fired into a crowd, wounding five other persons.

He entered a jewelry shop in the Faubourg du Temple and asked to see some gems. When they were displayed he tried to snatch them and when the jeweler resisted, shot him dead.

The jeweler's wife screamed: "Murder" and the robber chased her upstairs, shooting at her. The terrified woman leaped from the second story window but her fall was broken first by an awning over the sidewalk and then by the arms of several men in the crowd which had already collected at the sound of so much shooting. The woman was not hurt.

The crowd shouted for police. Suddenly the robber appeared in a third-story window. He emptied his pistol into the onlookers several times but fired so wildly that some of his bullets smashed the windows in a wine-shop across the street, and only one man and one woman were wounded. All told he fired several dozen shots before the police arrived.

The officers began shooting at him and he returned their fire, wounding two bluecoats and another spectator. A hurry call was sent for the police "gas brigade" but while it was on the way a policeman slipped upstairs and killed the robber.

NEW CLUE TO SLAYER OF MISS JENNIE CONSTANCE

CHICAGO, Aug. 10—(AP)—A tangible clue in the slaying of Miss Jennie Constance, summer student at Northwestern university, who was beaten to death Tuesday night developed when the napkin which was wrapped around the iron pipe the unidentified assailant used was identified as the property of the North Shore hotel in Evanston.

Police declared they would question hotel employes. None has been missing from work, according to the hotel management.

Police tonight were questioning a new suspect arrested on fashionable Lake Shore drive this afternoon as he sought to kill himself. The man, Antone Sweinbold, said he came from Peoria, Ill., where Miss Constance was a teacher in Bradley Polytechnic institute. His disconected statements led police to believe he was demented. He repeated that he wanted to kill himself because he had killed a woman two nights ago.

His face was cut, and his shirt stained with blood. The girl's body was buried today at Cumberland, Wis. Her 75 year old mother and a sister accompanied the body from Chicago.

FUNERAL OF VICTIMS OF ITALIAN SUB F-14

POLA, Italy, Aug. 10—(AP)—"Requiescat in pace" was the last prayer of Monsignor Pederzolli, Bishop of Parenzo, when he gave absolution today to the victims of the F-14 submarine disaster, imploring for them eternal peace.

Thousands of persons participated in the solemn funeral rites, crowding the route from the main entrance of the hospital where the bodies had been taken, to the square before the Church of the Madonna of the Sea, where the cortege assumed a most imposing aspect. Bells tolled and flowers poured from windows, balconies and roofs, covering the automobiles carrying the coffins.

The families of the victims followed the bodies. Dressed in deep mourning all of them showed the sufferings they had gone through. Some were weeping and others could scarcely walk, being helped along by friends.

300,000 PERSONS TO ATTEND FUNERAL OF STEFAN RADITCH

ZAGREB, Jugoslavia, Aug. 10—(AP)—An endless train of weeping mourners today and tonight passed by the body of Stefan Raditch, Croatian peasant leader, as it rested on a catafalque in the headquarters of the peasant party. Preparations are being made to receive 300,000 persons from all parts of Croatia who are expected to attend the funeral on Sunday.

Telegrams of condolence are continually arriving from many parts of the world and among them have been numerous expressions of sympathy from the United States.

CALLAHAN PLEADED NOT GUILTY GRAND LARCENY

NEW YORK, Aug. 10—(AP)—After telling the district attorney that he took money belonging to his employers with the intention of helping them rather than benefitting himself, Cornelius Callahan pleaded not guilty today to an indictment charging him with grand larceny.

He is charged with stealing almost $500,000 from the Bancitaly corporation, by which he was employed as assistant secretary, and was brought back today from Montreal where he was arrested.

Callahan, who is 28 years old and had been a trusted employe of the corporation for six years, told the district attorney after being fingerprinted and photographed that more than two years ago $3,000 in cash and 200 shares of the company's stock had been stolen from his office. He was afraid, he said, that if he reported the theft he would be suspected even though he knew nothing of how the money had been stolen and so he concealed the loss, deciding to make it good himself.

With a companion, he said, he opened a bank account for speculating. When they had profits of $200,000 the companion disappeared with the money. Desperate then, Callahan said, he took checks paid for Bancitaly stock and cashed them in an effort to make enough in the market to restore the stolen stock and cash. When the stock subscribers insisted on delivery of the stock for which they had paid, he went into the open market and bought it for them, using the bank's fund.

Callahan asserted that his speculations totalled far less than the amount he was accused of stealing.

FOURTEEN PICKETS WERE ARRESTED IN NEW BEDFORD

NEW BEDFORD, Mass., Aug. 10—(AP)—The police tonight arrested 14 pickets at four mills. Following a mass meeting of the textile mill committee, Abraham Pizer was chosen to lead a picket line on the Conduit street side of the Nashawena mill and the line and a big crowd of followers started from the Hope street lot. Going to the mill gate Pizer's line numbered 32 persons. After circling in front of the gate once or twice the picket line was halted by Lieut. N. R. Breault and 15 officers and the lieutenant told Leader Pizer that he wanted him to break up the line immediately. Not a picket moved and then came the order from the lieutenant to arrest the loiters. Pizer and four others were arrested.

At the Whitman mill a picket line of 14 textile council pickets were halted shortly afterwards by Lieut. Harrington and the leader, Frank J. Manning, confidential secretary of the textile council strike committee was asked what he was doing. Manning replied that his line was lawfully assembled and that he thought he was within his rights. Lieut. Harrington ordered the pickets to move off, but not a person started. Then Manning, Donald Thompson, an aide to the textile council committee and four others were arrested.

At the South End one arrest of a textile council picket was made at the Kilburn mill gate and two at the Potomska.

All were charged with loitering and were bailed in the sum of $100 each.

ONE SALOON IN BELGIUM TO EVERY 85 INHABITANTS

WILLIAMSTOWN, Mass., Aug. 10—(AP)—Prohibition in this country or abroad rests its chances for success upon the education of public opinion, delegates to the Institute of Politics agreed today in a round table conference on the issue.

"Prohibition in America is primarily a question of respect for law," Dr. H. A. Garfield, chairman of the institute, declared. "The Volstead act is constitutional, and the decision of the supreme court must be followed. The law can be changed, but only in the orderly manner described by the constitution."

The dry laws of other nations, notably Canada, Sweden and England, were outlined by Norman Hapgood, former ambassador to Denmark, and Bentley W. Warren, Boston lawyer.

In Belgium, Mr. Hapgood said, the cost of liquor is high but there is one saloon to every 85 inhabitants; in Massachusetts before prohibition became effective, Mr. Warren said, there was a saloon for every 750 inhabitants

THREE SUITS BROUGHT AGAINST MANSFIELD WOMAN

(Special to The Bulletin)

WILLIMANTIC, August 10—Three separate civil suits amounting to $16,000 and all brought against Mrs. Sophie Seplowitz of Mansfield as the result of an automobile accident have been filed by members of the Greene family of Hampton. Lawrence J. Greene, aged six, claims $10,000 and his mother, Mrs. Mary Greene, claims $5,000 both for injuries and James J. Greene claims $1,000 for damages to his automobile. The trio of cases are returnable before the September term of the Windham county superior court and the plaintiffs are represented by Attorney A. T. Kelley of this city. The accident occurred in North Windham where the back road to Mansfield Center joins the highway. Greene with his wife and son were traveling in a Dodge coupe while Hyman Seplowitz husband of the defendant woman, was driving an International two-ton truck with his two daughters, Lillian, aged four and Fannie six, as passengers. The two Seplowitz girls were thrown from the truck cab and both were slightly scratched and cut. Mrs. Greene claims that she sustained injuries to her shoulder and knee while her son received severe cuts on the face by glass from the broken windshield. Following the accident the drivers were notified to appear in court when they failed to agree as to the responsibility for the damages but the cases never came to trial. Papers in the case have been served by Deputy Sheriff Lester H. Blish.

Secretary Earl J. Arnold of the local chamber of commerce was at Lake Chargoggagogg, Bristol, Thursday afternoon in conference with other men having in charge some of the arrangements for the big sportsmen's field day September 1, under the auspices of the state fish and game commission.

WESTERLY

AUTO DRIVERS GIVEN FINES IN COURT

(Special to The Bulletin)

WESTERLY, Aug. 10—Several automobile law violation cases were acted upon Friday morning in regular session of Third District court by Judge Oliver H. Williams.

Manuel Barabos, alias, laborer of New Haven, pleaded guilty to the operation of a Ford coupe on Broad street on Aug. 7th. When passing a red semaphore signal traffic light about 10:30 p. m. returning from a visit with relatives in New Bedford, he was stopped by Lieut. George H. Champlin. His arrest, release and court summons followed. He was fined $15 and costs.

Francisco Baptisto, summoned to court as a disorderly person about the station of the New Haven railroad, again failed to appear and the case was continued.

Angelo Partano of Joshua street on a complaint of revelling while intoxicated on Aug. 4th when Angelo Antomont of 75 Oak street received injuries to his head, in the absence of Attorney M. Walter Flynn, had his case continued one week.

Angelo Antomonot, 75 Oak street, complained of by Chief of Police Brown as found drunk, quarrelling and revelling and otherwise behaving in an indecent manner at the junction of Oak and Tower streets on Aug. 4th, pleaded not guilty. His case was continued one week.

James Derrico of Oak street, pleaded guilty to breach of the peace and his case was continued one week for sentence.

George C. McKinley, 22, of Pawcatuck, pleaded guilty to operating a Massachusetts auto owned by Mary T. Oonahue, Worcester, Mass., on Niniger avenue, Watch Hill, when he had no operator's license. He claimed his New York operator's license having expired he still had 30 days in which to renew it although he admitted that when he had applied for a Rhode Island license he had received a notice to appear before the Rhode Island board.

Solicitor Ferguson stated that the arrest had followed numerous complaints received for his operating an auto when it was known that he had no license. In passing sentence of a $25 fine, Judge Williams stated that the example set was "bad!"

Civil docket—R. C. Dugald vs. Alvin Murphy. Continued two weeks.

Clifton D. Hall vs. A. George Turano. Continued one week for trial in absence of Attorney M. Walter Flynn.

Aug. 9—Decree of the Westerly probate court, Edward M. Burke, judge. Set off of land of the late Lucy A. Sekater, consisting of an undivided one-half interest in lot with buildings and improvements on the west side of High street, adjoining land of James B. Riddell and wife, to Daniel Sekater, husband.

OBITUARY
John Winfield Church

The death of John Winfield Church, well known in Washington county, a resident of Narragansett, R. I., occurred Thursday afternoon in South County hospital, Wakefield, R. I., where he had been taken the previous day. His illness dated from April 14th last and he was aged 49 years 26 days. He was a prominent contractor and builder, leader in republican politics and civic affairs and former senator from Narragansett.

A week from next Sunday a "shoot" of more than passing importance will be held at the club grounds of the South County Rod and Gun club near Thompson's Corners. A program of 100 targets, divided into four 25-bird events, has been arranged and prizes are to be awarded under the Dupont handicap system which equalizes all shooters.

A large silver loving cup is to be given for the highest handicap score turned in by a club member. Another silver cup will be awarded for the high scratch score in an event open to non-members. Ten other valuable prizes are also offered.

OBITUARY
Julius H. Gates

In his 86th year on Thursday afternoon occurred the death of Julius H. Gates at his home 14 Maple avenue. A resident of Westerly for nearly fifty years much interest was taken by this respected citizen of the town in prohibition issues at their inception. During the past few months he had been gradually growing weaker, owing to heart trouble, but continued about his usual duties more or less regularly up to within a few days before the end came when he was confined to his bed. His mind was clear to the last and he passed out without pain or struggle rather sooner than was expected Thursday afternoon in the midst of his family.

Julius Herman Gates was born in Harford, N. Y., Feb. 1, 1842. Most of his early life was spent in Unadilla Forks, N. Y. From there he and Mrs Gates came to Westerly 44 years ago. For more than 40 years their home has bene on Maple avenue, during which time Mr. Gates has engaged in several lines of business, but is best known for his skill, honesty and reliability as an upholsterer and restorer of antiques.

Mr. Gates was a man of simple habits, quiet and unassuming, a good citizen, always standing for the best things in public and private life, patriotic in the best sense, sincere and childlike in his religious faith, thoughtful, well informed and conscientious, a man who was highly respected and trusted by all who knew him. He represented the older generation of true American men of intelligence, industry and integrity.

Mr. Gates is survived by his wife, Mary U. M. Gates, and one son, William Murray Gates of Narragansett Pier, also eight grandchildren, all children of his son Murray, and one great-grandchild.

The Rhode Island state public welfare commission membership and their wives were entertained in Westerly on Friday by Dr. John Champlin of this town, chairman of the commission. The members of the commission and wives, making a party numbering 15, arrived at Dr. Champlin's residence on Granite street at 11 o'clock.

The party went to the Watch Hill Riding club on the Shore road, formerly The Oaks inn, where they enjoyed a luncheon There was a general discussion of the activities of the commission during the day.

NOANK

Bobby Jones and Frank Jones were out in their power boat, Big Shot, on Thursday afternoon, off the shore of Groton Long Point, and saw something in the water and Captain Bobby said, that is a sword fish, and it was coming right for the boat like a steam engine. Stepping on the gas and sending the boat through the water fast to beat the fish, and it was some race. Mate Frankie Jones said once the fish almost put the sword up through the boat but the craft's quick turn saved it. Getting out an oar and making two or three swings at the fish they scared him away. That is the first time that a sword fish has been seen off Groton Long Point. It must have been in after small fish or lost its way from his pals that went to Block Island.

At the waiting room on the side of the wall is a large picture with seven people on it, taken 53 years ago. As a large crowd was looking it over, in walked Jack Ebbetts. Can you pick any out? That is a Sunday school class of the Baptist church with Teacher T. B. Collins in the center. I was ten years old when it was taken. He told the names of them all and the one that went every Sunday. The only one living is John Ebbetts. That class was rated the best in the church. John Ebbetts received a box of handkerchiefs for not missing a Sunday in a year, also a gold star.

SEWAGE DISPOSAL PROBLEM NOT SERIOUS TO DANIELSON

(Special ot The Bulletin)

DANIELSON, August 10—The recent announcement made by the state water commission, relative to all cities and towns located on streams of the state, disposing their waste matter into the various streams must remove the sewage within a period of five years, will not affect Danielson as it will the neighboring city of Putnam Borough Warden Harry E. Back said this afternoon, that he has been in communication with the state water officials, who informed him of the procedure that must come about within the designated period of five years. Mr. Back said, Danielson is prepared to remove what sewerage that flows into the Quinebaug and dispose of it through the filtration method. There is on the borough farm, a mile south of here, two filtration plants now in operation and there is land and an appropriation sufficiently large to construct another bed as soon as the state issues the orders.

A certain amount of sewage disposal is being disposed of through the filtration beds, but there is a larger quantity discharging into the river, from the overflow of the beds. Mr. Back stated that this practice is allowed, because no other city located on the river has taken steps to comply with the warnings issued by the state, excepting Putnam, which is about to take preliminary action.

Each year an appropriation of $2500, is being carried on the borough's accounts, so as to be prepared to construct the additional filter bed and recondition the present disposers in the event the state carries out its order as passed at the 1927 session of the legislature.

There is evidence of a certain amount of resentment among those in the habit of bathing at Alexander's lake, since the warning relative to prosecuting bathers, who swim in the lake. Today it was reported that a number of signs, posted by officials of the state department of health, warning the public of the action that will be taken by the state, have been torn from their posts and some of them destroyed.

A checkup of the matter was made today by the health officials and an attempt to locate the vandals is being made.

If the search for those who destroyed the signs, proves fruitful, prosecution will follow, it was said this afternoon.

As far as can be learned, bathing at this resort has ceased, since the official announcement came from Dr. Stanley H. Osborne, director of the state department of health. Men have been detailed by the department to patrol this body of water, in search of bathers, but as yet none have been discovered violating the law.

Road construction hereabouts continued today with increased vigor, the Brooklyn highway, now under construction since early spring continued to proceed, somewhat faster than the past few days. Men were today engaged in laying of rock road bed this afternoon, a short distance from the Unitarian church. The giant steam shovel continued today to eat through the earth, making a rough path, which in the course of time will result in a new highway. The road now consists of a series of detours, utilized as a route for traffic, until the time arrives for the opening of the road.

In Attawaugan, the construction gangs were working on the northern end of the highway, laying the steel forms, that will serve as a curbing for the concrete when poured. The large cement mixer has been moved to its original location and within another day will be pouring the mixture for the remaining half of the highway.

Today it was observed that the barriers have been removed down to the intersection known as the four corners, and traffic is now permitted to pass over the new concrete from the end of the present concrete highway to the former point, mentioned, a distance of nearly three fourth of a mile.

A late report received from the Day Kimball hospital this afternoon, regarding the condition of Chester Petreas and Mitri Malek, Killingly boys injured in a motorcycle-automobile collision on the Green Hollow road Wednesday evening, indicated that both were slightly improved and would recover if no unforseen complications set in. Today has been the first time since the boys were committed to the Putnam hospital, that chances for a complete recovery were forecast. Malek is suffering from a fracture of the skull and body wounds, while his companion is suffering from fractures of the jaw and skull and possible internal injuies.

Attorney Harry E. Back today returned to his office on Main street, after being confined to his home for the past two weeks with illness.

Miss Laura M. Pike was visiting today, at Mashapaug beach on Avon.

William King, formerly of Killingly, died at the Haven home in Abington early this morning after an illness of about a year. Mr. King for a number of years worked in the textile mills of Danielson and Goodyear and recently retired to Pomfret Landing, residing with a relative. He was stricken about three months ago and entered the Haven to undergo treatment. The body was brought to Danielson in charge of Undertaker L. E. Kennedy, where arrangements for funeral services will be made.

In Dayville schools were undergoing annual repairs, they being extensive on the Dayville west building on the Danielson road. Complete renovations are being carried out on the interior parts of the structure. It is expected that the classrooms will be complete in their new attire for the opening of the fall term in September.

Officers Nolan and Castagna, of the police barracks, after their period of duty was completed yesterday, motored to Camp Trumbull in Niantic, visiting the local military units now in camp.

RECEIVERS FOR INT'L LIFE INSURANCE COMPANY

ST. LOUIS, Mo., August 10—(AP)—Both federal and state receivers were named today for the International Life Insurance company of St. Louis, whose president, Roy C. Toombs, of Chicago, has been held responsible for the disappearance of $3,500,000 of the company's assets.

The receiverships represented conflicting moves in efforts to obtain control of the company which has more than $300,000,000 insurance in force.

Federal Judge Reeves at Kansas City, appointed Robert E. Daly, actuary and acting head of the Missouri insurance department and Edward P. Wilson, attorney and brother of Massey Wilson, one of the founders of the company, as receivers.

He acted on a petition filed by C. P. Lon gof Tupelo, Miss., a stockholder and policyholder, and J. C. Dale of Alabama, a policyholder. Long and Massey Wilson were plaintiffs in a similar suit filed in federal court here yesterday, charging Toombs with having removed and converted the missing bonds to his own use.

About an hour after the action in Kansas City, Circuit Judge Hamilton here appointed Ben C. Hyde, state superintendent of insurance, as receiver. He acted on a petition filed in the name of Hyde, who for 18 months has been incapacitated by a stroke of apoplexy.

The petition stated the International's capital stock was impaired and the company was insolvent, with $41,900,000 liabilities and approximately $39,000,000 assets available.

It further alleged that the reserves required by law were impaired to the extent of about $2,000,000. It stated that the combined capital and surplus last December 31 was $2,368,240 and that $3,500,000 cash and securities have been removed, abstracted or made away with and that on the request of representatives of the state superintendent of insurance, they have not been, and apparently cannot be, replaced or restored.

FORMER REP. UPSHAW HAS DISQUALIFIED HIMSELF

ATLANTA, Aug. 10—(AP)—The Atlanta Journal says today that former Congressman William D. Upshaw has disqualified himself as a candidate for congress in the democratic primary because of his activities for the republican presidential nominee, in the opinion of G. Ed Maddox, chairman of the state democratic executive committee.

Upshaw, nationally known for his activities in behalf of prohibition, has entered the race in an effort to regain the seat won from him two years ago, by L. J. Steele, who is his present opponent.

PUTNAM

THOMPSON WOMEN ORGANIZE A REPUBLICAN CLUB

(Special to The Bulletin)

PUTNAM, Aug. 10—The republican forces opened their fire in the surrounding districts of Putnam this afternoon, when a Thompson unit of the Windham County Republican club was organized, through the efforts of party workers in that town. Much interest was displayed in the coming campaign, due to the unusually large turnout of voters who became members of the unit after the meeting was adjourned. Speakers at the gathering were Miss Katherine Byrne of Putnam, vice chairman of the republican state central committee, who outlined the features and the proposed plans of the organization. Miss Byrne also spoke of the methods and efforts that must be exerted by the party workers before the campaign formally opens.

The members of the new unit were also addressed by Senator Alice Pattison Merritt of Hartford, whose attendance came through an invitation of Miss Byrne. Senator Merritt, spoke briefly of the coming campaign, clearly outlining the policies of the party.

Following the talks by the republican women politicians, the club was organized and the following officers were elected: Chairman, Mrs. E. H. Corttie, North Grosvenordale; vice chairmen, Mrs. Arthur Mille, Pabyan; Mrs. Fred Myers, Thompson and Mrs. Adolph Dery of North Grosvenordale; secretary, Miss Edith Sheldon of Thompson; treasurer, Mrs. J. F. Reardon of North Grosvenordale and assistant treasurer, Mrs. Flora Crosby of North Grosvenordale.

Stanley Kokernack, an ex-Dudley, Mass., police officer will be arraigned before Judge M. H. Geissler in police court Saturday morning charged with transportation of intoxicating liquors and attempted assault upon State Trooper Elton T. Nolan of Danielson barracks. Kokernack was arrested on a month ago by Trooper Nolan, in Putnam after the former policeman had attempted to deal the officer a blow with an automobile crank. His plans were foiled when Trooper Nolan drew his revolver, and later took him to the Putnam police station, where he was released on bonds for his appearance in court. Kokernack will be represented by Attorney Irving H. Miron of this city.

Information obtained from the Day Kimball hospital this afternoon indicated that Victorial Vaklinewicz, 5 years old daughter of Mr. and Mrs. John Vaklinewicz of Main street, was slightly improved over her condition of the previous day. The young girl was the victim of an automobile collision, that occurred on Main street Saturday evening. Since being committed to the hospital she has been continued on the danger list. It was stated today that she would recover.

Harry Devine, promising Worcester pugilist of amateur note, whose victories placed him among the top notchers on the Olympic team now competing for laureis in Amsterdam, was daunted today according to dispatches received here late this afternoon when he fell before the terrific blows of Van Klaverner of Holland, in the torrid encounter that followed the meeting of the two athletes. Devine severed a blood vessel in his wrist, losing the decision to the Hollander in the third round. Devine has appeared in Putnam on several occasions.

Rumor that motor coach service schedules of the New England Transportation company, operating a line of coaches through Putnam, have been altered was in circulation today. This statement is false, according to word from an official of the railroad, received this afternoon.

It was learned here today, that the last stages of telegraphy now in use on the New Haven railroad as a method of communication will not be supplanted by the modern telephone on August 15, the decision being changed recently. The New Haven railroad's linemen, during the winter months installed new telephone wires on the main and branch lines, and have dispensed with telegraphy on the main line, leaving a few wires in use on the Norwich branch. It was announced last week by road officials that the remaining telegraph wires would give way to the telephone on the 15th of this month.

LET PLUMBING CONTRACT FOR BARTLETT SCHOOL

(Special to The Bulletin)

NEW LONDON, Aug. 10—A special meeting of the city council was held this evening with four members present. Messrs Whiton, Streeter and Murray were the absentees. Contracts were awarded to the Mono company and to John L. Atchison for making alterations and installing changed plumbing in the Robert Bartlett school building where toilets are to be changed. The plumbing work will cost $3,725 and the alterations $2,000. City Manager Holt explained that the parties to whom the contracts were awarded were the lowest bidders for the work. The meeting was delayed in order that a quorum of members might be got together.

AUTO LAW VIOLATORS ARE GIVEN FINES

(Special to The Bulletin)

NEW LONDON, Aug. 10—Several violators of the automobile law were presented in the police court this morning. The autoists were for the most part charged with violation of the city's parking ordinance and one driver was charged with speeding. He was Emil Lilberman, 234 Broadway, Norwich. Lilberman was on Jefferson avenue yesterday afternoon and was driving his car at a high rate of speed. Lilberman posted a bond of $5 for his court arraignment today, but he failed to appear and his bond was declared forfeited.

Charles Santer, Chestnut Hill, Dorchester, Mass., Edwar T. Aldrich, 45 Norwood avenuer John J. Hoban, 62 North Main street, South Norwalk; Charles H. Taylor, 37 West street, South Norwalk were charged with parking overtime. They did not appear and their bonds of $2 were declared forfeited.

Patrolman Dennis Murphy was patrolling Bank street at 4 o'clock this morning when he observed two youths, Earl Miller and Walter Quinlan, loitering in the vicinity of Howard street. The officer approached the youths and interrogating them determined that they were strangers and without funds. They were taken to police headquarters and turned over to Probation Officer Richard W. Mansfield who provided them with transportation to their homes in Massachusetts. The boys had run away from home and had gone to New York. They succeeded in one way and another in reaching New London, but here they became stranded.

PIERRE S. DUPONT HAS DECLARED FOR SMITH

NEW-YORK, Aug. 10—(AP)—Pierre S. DuPont, chairman of the boards of two of the largest corporations in the country, and nominally a republican, today came out flatly in support of the presidential candidacy of Governor Smith.

In a formal statement issued within 24 hours after he had been granted a leave of absence as chairman of the General Motors corporation, DuPont said Governor Smith has the "strength of character to correct the evils of prohibition law enforcement and make recommendations necessary for the solution of the liquor problem."

While ordinarily a republican, DuPont said, "I have always interested myself in the plans and policies involved and in the personality of a candidate more than in a name of the party and I believe that no intelligent voter can do otherwise.

"The platforms of the two predominating parties have become reconciled to a degree that makes choice between them difficult. Neither platform presents a stand on any important question differing materially from the position of the other."

DuPont reviewed Governor Smith's political record, especially his election four times as chief executive of the state, and added: "Governor Smith has proved himself an able executive, one who can be entrusted with the conduct of national affairs."

Turning again to prohibition, Du Pont continued: "The really important issue before the country, namely that of maintaining intact our original form of government and the liberties of the people, is not dealt with in either party platform. The issue has been raised by the eighteenth amendment to the constitution. Nine years of experiment have proved that 'prohibition' does not prohibit, strong drink is still readily available and the ill effects of its abuse remain with us."

BURGESS BEDTIME STORIES

Chatterer Changes His Course

Imagination's tricks are played
To make us needlessly afraid.
—Paddy the Beaver.

Chatterer the Red Squirrel was swimming across the pond ? Paddy the Beaver. It was quite a swim for little Chatterer. For almost the first time in his life Sammy Jay really admired Chatterer. "I didn't believe he had it in him," said Sammy. "No, sir, I didn't believe he had it in him."

Chatterer's thoughts were mostly behind him. He was wondering if Shadow the Weasel would by and by follow his trail down to the water's edge. And he wondered, too, what Shadow would think when that trail ended. But every time he thought of Shadow it reminded him of Billy Mink, and then he would glance around uneasily. Being such a little fellow, he was, of course, low down in the water So he didn't see Paddy the Beaver swimming down the pond. He didn' see Paddy until Paddy started to cross in front of him. Then he saw Paddy, and such a fright as he had! You see, he didn't know who it was. He simply saw this great head in the water. He saw Paddy's great teeth. Poor Chatterer! He would have cried aloud, only when he started to he swallowed some water. There was one thing certain, and that was that he was not going to go right straight ahead with that fellow between him and the shore. So Chatterer turned and began to swim down the pond instead of across.

"Take your time; take your time," replied Paddy Beaver, good-naturedly

Chattere thought he had been swimming fast before, but it was nothing to the way he swam now. He wanted to get out of that pond and he wanted to get out in a hurry. He would have shivered and shaken all over if he had had time to. But he was too busy making those little legs of his go to do any shivering and shaking.

By and by something big loomed up out of the water in front of him. He thought it was the shore. He redoubled his efforts. When he glanced sidewise he saw that big head still swimming not very far away. At last Chatterer reached what at first he thought was a high bank. Up he scrambled, shaking the water from his coat. My, how good it did seem to have something solid under his feet! Up he went to the very top and then Chatterer got such a surprise that it was a wonder he didn't fall over backward and roll down into the water again. He wasn't on the land at all! He was on a kind of an island. Anyway, there was water all around it!

Sammy Jay flew over. "Hi, Chatterer!" he cried, "What are you doing there?"

"None of your business!" snapped Chatterer, for he was beginning to be very much disturbed. He saw now whose head it was that frightened him so, for he was looking down on Paddy the Beaver.

Paddy suddenly changed his course and came straight toward Chatterer. Could it be that he was going to climb up there? But just before he reached that queer island he stopped swimming. "What are you doing in my house?" he cried to Chatterer.

"Where's your house?" demanded Chatterer.

"You're on it," replied Paddy. "You are on the roof of it? Didn't you know it?"

"No," said Chatterer, "no, I didn't know this was the roof of your house. I beg your pardon. I-I-I'll get right off."

"Take your time, take your time," replied Paddy the Beaver good-naturedly. "I don't care how long you stay on the roof. I guess you won't do any harm there. Why didn't you keep on across the pond instead of coming over here?"

Chatterer didn't tell him. He was shamed to admit that he hadn't recognized Paddy and so had had a terrible fright.

AIDING NORWICH INDUSTRIALLY

What appears to be deserving of hearty endorsement is the action which has been taken both by the industrial development committee and the board of directors of the chamber of commerce in regard to industrial expansion in Norwich.

Such expansion is one of the great needs of the city and it cannot help being felt that the problem is being approached in the right sort of a way when approval is given to such a plan as that which has accomplished so much for the city of Keene. An industrial building proposition has many attractions. It provides an opportunity for sound industries to obtain the advantage of new and adequate buildings and it lends encouragement to new industries to make a start on a small scale and develop. There isn't a community which cannot appreciate the value of taking care of and nursing its small industries. They are the foundations of larger ones. All had their small beginnings but giving the small ones a start and giving them encouragement to grow should be the first aim of the city.

This is in keeping with the action which has been taken in placing the chamber on record as believing that it should do all within its power to aid local industries. It is the proper attitude of such an organization. Norwich has no industries to lose. It is seeking more, but it is a mistake to overlook the needs of those who may be struggling while trying to interest others about which little or nothing is known. Many are the big industries of today which had small beginnings and many an investor knows the value of putting his money behind something he can see, find out about and have a voice in rather than entrust it to industrial activities of uncertain character elsewhere.

Norwich needs industrial development. Norwich needs to get back of and stay back of its existing industries while seeking more, and it is believed that the chamber of commerce is on the right track in the course which it is pursuing.

WHEN HOOVER SPEAKS

Every day it is possible to hear someone talk over the radio, and there is a tremendous audience that listens to the many programmes, but today the ears of the nation will be attuned to Palo Alto, California, for the purpose of hearing what Herbert C. Hoover has to say in his acceptance speech.

Notification ceremonies have been held before and there will be more of them before election day. The republican party at Kansas City adopted its platform and nominated its candidate. It is the formal notification of that nomination which Mr. Hoover will receive today and it is his response, his setting forth of his principles and policies, the expression of his views concerning national problems that voters in all corners of the country are anxious to hear or read about today.

It is as the standard bearer of the republican party that Mr. Hoover will speak today and in speaking he will clear up any uncertainties, if there are such, as to where he stands. It is to be expected that Mr. Hoover will endorse the party platform, but there are questions upon which it can be expected that he will go into explanation of his personal views.

In those states where the farm problem has been kept to the front for a long time there has been a steadily increasing support for his candidacy. Nevertheless there will be an eagerness among the farmers to learn his viewpoint concerning the farm problem and such suggestions as he has to make concerning it. The same is also true in regard to the dry question in which there is a nation-wide interest. Among the states of the southwest there will be interest to learn what he has to say concerning the Boulder dam project. There can, of course, be expected a statement of his position concerning the tariff and other questions concerning the nation's welfare while it is to be expected he will have something to say about what has been accomplished through party policies and what it is hoped to do. Mr. Hoover has a message to the country which it is believed will make the same favorable impression that his record has. It will mark the opening of the active campaign.

WHERE WIRELESS IS NEEDED

For the time being the interest in other events has directed attention away from the fact that Amundsen and his party are still lost in the far north. What has happened to them is not known. Whether they are alive is equally uncertain. They set out by airplane to endeavor to locate and aid the crew of the Italia and haven't been heard from since.

Something has happened. What it is and where it occurred is not known. They understood the risk they were taking and efforts to give them assistance if they can be located are still underway, but the captain of the Russian icebreaker Sedov reports no success thus far though his search is being continued.

Amundsen is well acquainted with conditions which he must be facing if he is alive. Under such circumstances he could probably make the best of the situation much better than many other searchers. His resourcefulness can be relied upon to maintain himself and party until help arrives, or to get back to civilization if such a thing is possible. But it is quite as vital that every last effort should be put forth in behalf of these would be rescuers.

Perhaps nothing serves to demonstrate the importance of carrying a good radio outfit on such a trip than this very situation. The Italia had such equipment and kept those interested informed as to what it was doing. When it was forced down its radio was damaged but it was repaired and through the message sent from this source it was known where to search.

Those who have gone into the north to find this party are without wireless equipment. Amundsen didnt carry it before on his northern journey and he is thus without the means of telling the world where he is or of asking for help. Searching for him is almost like looking for a needle in a haystack. Could he but do as the Italia's crew did—broadcast his location—much of the difficulty of trying to find and rescue him would be eliminated. With such facility to be had it is unfair to searchers not to provide for such an emergency in advance.

FRESTON'S SENATORIAL DESIRE

In the discussion of candidates for the various state offices and for members of the next general assembly it is natural that town sentiment should be manifested in regard to the selection of candidates for the state senate. Political gossip has been going the rounds in this, the 19th, senatorial district and republicans are expressing the belief that the time has come when Preston should get recognition in the upper house of the legislature. Preston sentiment runs strongly in that direction.

Preston has reason for feeling as it does. It is a matter of 40 years since the senator from this district has come from that town. Four decades ago Nathan Ayer of Preston was the senator from the 19th. Since that time the town of Ledyard, another town in the district, has been favored through the election of William I. Allyn, but during the rest of the time the senators have come from Norwich, the third and largest town of the district.

It is a time when the question may be fairly asked as to why, in the interest of justice, harmony and a square deal, the district shouldn't rally behind a candidate from the town of Preston at the coming session of the general assembly. Preston has men of ability, men of experience and men of the right calibre to shoulder the responsibilities of that office and look carefully and persistently after the interests of the district regardless of town lines. With Preston making its wants known it is certainly entitled to considerate attention, especially when those wants are reasonable.

RADITCH'S DEATH

Europe has reason to feel anxious over possible developments that may follow the death of Stefan Raditch, following his shooting during a quarrel in parliament. It is Jugoslavia that is immediately concerned but these troubles are so far reaching that all Europe watches intently.

Raditch was a fiery leader of the Croats. He was a man of ability, one of the big men of his country and he influences a large following. He long since displayed his independence of ideas, departed from established political customs and advocated after the war the organization of a peasant republic. He was the organizer of the Croatian peasant party, but while he leaned strongly toward a republic he would not listen to any effort to break down the Jugoslav monarchy by armed action. In the government he was the head of a strong peasant bloc. His activities served frequently to irritate and there were times when he was charged with communistic leanings. His efforts were not only disturbing to the Jugoslav government but there were times when other countries were concerned. This was particularly true of Italy when he so angered Mussolini as to nearly cause a diplomatic break with that country.

His passing represents a loss to his country, although he was many times a disturbing figure. Jugoslavia's aim must be to prevent any overt act in reaction.

THE MAN WHO TALKS

The blodder is a person who keeps at a thing until it is done. The journey from the starting place to the finish has no spectacular waymarks. The monotony of the course has not been broken up by any brilliant fireworks. The steady workman has not been bothered by newspaper reporters in quest of "hot stuff." The blodder has seen clearly what had to be done and has turned neither to the right hand nor to the left in the effort to do it. Now it sometimes happens that this faithful worker wakes up to the fact that he knows more about that particular thing than anybody else, and from that moment he is bound to get into better conditions. Let it be remembered that during all this time of faithful blodding, somebody has been watching him, and if, in his quiet way, he has really been rendering unusual service, it is to the advantage of his employer to push him for all he is worth. No mistake is ever made in rendering faithful, intelligent service.

There is no question but that luck enters into every man's success to a certain extent, but in the main, success is the fruit of ability that has been properly energized. If a person has the ability to do a big thing at the right time and in the right way, it will meet with success as it justly deserves. What we are is judged by what we have done; not by what we propose to do, of what we feel capable of doing. People generally take little stock in what we say we are going to do, unless there is some evidence of it by past accomplishments. "What a man does," says Thomas Carlyle, "is stamped upon eternity, and we cannot change it, and it will forever be for weal or woe." If great things lie hidden in a man's soul, a way will be provided for their outward expression. If great things are done it is not through mere luck.

The man who is forever whining about his touch luck is the man who never gets there. If he would stop whining and put forth what energy he has, things would begin to come his way. Nature does not throw her bounties at a man, he must go out and dig for them. One great trouble with such a fellow is he never sees the opportunities he has. No human being ever has been, or ever will be, all the time the sport of adverse circumstances. You can look so long at black paint that you can see nothing but black. You can blubber so long over your aches and pains, your blighted chances, the meanness of others who push you out of the line, that you don't see the great benedictions of life as they come your way. It would be better for you to snivel less and pray more, and then after you have prayed in a way that meant real business then go out in God's great name, and under his kindly benediction, for some of the enduring prizes that are yours for the asking, provided you start now!

When these sayings (which, of course, will be a strong reminder of the thoughts of Plato) appear in print, you and I will be quite a distance advanced in our annual vacation. The statement has been made with considerable flourish that one of the serious reactions to a long vacation is that it is so hard to get back to work again. That idea is advanced as an objection to vacation, but if you will carefully analyse that feeling you will discover that it is evidence that the vacation really got hold of you and has done you good. It shows that you didn't take your work with its worries and cares with you, but locked them up in a box in the attic just where they belong. Now that is just what a strong healthy sinner ought to do. You have driven work so far out of your mind that it will be hard to take it up in September. But it will come back all right.

Nothing is more absolutely false than the notion some entertain that in vacation, and especially away from home one is entitled to a leeway that for a single moment he would not think of taking at home. It would be a very strange code of ethics that would entertain such an idea. Right is right and wrong is wrong the world over. Place has absolutely no bearing to do with the matter of morals. If it is wrong to do a certain thing in New York city, it must be wrong to do that very thing at Coney Island or anywhere else. If there is a line of things we ought not to do at home is there any justification in doing them when we travel abroad? This is the very thing that has lowered many American tourists in the eyes of foreigners because they take such liberty of action when abroad. Manners and customs are subject to change from one generation to another, but not moral principles. They are as changeless as God himself.

The capacity for enjoyment can be educated just as much as any other human faculty. Suppose two men are sitting side by side on the bleachers watching a baseball game, one is a visitor from some distant land who never saw a ball game before. His companion is a trained athlete who is the captain of a team. Which of the two is going to get the greater number of thrills; the larger amount of real entertainment? The question carries with it the obvious answer. Is it not a fact that those who understand every motion made are those who relish a real game most. To understand any game thoroughly one must be educated in every motion made. It is likewise true in other fine accomplishments. Does the little girl going over and over her five-finger exercises really appreciate the beauty of music? She does not really enjoy it until she has mastered the technique. All capacity to enjoy admits of education.

Probably it is not a matter of record whose fertile brain it was that first suggested the idea of vacation. Probably it was discovered accidentally. Somebody was forced by circumstance to leave aside the ordinary toil for a season, and to make a temporary change of residence, and discovered that he was greatly benefitted by the change. Possibly it came from the doctors who recommended some tired housewife to see if a short respite from household drudgery would not be beneficial. The relief being very pronounced it was followed by others until it became a regular thing, and a very sensible thing. It was the growth of this sentiment that was the inspiration of developing seaside resorts and hotels in the mountains. From this it was perfectly logical that those who could afford it, put up their modest cottages by the sea and in the mountains. The coming of the automobile has enlarged the scope of the summer outing.

Don't be discouraged if at the close of a good, long vacation, you do not feel "like jumping over the moon." And this by the way, is an idiotic expression trying to show that it is possible for one to have such buoyant spirits as to attempt any fool thing. The effect of a real vacation ought not to work that way. Bubbling enthusiasm like any other bubble is likely to burst any moment and all that is left is just a bit of froth. A real vacation will give us something more than a hectic, superficial energy. The main object of a real vacation is to stimulate the creative powers. It is to fill up the depleted reservoirs with motive power, and not merely to touch the skin with electricity. If you feel a little wearied on getting back, don't be frightened because it is evidence that the salt air has touched the backbone and nerves. It will be a part of wisdom if you take up the ordinary task with some deliberation.

Some men are silent because of their wisdom and some because of their ignorance.

THE ROMANCE OF THE SUNDIAL.

Difficult is it to imagine, in an era when bells and whistles and electric clocks are everywhere in evidence, and when it is no surprise to find a schoolboy sporting a wrist watch, what it would mean if we had to depend upon the sun and its shadow for our information regarding the hour of the day writes G. L. M. in the Christian Science Monitor. That time telling or recording cannot be left to guess is merrily proclaimed by Shakespeare's Rosalind. Says she: "Time travels in divers paces with divers persons: I'll tell you who Time trots withal, who time gallops withal, and who he stands still withal."

Most people will agree with Rosalind that time passes slowly or swiftly according to their moods; therefore mortals have always found it expedient to have some fixed standard or method of noting the passing hours. In this direction as in so many others, necessity has proved the mother of invention.

Herodotus refers to a method used by the Greeks wherein they told the time by the shadow of a pole stuck in the ground, and indicates that the Greeks learned the idea from the Babylonians. It has been suggested that the obelisks of the Egyptians were an expansion and development of the pole idea. The Romans, it seems, knew the sundial in the form and use as known today. In one of his letters, Cicero mentions a dial to be put up at his villa near the Collegio Romano. A dial, hollowed out of stone and supposed to be of the Roman period, was found at the foot of Cleopatra's Needle, and is now in the British Museum. That, however, the Romans were not fully informed on the subject of dials is disclosed in an anecdote of a dial which they took from the Cicilians and set up in Rome without the necessary astronomical adjustment for the new location!

The dial of Ahaz mentioned in the Bible (II Kings 20: 9 and 10) has been the subject of considerable discussion among natural scientists. And in their efforts to account for the phenomenon of the shadow on the dial going "backwards ten degrees," some have assumed that the dial of Ahaz was a bowl-shaped device instead of the usual flat surface. As a result of this formation, when the bowl was filled with water the refraction might appear to turn the shadow back ten degrees.

The sundial has left a wide trail which can be followed down the years in many lands. Dials have been and still are numerous in China and Japan, but these Oriental dials, unlike the European ones, have no legend or motto inscribed on them. Even a slight search discloses many interesting specimens, and as many appropriate mottoes. France, Great Britain, Germany and Italy have hundred of old dials. Some of these are of a vertical type attached to walls or set up over doorways of churches or castles; others are flat or horizontal, set up in gardens, their pedestals beautiful works of art.

Many of these dials have recorded the hours for centruies. One of the oldest in Great Britain is at Glamis Castle, Scotland, and is said to date back to 1600. Mary, Queen of Scots, had a dial in her garden at Holyrod and spent many hours near it. Charles I of England is said to have had a fondness for sundials, and a subject who wished to gain the King's favor was advised that the gift of a sundial would be most acceptable to His Majesty. While he was at Oxford, Christopher Wren designed the dial on All Souls College, and made quite a collection of dials during his residence.

The building of a memorial church by a ducal lady in the Savoy Valley, is recorded by Matthew Arnold in his poem on "The Church of Brou," one verse of which reads:

On her palfrey white the Duchess
Sate, and watch'd her working train;
Flemish carvers, Lombard gilders,
German masons, smiths from Spain.

For the use of these many men from many lands, there was a dial cut in the pavement. It was thirty-three feet in diameter, the hours being marked in bricks. The timekeeper formed the gnomon. He placed himself on the spot marked with the name of the current month, and his shadow fell on the correct hour.

Rossini, in both his poetry and his painting, associates a sundial with the romance of Dante and Beatrice; Watts the painter, has an elaborate dial in his own village. Its motto is "The utmost for the highest."

Quite an interesting dial is at Washington House, Little Brington England, the home of George Washington's ancestors. It is a circular slab of sandstone, sixteen inches in diameter, and has on it the letters "R. W.", probably the initials of Robert Washington. It also has on it the Washington coat of arms in a design of stars and stripes. It is possible that this design may have suggested the United States national emblem.

Another interesting fact is that a sundial was used on the early American dollar, on the copper cent, and on the paper note of one-third dollar. These dial designs bore two inscriptions—"Fugio" and "Mind your business" the "Fugio dollar," also known as the the "Fugio dollar," aslo known as the "Franklin cent," due probably to Franklin's association with the United States coinage. It is not difficult to associate the legend, "Mind your own business," with the thrifty Franklin.

Martha Washington seems to have had an easy-going streak in her make up, for her dial at "Fredwicksberg," as the little place was called, is inscribed—

When you find
You're behind,
Time is kind—
Never mind!

A well-known Shakespeare lover and critic has on his dial a quotation from one of the Sonnets: "Love alters not with Time's brief hours and weeks." An old English dial, known as the Leap Year Dial, bears this inscription:

Listen to my simple rhyme
Telling hapless maids the time
How each February three years fled,
Women all may ask to wed.

A somewhat amusing note is sounded in a French dial which is ornamented with the painting of a cock. The painting is accompanied with the following motto: "Lorsque tu sonneras je chante," which may be loosely translated, When you strike, I sing. This contains rather a subtle and gentle hint to the noisy rooster to emulate the quiet of the sundial clock!

An unusual dial is at Orphir Farm White Plains, N. Y. The dial plate rests on a tortoise, and the pedestal is ornamented with resigns of horses and hares and carries this merry inscription: In Aesop's great race 'twixt the tortoise and hare,
The former he made out the winner
But the sun which took part on that day, I'll declare,
Defeated the tortoise and outran the hare,
Though not planned by Aesop, the sinner."

An eighteenth century English dial is inscribed with the following deep and beautiful message.

He who dedicates each hour
To a power divine,
Receives full oft the Christian's dower,—
Life's water turned to wine!

Such an inscription bears out Charles Lamb's tribute to the "silent heart language of an old dial."

The sundial has come down to the present day surrounded by fact and fiction, romance and tragedy, superstition and sanctify, love and lore. But no matter how much history, art and literature may try to associate their sorrows, their legends, their superstitions, their speculation, their gloom with the sundial, the fact remains that all the effort in the world cannot cause a well-conducted and properly placed dial to record anything but sunny hours!

LETTERS TO THE EDITOR

Today And Yesterday.

Mr. Editor: This letter is not a tirade against existing conditions as of today. But the thought came to me as to whether the people of today are having the real, sincere pleasure that was the heritage of the people of 60 years ago, for at this time they seemed to have a surfeit of everything, autos, moving pictures, dancing and jazz music. As to the autos we cannot say too much in praise of them for they today carry us to points of interest and to little villages in remote points that if it was not for the autos we would never see. As a business proposition they have no equal, as a means of quickly getting from one place to another.

And the moving pictures' educational value cannot be estimated for they bring to our vision countries that with limited means we would never have seen. And here we see these countries and their people and with them their strange customs, at least they seem so to us, very interesting and certainly very instructive.

As to the so-called dancing, whew! Nothing to it. It's more like an African cake walk. And if it was only accompanied with tom, toms, and with some of the Senegambians in native costumes we could easily fancy that we were in the interior of some South American country or along the banks of the Congo in darkest Africa.

As for jazz music, the one who called this jumble of discords music has something to answer. Paderewski the great Polish pianist was one day asked by one of his admirers if he ever played jazz, and he said, "zat is not music, it is nonsense," and he immediately left the piano and refused to play and claimed the question was an insult.

I expect some exponent of this so-called music will get back at me for a wise crack of this kind. All right, let's go. And now you young old boys and girls, too, I want you to travel back with me and recall the days of real dance music and with such wonderful leaders as Gurdon Cady, with the merry command of the orchestra leader, "all ready Mr. Cady." Also Prof. John P. Millet and with such splendid music as Strauss' Beautiful Blue Danube, that beautiful dreamy waltz, with the great outdoors, the moonlight, the music, the girl and you! And then as a slight diversion the Virginia Reel with its fun, and when some one would make a slight mistake, and things would be slightly mixed, what laughter would greet the awkward one!

Say you young old people, I am at least partly right, am I not? But I realize that this is the year 1928 and we have to keep up with the parade or else we may find ourselves up in the attic with the other curios of other days.

There were great picnic groves in other days, and a very popular one was Hubbard's grove that was taken over by the Norwich Caledonian Society and then was given their name. The grounds on Hickory street were often in demand, but perhaps the place that held the popular fancy was Harvey's grove. Say, readers, can you recall where this was located? No jitneys to take you there—just walk, and if you were tired of walking you could run.

Albanians Buy Wives To Do Work

By JAMES A. MILLS

SCUTARI, Albana—In faraway and backward Albania young girls are sold as wives, but the prices paid are in many cases, far less than that paid for a good pony or donkey.

Since the World war there has been an acute shortage of good pack-animals, while the number of women has almost doubled. The result is that while a good mountain pony costs as high as $150, the native Albanian finds he can buy a young wife for as little as $25. Indeed in some cases he can acquire a spouse for a few sacks of potatoes or five or six bushels of corn. The sale of women is a heritage from Turkish days, when whole droves of young Christian girls were sold at auction to the highest bidder.

Women's position in this primitive mountain state bordering the Adriatic, is not an enviable one. They do all the work in household and field, while the man of the family rides leisurely along on a donkey. The women compete with the ponies and donkies as pack-carriers, but are not considered so valuable because they will not bear up under such big loads. This severe life shows itself in premature old age and in many forms of physical disability.

The Albanian man is brave and patriotic, but indolent and indifferent. He considers ordinary manual work beneath his dignity. His wife must attend to that. But he is a born soldier and fighter. He is ever prepared for war or for a personal encounter. He has no fear of death. The most fervent wish expressed at the baptismal font by the child's parents is that he may not die in bed. Death on the field of battle is considered his only honorable end.

The costumes of the women of Albania are quaint, picturesque and diversified in pattern, varying with the region, religion and tribal association of the individual. Among those of Mohammedan faith, who constitute more than half the population, the conventional Turkish black dress and veil are still worn.

The men wear tight-fitting white woolen trousers with large baggy seats and with the sides striped with black braid. Most of them wear white fezes. The people are a sturdy, vigorous type, extremely hospitable to visitors. When the correspondent of The Associated Press came to Albania, a mountain tribesman voluntarily pledged his life for the American's safety while he remained in Albania. Should a native molest a foreign visitor without cause the visitor's host demands his life in atonement.

Sanitary and health conditions in Albania are extremely bad. Malaria, sand-fly fever and other tropical diseases are prevalent. Male doctors have a hard time of it, because the Mohammedans when ill insist on consulting women herb-doctors, midwives or clairvoyants. Even among the Christians, who have been influenced greatly by the old Turkish customs, the male physician is looked upon with disfavor. Charms and talismen of all sorts are worn from birth to death. Even horses and donkeys wear huge necklaces of bluebeads. These are supposed to keep off "the evil eye."

Sunday Morning Talk

IN TUNE.

Musicians have a standard pitch by which they tune all their instruments. The standard for our lives is the will of God. The word of God gives us the keynote. Our lives will make music only when we are in harmony with God. Jesus said "I do always those things that please Him." As a result He said that the Father never left Him alone. There was never any discordance with God's commandments. "Nearer, My God, to Thee," is a prayer for the lifting of our spirits into such relation with God that the communion between Him and ourselves shall be unbroken.

The bringing of the power of our life into tune is really the great problem of all spiritual culture. If we would keep our life in tune we must not allow its power to lie unused. We make the sweetest music when we are living our best. An idle man is never really happy, nor is he the best maker of happiness for others. We get joyous by rejoicing. If we cease to be kind even for a few days it shows in the tone of our life as others know us. If we fail to show kindness our hand will lose something of its skill in life's sweet ministry. Each life is an orchestra in itself, but to make sweet music all its many chords must be brought into harmony. It is achieved only by submission to the will of God.

YOUR HEALTH

MEAL TIME FOR THE TODDLER

By LeRoy A. Wilkes, M. D.
Director, Division of Medical Service American Child Health Association.

The diet for the toddler (two to six years) should provide those things which are essential for nutrition, growth, and development during this important period.

There are four main groups of foods necessary to maintain a balanced diet, i. e.

1. The body builders (proteins) such as meats, baked beans.
2. The energy givers (carbohydrates) such as potatoes.
3. The heat producers (fats) such as butter, olive oil, cream.
4. The body regulators, which supply the minerals and those mysterious growth-controllers, the vitamins, as well as the undigested waste material which daily ad is in emptying the bowels.

Each of these groups of foods has certain functions to perform in the process of growth and development. A balanced meal has some representative of each of these groups of foodstuffs.

Other things beside food are necessary. The advantage of coming to the dinner table in a pleasant frame of mind is well known and the unfavorable effect of fatigue from excessive play is also known to many parents. Disciplinary measures are not to be administered at the table. One may send the child away from the table if necessary but the conversational subjects at table should be pleasant, and even the toddler's right to indulge in his turn should be recognized. Polite attention should be given to the speaker. Thus emotional balance and control are assured. If the child is tired, allow him to lie down and rest before eating, else he cannot properly digest his food nor get the greatest benefit from it. The best food carefully selected and prepared, daintily served and eaten is of no benefit unless the body processes function properly. To digest and assimilate is to replace the worn out cells and add new ones for growth and development. The body can only do this work effectively when it is in fit condition from head to toes. The process of digestion is not dependent on the stomach and intestines alone—all the rest of the body, including the brain, plays a very important part.

The assentials then for proper nutrition, growth, and development are:

1. Food.
2. Sun.
3. Fitness.
4. Fellowship.

And the toddler should be assured his rightful share and be shown due consideration.

Mrs. Charles Gardner

Following an illness of six months Ellen Latimer Gardner of Bozrah, the widow of Charles Gardner, died at 11.30 o'clock Thursday evening in this city. She was the daughter of John L. and Laura Chapel Latimer and was born on Sept. 2, 1859, in Salem, Conn., where she attended the public schools. Mrs. Gardner was united in marriage to Charles Gardner on Feb. 18, 1877, by Rev. G. Dwight Boynton.

Surviving her are a brother, Louis Latimer, a sister, Mrs. Ida Williams, both of Norwich two nieces, Mrs. E. E. Yerrington of this city and Mrs. George Follett of Somerville, Mass., and two nephews, Ernest and Merton Latimer of Norwich. She is also survived by two grand nieces, Miss Althea Lewis of Sterling and Miss Lois Latimer of this city and a grand nephew, Paul Latimer of Norwich. Her husband died on Jan. 12, 1919. There are no children.

Mrs. Gardner was organist at the Gardner Lake Methodist church for many years and was greatly interested in the affairs of the church. She was of delightful disposition and made friends with all whom she came in contact, who will learn of her death with profound regret.

George A. Sydleman

George A. Sydleman, 95, of No. 2 Whitaker avenue, died Friday morning after an illness of about six months. He was born in the village of Poquetanuck, Preston, on May 1, 1833 and was married on July 13, 1893 to Miss Virginia Higgs of Pennsylvania. He was the son of Capt. and Mrs. George A. Sydleman and was one of a family of eight children.

Mr. Sydleman was well known and highly respected by all the other residents of the towns of Preston and Norwich. During his early life he owned and operated a coasting schooner plying up and down the New England coast. He also conducted a grocery store on Water street in partnership with the late Denison P. Coon. He was of old New England stock and was regarded as a fine type of citizen.

Politically Mr. Sydleman was a staunch democrat, having been connected with the party from the time he was eligible to cast his first vote up to the time of his death. He was greatly interested in the civic and political affairs in the places in which he lived and during his residence in Preston he held all of the offices of the town. He also served the town as an official during the elections. For many years he made his home at 4 Stanton avenue, on the East Side.

Surviving Mr. Sydleman are a sister Mrs. Horace A. Fitch and a daughter, Miss Fannie A. Sydleman, both of this city, and a nephew, Willard Coates of Providence. All those who were fortunate to know him will learn of his passing from this earthly life with sincere regret.

Miss Eleanor Neil.

It was with deep regret that the many friends of Miss Eleanor Neil learned of her death which occurred at noon last Sunday at her home in Raleigh, N. C., from acute indigestion.

Miss Neil had been teaching school for the last three years in Badin, N. C. She had visited Norwich each summer for a number of years, making many friends by her kindly disposition. While here Miss Neil attended McKinley avenue A. M. E. Zion church and sang in the choir. She also substituted for a time as organist and was a willing worker wherever she could be of assistance.

FUNERAL.

Miss Abbie E. Shea

Funeral services for Miss Abbie E. Shea, formerly of Plainfield, were held at 8.30 o'clock Friday morning at the undertaking parlors of Shea & Burke, Main street, with a high mass of requiem at 9 o'clock at St. Mary's Memorial church. Rev. John J. Reilly officiating. There were many relatives and friends present. As the body was borne into the church Chopin's Funeral March was rendered by Mrs. M. J. Farrell, the organist. At the offertory Nicholas Spellman sang Pie Jesu and as a waiting hymn, Mrs. Farrell, rendered Some Sweet Day. Burial was in St. Joseph's cemetery, Rt. Rev. Mgr. Michael H. May, rector of St. Patrick's church, reading a committal service. Friends acted as bearers. The funeral arrangements were in charge of Undertakers Shea & Burke.

Mrs. Ansel A. Beckwith

The funeral of Mrs. Ansel A. Beckwith of Cleveland Heights, Ohio, formerly of this city, was conducted at 1.30 Friday afternoon by Rev. Samuel H. Howe, pastor, at Park Congregational church. Burial was in Yantic cemetery, where a committal service was read by Rev. Mr. Howe. The bearers were Weston C. Pullen, Benedict H. Pullen, Henry D. Johnson and E. Allen Bidwell. The funeral arrangements were in charge of Undertakers Church and Allen.

WEDDING

Paulhus-Burke

Miss Viola May Burke, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Frank C. Burke of 55 Walden avenue, New London, and Joseph Paulhus of that city, were united in marriage there at St Mary's Star of the Sea church on Wednesday. The ceremony was performed by the Rev. Timothy N. Crowley, rector of the church.

The bride was charmingly attired in white and wore a bridal veil on which were a profusion of orange blossoms. She carried a bridal bouquet of white roses. Miss Josephine M. Sammataro was bridesmaid. She wore a gown of yellow satin, with picture hat to match, and carried a bouquet of yellow tea roses. Mr. Paulhus' best man was Charles Thompson.

Following the wedding there was a reception at the home of the bride's parents. One hundred and fifty persons were present from this city, New London, Providence, Fitchburg and Boston. Mr. and Mrs. Paulhus received many beautiful gifts.

Mr. and Mrs. Paulhus left after the reception for Providence where they will make their home.

Record Catch of Snapper Blues

William Hull and Claude Combies, employed in Norwich bowling alleys, made a record catch of snapper blues Friday afternoon, returning to the city with 300.

COMMERCE CHAMBER DIRECTORS BACK INDUSTRIAL EXPANSION IDEA

Endorsement of suggestions in the line of industrial expansion for Norwich was included in the important business transacted by the directors of the chamber of commerce at a supper meeting held Friday evening at 6:15 at the Norwich Golf club. Several invited guests who met with the directors included Abner Schwartz, chairman of the Merchants' bureau; Roy D. Judd, chairman of the finance committee, and W. A. Musgrave, auditor, who is also a member of the finance committee.

After the meeting had been called to order by President Harold D. Larrabee, consideration of the budget was first taken up and a financial statement for the past year was made with a view to the programme for the coming year. The financial statement for the nine months to June 30 and the ten months to July 31 was discussed and approved. This showed cash on hand of $2,140, accounts receivable of $645 and accounts payable of $1,800.

The membership status report showed that on Oct. 1, 1927, there were 362 members, with 45 new members secured in the October campaign. There had been a loss of eight by death and 11 by resignation and removal so that the membership on Aug. 1 is 390.

Plans for a consolidated effort between the chamber of commerce and the merchants' bureau for next years budgets were discussed and the feeling was that economy of time and effort and cost would be effected by such an arrangement. The directors voted approval of such a plan if it could be worked out satisfactorily with the merchants' bureau and the budget committee was authorized to prepare the estimated budget and to include in it an appropriation for the cost of this proposed campaign. It was the sense of the meeting that Secretary Walter H. Pilcher should be in charge of this campaign, without participation by any outside organization, and Secretary Pilcher declared his willingness to accept the task if he could be assured of such support as was given in the campaign last year.

The recommendations of the industrial conference were presented, advising the organization of a Norwich industrial development company by raising a certain sum of money through the medium of a stock selling campaign. This amount would be utilized for investment in industrial real estate holdings, but none of it to be used for bonuses, for moving expenses or for purchases of stock. The adoption of the Keene plan was recommended and was accepted in principle by the directors, who authorized President Larrabee to appoint a committee of five to investigate and set up a plan of organization and of execution.

A second recommendation was along the line of industrial expansion from within and was based upon the belief that one of the best ways to foster and promote industrial expansion is to render service of value to industry. It was voted that an invitation be extended to the New England Council to co-operate with the local chamber towards this end.

In response to a request from Alderman Richard P. Gregson to have a committee appointed to work in conjunction with the public works committee of the common council and the board of assessors in the matter of street signs and the numbering of houses, the directors named Shepard B. Palmer and Harold E. Robbins as the committee to represent the chamber of commerce.

All the matters coming before the meeting were very fully discussed and adjournment was taken before 9 o'clock.

NEW HAVEN ROAD GAINS IN NET PROFIT SHOWING

The New York, New Haven & Hartford railroad, in its report to the department of public utilities for the quarter ended June 30, 1928, shows a net profit of $3,121,604 as against a net of $2,386,255 for the same period of last year. This is after deducting interest charges, rents for leased roads, hire of freight cars, etc.

Operating revenues for the periods were $34,585,549 this year and $35,299,174 for the same period last year. Operating expenses were $24,615,414 in 1928 and $25,378,825 in 1927. Current assets as of June 30 this year totaled $37,015,303 and current liabilities were $16,794,913, leaving a working capital of $20,220,390. Total corporate surplus on the same date amounted to $6,278,154.

The road has been greatly aided by the two recent constructive decisions rendered on its account. These include the upholding of the 40 per cent increase in commutation rates in New York and the interstate commerce commission's approval of an increase of approximately 15 per cent in rates for carrying mails. This latter, if upheld by the courts, will give the road a substantial sum for past services to the government through its retroactive provision.

The rate increase for commutation was put into effect by the road in 1925 but was contested. It is estimated the amount of $1,200,000 has been earned by the New Haven road through this increase and this sum, withheld until the rate should have been established, may now be released and accredited to income.

The increased mail rate is expected to net the road about $300,000 a year.

ELECTRICAL AND PLUMBING CITY BARN CONTRACTS LET

Harold Dahl submitted the lowest bid for the contract for the plumbing and heating of the new city barn on Baltic street, while the lowest bid for the electrical work was entered by the Eaton-Chase company. The bids for the electrical work were opened Thursday afternoon at the office of Chandler and Palmer, architects and civil engineers, in the Thayer building by the public works of the common council, Harold Dahl, chairman. The previous afternoon the committee opened the bids for the plumbing and heating.

The bids for the electrical work were as follows: Horace Corning, $370; O'Neil Electric company, $356; Walter H. Nelson, $265; The Eaton-Chase company, $233.79. The heating and plumbing bids, six in number, included: John Morton, $1,984; J. A. Fitzgerald, $1,740; Williams Bros, $1,740; P. J. McMahon, $1,668; Elmer E. Johnson, $1,500; Harold C. Dahl, $1,418.

The general contract for the erection of the city barn was given to Patrick F. Sweeney, contractor, with a bid of $21,500, the lowest among five bids made. The contract was awarded to him several weeks ago.

QUIET CAMP DAYS WITH SOLDIERS AT NIANTIC

Monday the various 43rd Division, C. N. G. units, now in Camp Trumbull, Niantic, will hold their bivouac in the nearby vicinity. All the outfits and officers of the staff corps and departments will participate.

Maj. Gen. Morris B. Payne of New London is in command of the camp, while Lieut. Col. Thomas E. Troland is assistant chief of staff, and Capt. Alfred Ligourie is aide-de-camp. The 85th Infantry Brigade Headquarters Company of New London, Capt. Allen B. Lambdin, commanding, will go in not bivouac with the division units.

At present things are rather quiet at the camp so far as the spectacular end of it is concerned for the officers and units are attending schools of instruction from 9 o'clock in the morning until noon.

TROLLEY CAR STARTER KICKED BY HORSE

Irving H. Cruthers of 22 Canterbury Turnpike, Norwich Town, starter for the Connecticut company on Franklin square, received a painful injury early Friday evening, when he was kicked in the instep of the right foot by a horse. Shortly after the first storm of the evening the horse was being driven in a westerly direction on Main street and at the intersection of Main and Franklin streets it slipped and fell on the slippery pavement. While the horse was crouched in a sitting position Mr. Cruthers in assisting the animal to his feet was accidentally kicked. The starter completed his day's work, although the injury caused him to get about with a limp.

Will Preach in New London

Rev. George Henry Strouse, pastor of the Bozrah Congregational church will occupy the pulpit of the Montauk Avenue Baptist church, in New London at both services on the coming Sunday.

The Emblem club of Rockville will hold its annual outing next Thursday going to Crystal Lake for the day, where they will make their headquarters at the cottage of Mrs. Stephen H. Conners.

STORM MAKES TROUBLE WITH ELECTRIC LIGHTS

Three electrical storms hovered over the city Friday, one at 12:30 in the afternoon, another at 7 and a third at 11 o'clock in the evening, but as far as could be learned no serious damage was incurred. The second was the severest of the three storms and was accompanied by sharp flashes of lightning and a heavy deluge of rain. It lasted for about three-quarters of an hour.

The city gas and electrical department was hardest hit by the storms, three crews being called upon to repair the trouble during the night. The repairmen found the heaviest work in putting into shape transformers and other troubles on the Scotland road, Harland road, Backus corner and Laurel Hill. The ground wires on a pole in font of the Columbian house needed the attention of the men.

An electric light pole situated in front of the Schultz cigar store on Franklin square was struck by a bolt of lightning during the second storm. A cluster of lights on the pole were put out of commission. Several persons saw the bolt hit the iron pole and the flareup that followed.

The electric lights on the Broadway and Union square circuit were out for a time Friday evening, there being only one light burning from the Wauregan hotel corner to the top of Broadway hill. These were soon back in working order. Very little trouble was experienced by the telephone company.

The electric lights at Nadelson's Spruce lodge near Fitchville failed to function because of the storm. The light is furnished by the Bozrah Electric company.

INCREASE SHOWN IS EXPORTS FROM THE U. S.

WASHINGTON, Aug. 10— (AP) — Goods exported from the United States during the second quarter of 1928 had an aggregate value of $1,175,000,000, which was one per cent more than the same period last year, 20 per cent more than the corresponding quarter of 1922, and more than double the quarter's exports in the pre-war year 1913. The comparisons were made today by the commerce department.

Steady progress of the United States as a manufacturing nation was even more strikingly indicated. The total value of manufactured goods exported from the country in this year's second quarter was $576,000,000 a gain of 9 per cent over 1927.

Imports exported from the country in this year's second quarter was $576,000,000, a gain of 9 per cent over 1927.

Imports, totalling $1,015,000,000, fell off slightly during the period.

DISCUSSING ROGERS FOR NOMINATION FOR GOVERNOR

According to a report in the Waterbury Republican on the authority of an unnamed state official, the slate previously settled upon has been abandoned and a new deal ordered all around in the matter of state republican nominations. The reason is to adjust the claims of the host of candidates that have arisen and assure as little hard feeling as possible.

Previously it had been taken for granted that Gov. John H. Trumbull would be renominated. It was known that he was not desirous of serving again but the state leaders were said to feel that with Connecticut in the doubtful column this year it would be better to make no change in the head of the ticket.

It would not be surprising now if State Treas. Ernest E. Rogers should be nominated for governor and Governor Trumbull allowed to retire as he is believed to desire. One reason for this is that there are at least three active candidates for the nomination of lieutenant-governor, Treasurer Rogers being one of them, and the others being the present lieutenant-governor, J. Edwin Brainard, and Secy. of State Francis J. Palloti. The state leaders are bound to eliminate Lieut.-Governor Brainard any way, so he is out of the picture except to the extent of such support as he may personally raise. However, the state leaders are very loath to offend Secretary Palloti and he has given indications that he will be sore if he is not nominated for lieutenant-governor, having let it be known that he will not accept again the nomination for secretary of state.

Consequently, the new deal is said to be Treasurer Rogers for governor and Secretary Palloti for lieutenant-governor. Governor Trumbull's chief claim on the votes has been that he is a keen and successful businessman Treasure. Rogers is said to be his equal in this regard, being a successful manufacturer and banker and an officer of the state chamber of commerce and Manufacturers' association. He recently gave a notable banquet at his home at which most of the state leaders were present and it is said to have been there that the new slate was decided upon.

FELL FROM WINDOW OF HOTEL ON BROADWAY

Herbert E. Ring of 175 Laurel Hill avenue, who has been employed as an insurance agent, was found about 6.45 Friday morning on the sidewalk in front of the Del-Hof hotel on Broadway where he had fallen from a window of the building. He was suffering from concussion, but was conscious when attended by Dr. Louis T. Cassidy, who was summoned after the police had been notified.

Mr. Ring was taken to the Backus hospital where it was ascertained that he had sustained injury to his back, both ankles, his jaw and his tongue but no bones were broken. A report that his tongue had been nearly bitten in two in the fall was denied by Dr. Cassidy Friday night who said that the tongue was only slightly lacerated. It is believed that Mr. Ring landed in a sitting position which accounted for the fact that there were no bones broken.

Mr. Ring had gone to the hotel with a guest and it was claimed that he had been looking out of the window to see what time it was by the town clock when he fell. He was resting fairly well at the hospital Friday night.

Paid for Parking Violations

Charged with parking illegally two Norwich men, William LaBarre and John Houston were fined $2 each in the city court Friday morning. The machines were tagged Thursday evening.

Applies for Gas Station Permit

Application for permission to locate a gasoline station at 86 High street has been made by Gabrile Romanowski. A hearing on the application has been set for Tuesday, Aug. 21, at 1 o'clock in the afternoon.

U. S. SWIMMERS COME THROUGH TRIALS SAFELY

AMSTERDAM, Holland, Aug. 10—(AP)—All American swimming stars, both women and men, with but one exception survived the final round of trials and eliminations today in the Olympic water sports carnival.

While Miss Clarita Huntzberger, California girl diver from Los Angeles, flunked out of the high board competition with a sixth place in the second division of the trials, Johnny Weissmuller, Chicago speedster and defending champion in the 100-meter free style helped himself to a new Olympic record in the semi-finals of that event.

Weissmuller, ace of the American swimming forces, ate up his favorite distance with huge, space-devouring strokes in 58 3-5 seconds. With him in the finals tomorrow will swim George Kojac, the New York schoolboy who won both his preliminary and semi-final heats easily today, and Walter Laufer of Chicago, victor in the morning event but a good second to the Japanese, Takaishi, in his semi-final. Laufer swam faster trailing the far eastern than Kojac did in winning the event.

Less impressively the girls' team kept pace with their sturdier brothers. Miss Eleanor Holm, New York school girl, won her heat in the 100-meter backstroke for women and Lisa Lindstrom, even younger, along with Marion Gilman of Alameda, Calif., both gained second places to land in the final. Miss Marie Braun, Dutch star, stole most of the applause and left America with little hope of final victory when she stroked the distance in one minute, 21 3-5 seconds, a new Olympic record. Later, Miss King of England did 1:21 flat.

Veteran Woman Golfer Dead

PHILADELPHIA, Aug. 10 —(AP)— Mrs. Caleb F. Fox, known as the "Grand Old Lady of Golf," died today. She was 67 years old and was ill for a month.

Mrs. Fox was one of the 13 women who played in the women's national championship in 1895. She qualified in many national championships but never won the national. She was the wife of a Philadelphia banker.

SENATOR MOSES COMING TO SPEAK TO WINDHAM HOOVER-CURTIS CLUB

(Special to The Bulletin)

WOODSTOCK, Aug. 10—Republicans from the four corners of the county gathered at Bald Hill farm, the home of Clarence W. Bowen, at Woodstock Hill here today, in the interests of organizing a republican organization now known as the Windham County Hoover-Curtis Republican club. Mr. Bowen presided at the meeting and after discussion relative to campaign policies the following officers were elected: Chairman, Charles A. Gates of Willimantic; vice-chairmen, Gilbert Mathewson, Ashford; Allen B. Lincoln, Ashford; Frank D. Spaulding, Brooklyn; Mrs. Susie G. Williams, Brooklyn; Andrew T. J. Clark, Canterbury; Mrs. Lillian A. Frink, Canterbury; Mrs. Laura Hough, Chaplin; Orrin F. Wilson, Chaplin; Henry B. Buell, Eastford; John M. Tatem, Eastford; Mrs. George Hall, Hampton; Reuben E. Pearl, Hampton; Louis S. Barstow, Killingly; Elbert L. Darbie, Killingly; N. Lourne Greig, Killingly; Sabin S. Bussell, Killingly; J. Arthur Atwood, Wauregan; Everett E. Brown, Central Village; Mrs. Harry W. Gardiner, Moosup; Harold J. Lewis, Plainfield; Willis Covell, Pomfret; John T. Grosvenor, Pomfret; Mrs. Arthur D. Lapsley, Pomfret; John Wetherbee, Pomfret; Adhemar A. Broduer, Putnam; Byron G. Bugbee, Putnam; Luther M. Keith, Putnam; Arthur F. Macdonald, Putnam; Mrs. Helen Cary, Scotland; Leander O. Haskins, Scotland; Herman E. Frink, Sterling.

Mrs. Phoebe E. Gallup, Sterling; Randolph H. Chandler, Thompson; Alexander Maitland, Thompson; John F. Reardon, North Grosvenordale; Dr. Robert C. Paine, Thompson; Mrs. C. Winfield Noyes, Windham; Charles B. Pomeroy, Windham; Edwin O. Sumner, Windham; Henry T. Child, Woodstock; A. Linn Weatherhead, Windham; Bart Johnson, Woodstock; George M. Sampson, Woodstock; treasurer, Whitman Danielson, Putnam; secretary, Clarence W. Bowen, Woodstock; executive committee, Miss Katherine Byrne, Putnam; John F. Reardon, George M. Sampson, Silas M. Wheelock, Putnam; chairman, treasurer and secretary, ex-officio. The following committees were appointed: Grounds, Benjamin F. Ritch, Woodstock; finance, Arthur E. Smith, Putnam; speeches, Clarence W. Bowen, Woodstock; music, Samuel Rich, Putnam.

Following the election of officers the members of the club retired to business routine and it was voted to hold a mass meeting of the club which all in the county are invited to attend. The common on Woodstock Hill was chosen as the site and the date was set for Sept. 15. Two speaking stands will be erected, one near the Woodstock academy and the other on the common, where Gen. U. S. Grant addressed a large gathering on July Fourth, 1870.

The club will have a number of noted persons present to address the meeting, among them being Senator George H. Moses of New Hampshire, who has informed Mr. Bowen of his acceptance of the invitation sent him. The club appointed a committee which will arrange for Gov. John H. Trumbull to preside at the county-wide mass meeting. Mr. Bowen said that he felt sure of a republican victory in this state this year, as in the campaign of four years ago

DUWELL AMATEURS WASHED OUT CARD TO BE PUT ON THIS EVENING

Rain and plenty of it gave it to the Duwells on the chin last night, but according to officials of the club they are not groggy by any means and will be in there as strong as ever tonight, fighting to give Norwich its first amateur boxing in nearly six months. The only change in the original plan of battle will be the starting time. So as to give everyone, store keepers, Saturday night shoppers and all, an opportunity to give their duties due care and still get there for the first bout the committee in charge of the show deemed it advisable to hold off the opening of the bill until nine o'clock D. S. T. With this exception everything remains the same as was originally planned. There will be the same number of bouts, the same boxers will be on hand and the same popular prices will prevail.

In spite of the heavy rain that fell last night at about 7 o'clock and washed out the show, every boxer who had sent in his entry, Worcester scrappers and all were on hand ready to do their stuff. Hoping against hope that the showers would not interfere with the bill, hundreds of fans phoned both this office and the Duwell club to inquire if the card would go on as scheduled, should the elements ease up. The postponement was not actually made until it was found almost impossible to go ahead as planned.

The majority of the boxers when they found that there would be no show, took advantage of the Duwell Gym. and tapered off with short workouts before returning to their homes. Although there was no boxing at the Duwell field there sure was plenty of action at the Duwell club house. In nearly every case the boys worked out fast and demonstrated that they are in the nick of condition. Johnny Kop who is listed in the same class with the Rhode Island windmill, Al Koziol, and in all probability will draw the champ as an opponent boxed a couple of fast rounds with Vic Darr and showed up in great style. Koziol was one of the few boxers who did not do any work.

As was previously announced the entry list for tonight's card includes boxers from Worcester, Jewett City, Danielson, Westerly and Norwich. The card is made up of ten bouts and will not start until 9 o'clock D. S. T.

The officials will be: Referee Frankie Busch; judges, Michael Kelly, Jackie Wilson; timer, John Carney; examining doctor, Dr. Thompson; announcer, William Pedace.

GIANTS RALLY IN SEVENTH TO ROUT PHILLIES, 8 TO 4

NEW YORK, Aug. 10—(AP)—The Giants rallied in the seventh today to rout the Phillies by 8 to 4 in the opener of a two-game series, and so kept pace with the Cardinals, who defeated the Pirates, 2 to 1. St. Louis remains four games ahead of New York.

Fred Lindstrom drove in five of the New York runs, three in the first with his 11th homer and two more in the seventh with a single after Reese had been passed intentionally to fill the bases. Bill Terry topped off the rally with his 11th homer with two on, and the Giants had enough markers to win with room to spare.

Don Hurst hit his 19th home run in the fifth, giving the Phils a temporary lead. Fred Fitzsimmons started and was unsteady, but got credit for winning the game. He gave way to Mel Ott, a pinch batsman, in the big Giant seventh, and Joe Genewich finished. Score:

WHITE SOX BUNCH HITS TO BEAT OUT BROWNS

CHICAGO, Aug. 10—(AP)—Chicago bunched their hits in two innings here today, and took the opening game of the series with St. Louis by a 5 to 3 score. Clancy's double with two out and the bases filled sent three runs over in the first inning and in the eighth, after the Browns had tied the score, the White Sox hammered out four hits to score twice and provide the margin of victory.

Blankenship got in trouble in the ninth and Lyons relieved him to fan Bettencourt and Manush.

Blackerby, the Sox recruit from Waco in the Texas league, made his debut in left field. Score:

GEHRIG'S HOMER WINS GAME FOR YANKEES

BOSTON, Aug. 10—(AP)—Lou Gehrig's bat held the center of the stage this afternoon as the Yankees defeated the Red Sox by 5 to 2 in the second game of the series. Lou's 20th home run into the center field bleachers, with two mates on base and two out in the third, gave the Yankees all the margin they really needed to defeat Charlie Ruffing. In the seventh, Gehrig's single chased in Combs.

Boston outhit New York, but was unable to bunch its drives with any success. George Pipgras was at his best in the pinches. He seemed to specialize in fanning pinch batsmen at critical points. Charley Berry fell a victim on strikes in this manner with the bases full and two out in the seventh, and Johnny Heving met a similar fate in the ninth with two on and two out.

Durocher's fielding was many notches above the average. The Yankees remained four and one-half games ahead of the Athletics, who defeated Washington, 8 to 0. Score:

QUINN BLANKS SENATORS WITH FOUR SCATTERED HITS

PHILADELPHIA, Aug. 10— (AP) — The Athletics kept step with the New York Yankees today and remained with in four and a half games of first place by beating the Washington Senators, 8 runs to 0.

The Mackmen cinched the game in the third inning by pounding Gaston for five hits that scored four runs.

Jack Quinn held the Senators to four hits in blanking them for his 154th victory of the season. Bucky Harris, who tripled in the last inning was the only Senator to travel beyond first base.

CARDS NOSE OUT PIRATES IN TWELFTH INNING

PITTSBURGH, Aug. 10—(AP)—St. Louis defeated Pittsburgh 2 to 1 in a 12-inning pitchers' battle here today, Fussell and Mitchell, both southpaws, tying up in what fans declared was one of the best games played here in several seasons.

Fussell allowed only five hits up until the 12th, when he weakened and Mitchell was taken out in the final inning to allow High to bat for him. The Cards won out when Hafey doubled and scored on Wilson's single.

Fussell's own error was responsible for the Red Birds' first run in the opening inning when he fumbled Douthit's bunt. Douthit then stole second and scored on a single by Frisch.

The Pirates deadlocked the tally in the second on Grantham's single and Brickell's triple. It was the first loss for the Buccaneers after a winning streak of eight straight. Score:

CALIFORNIA WINS OLYMPIC EIGHT-OARED ROWING EVENT

SLOTEN, Holland, Aug. 10—(AP)—California's Golden Bears are now the champions of the world. Their blue-tipped oars flashing irresistible power through the narrow waters of the Sloten canal this afternoon, these brawny native sons of Uncle Sam maintained their unbeaten record and brought the Olympic regatta to a thrilling climax by beating the Thames Rowing club, Britain's greatest crew, in the eight-oared final.

Three quarters of a shell's length—the margin that the Americans gained in the first half of the 2,000-meter race and held despite a stirring challenge in the final half—was all that separated the rivals at the finish but it was enough to top off as sensationally triumphant a campaign as any crew ever has known, give the Americans their third successive victory in this eight-oared Olympic classic and enable the United States to win the regatta by a decisive margin on points.

TAFTVILLE-VOLUNTOWN GAME TODAY

All roads lead to Taftville this afternoon when Taftville takes on the Voluntown-Glasgo team and all those interested in baseball are going to witness a conflict of two clubs between whom there is absolutely no feeling of friendship. On the contrary, it is no secret that much animosity is harbored in the hearts of both sides and is slowly spreading out among the fans.

Manager Mac. Burdick of the V. G.'s, he of the bizarre sweater, and the naive remarks, claims that he will bring down an aggregation that is bound to take Taftville into camp and no mistake. It is rumored that he is going to have Lefty Smith do the mound work, which fact alone will tend to inject some apprehension into the hearts of the fast, hard-hitting, Taftvilles. So far this season Taftville has been able to slug any pitcher that their opponents have offered against them and that includes several state-wide known moundsmen.

The V. G.'s went back to the country last Tuesday evening feeling rather melancholy after taking a beating from Lloyd Jarvis. Lloyd kept them under his little finger throughout and sent them home without a run. For that same reason, Manager Troland is going to offer Jarvis the same honor this afternoon and the latter will do his best to turn them home scoreless again. The game will start at 3:15 and a game for blood and for the "rubber" of a five-game series, will be played off to give the winners a world of honor and the losers a terrible amount of humiliation.

VANCE PITCHES ROBINS TO ANOTHER BRILLIANT VICTORY

BROOKLYN, Aug. 10—(AP)—Dazzy Vance was at his best today, and the Robins had little trouble in subduing the Braves, 5 to 1, in the opener of a three-game series, once they got their sights trained upon the offerings of Ed Brandt. Del Bissonette opened the scoring in the fourth with his 19th home run, but the Braves tied this in the sixth. In the home half of the same round, the Robins bunched hits for three runs and never thereafter were headed. A fifth run was added in the eighth after Ben Cantwell had relieved Brandt.

Vance allowed the Braves just five singles and struck out seven. He gave three free passes. Score:

INDIANS SCORE FIVE IN NINTH BUT FAIL TO WIN

CLEVELAND, Aug. 10— (AP) —A five-run rally by the Indians in the ninth failed to stave off defeat today, Detroit finishing on the long end of an 8 to 7 score.

The Tribesmen outhit the Tigers 16 to 12 but eight visitors' blows were doubles and two were triples. Detroit pounded Hudlin hard in the early innings and kept up the attack, against Miljus. The Redskins chased Holloway in the ninth and Vangilder finished the game for Detroit. Score:

SMOKE SHOP-ALL STAR GAME WILL BE A SUNDAY FEATURE

The Smoke Shop-Willimantic All Star game at the Hollyhock Island diamond on Sunday afternoon looms as one of the feature baseball attractions of the week end sports menu. The Smoke Shop throws its strongest line-up into the battle with either Lefty Lucier bearing the pitching burden or Babe Santora the Blue Ridge league hurler who comes from Boston. Hart is slated for the mound work for the Thread City club and comes here with a record of many wins over some of the leading state semi-pro clubs. The game is called for 3 o'clock and arrangements for handling a big crowd have been made. The lineups:

All Stars—Warren ss; Tinker lf; A. Heller cf; H. Heller rf; S. Heller 2b; M. Heller 1b; Tew c; Haggerty 2b; Hart p.

Smoke Shop—A. Tombari lf; H. Sadinsky lf; Cummings rf; Morin 2b; Greene cf; Gibbs ss; S. Tombari 3b; Bergshinzo 1b; Pete Tombari c; Lucier p; Santora p.

NEAR RIOT WHEN JUDGES GIVE POOR VERDICT AGAINST AMERICAN BOXER

AMSTERDAM, Aug. 10—(AP)—The fighting spirit of the ringside fans at the Olympic boxing events tonight made the action in the ring in the semi-final bouts look like second rate performances. Not since the Olympics started have such scenes been witnessed in the Olympic fighting pavilion.

The uproar started when John L. Daley of Waltham, Mass., American bantamweight entry, was declared the loser in a bout with Isaacs of South Africa to the great amazement of the boxing fans. Led by Charles Ornstein of Baltimore, manager of the American lacrosse team, the United States fans on the sidelines booed, hissed, yelled and screamed. Even General MacArthur, president of the Olympic committee, rose excitedly from his seat at the apparent injustice of the decision. The American rooters rushed into the aisles and tried to crowd up to the ring and for a while it looked as if there would be a free-for-all between the Dutch police who were called in to quell the disturbance and the American rooters.

Meanwhile the judges reversed the decision, announcing that they had made a mistake. This now sent the British fans and others who favored the South African into a counter demonstration.

Daley clearly defeated Isaacs in all three rounds, driving him all over the ring with hard right and left hooks to the head. The South African delivered most of his blows with an open glove and was unable to land effectively.

The British counter demonstration had hardly died down when another American—Stephen Holaiko, Auburn, N. Y., lightweight, entered the ring for another bout which stirred up excitement. Holaiko's defeat of Berggren of Sweden brought the Scandinavian fans to their feet, hissing and booing but the decision stood. Several battles in the audience between Swedish and American adherents were barely averted.

Berggren put up a game battle against Holaiko in this bout, making a gallant stand in the final round after the American had gained a wide margin in the first two. The Swedish boxer managed to drive the American to the ropes but was not scoring cleanly

The third American who reached the semi-finals got into action before the excitement started and lost a close decision without any protest. Harry Devine, Worcester, Mass., featherweight, was defeated by Vanklaveren of Holland. The Dutch boxer hit harder and oftener, winning the first and third rounds. The second frame was called a draw when Devine floored his opponent with a left to the jaw but could not keep him down.

The audience got plenty of opportunity to cheer in the all-Scandinavian battle between Ramm of Sweden and Sorsdal of Norway, heavyweights. Although bleeding profusely from a blow over the eye received in the first round, Ramm fought back gamely and won the decision.

Further cause for animated discussion at the ringside was furnished by the announcement that Ireland, Germany, Holland, Belgium and Canada had joined in a protest against the decision which declared the Irish bantamweight, Traynor, the loser in a bout with Tamagnin of Italy.

The brothers of the Swedish king, Charles and Eugene, Prince Olaf of Norway, Princess Axel of Denmark and several other members of Scandinavian royalty appeared at the ringside just in time to see Rodriguez, Argentine heavyweight, whip Michaelsen of Denmark to a standstill. The royal fans got so excited that they yelled like the rest of the ringsiders. Princess Axel urging her compatriot to greater efforts with piercing words in Danish.

Entering the finals, Argentina holds the lead in numbers with four survivors among the 16 finalists. The Argentines are Peralta, featherweight; Landini, welterweight; Avendano, light heavyweight and Rodriguez, heavyweight. Italy has three finalists, the United States two, Daley and Holaiko, while Holland, Germany, Sweden, Czechoslovakia, New Zealand, France and Hungary have one each

JUNIOR LEAGUE GAME AT CAMPUS THIS AFTERNOON

At the Academy campus this afternoon the Taftville Legion and Y. M. C. A. teams of the junior twilight league will attempt to play off the game that was postponed last Monday night because of rain. The decision to get the game out of the way was reached Friday afternoon after the managers of both clubs had got together to decide when and where was the best time and place for the playoff.

The Legionnaires, at the present time leading the junior loop by a fairly comfortable margin are expected to find the Y team a tough proposition and it wouldn't be the least surprising if the first real upset of the league took place. After having gotten off to a bad start the locals have been playing a great brand of ball, dumping a couple of the favorites during the past week. A win for them this afternoon will send them well up in the league standing. On the other hand, if Taftville wins they will have practically cinched the pennant. The probable batteries for the game will be: Taftville, Raymond and Fountaine; Y, Greene and Sadinsky.

Newsies Win Again

The Bowens Newies defeated the Preston Braves in an exciting game at the Greeneville playgrounds Friday afternoon with a score of 9-7. The features of the game was a smashing two bagger by Frank Higgins with three men on and a "hidden ball play" in the last inning also making the last out by the Newsies star fielder Charles Quinn. ELM CITY GIANTS HERE ON SUNDAY

J. B. Martin will meet the famed Elm City Giants, champions of New England, Sunday afternoon at the J. B. Martin grounds. The game is scheduled to start at 3:15 sharp.

The Elm City Giants will be a team that will leave its impression upon the local fans for some time to come. Little is needed to be said in regard to this visiting team, inasmuch as the team is claimant to the New England championship. Followers of the national pastime have read of the accounts of the victories the invading team has piled up in its tour through New England states. Manager Erlbeck has made plans for a record-breaking crowd. In show windows, on poles and in every conspicuous place, notices have been posted of the coming to town of this aggregation of ball tossers. The attraction is the topic of discussion among the fans. It is one out of the ordinary number of games which Manager Erlbeck is giving the followers of the game as a real treat. Local fans know the Colored Giants as a fast club and a club that puts up a real good game. It will be remembered that this dusky team played several times in this vicinity and put up mighty fine exhibitions. The team is noted for its comedy aspect, which in no way takes away from its playing ability. For the Velvetmen, Fisher will be assigned for mound duty, with Logan of Providence replacing Blair on the receiving end. Pat Noonan will again be seen covering first with Pard Pedace at second. All roads on Sunday will lead to the J. B. Martin grounds, an ideal spot to spend the afternoon. Also plenty of parking space.

BITES and STINGS

FOR mosquito bites and the stings of bees or other insects, use Vicks VapoRub as a salve. While Vicks is used primarily for treating colds externally, its healing, antiseptic properties make it also an excellent application for surface inflammations—for cuts, burns and bruises, as well as for insect bites.

CANTERBURY GREEN

The weather last Saturday proved ideal for the picnic and many Canterbury people took this opportunity to enjoy a day's outing by the river. Sandwiches, cake, lemonade and watermelon comprised the main lunch, while ice cream was served later in the day. The energetic elders enjoyed games and contests as well as the children, who were led in their play by several of the young people. A number of little prizes were won by the children. Charles Hart, superintendent, and his assistants deserve much credit for the successful carrying out of the picnic plans.

There will be preaching at the church next Sunday as usual. After that there will be no service until September.

Mr. and Mrs. Parker Lathrop of New Haven spent the week end at James Lathrop's. Miss Louise Hovey of Norwich is a guest at the Lathrop home.

Mr. Riesdel and daughter, Miss Julia Riesdel, of New York are at their place in Elmdale for the month of August.

Relatives from Springfield, Mrs. William Babcock and two daughters, and Mrs. Curtis Alexander have been visiting for several days with Mrs. Addie Waldo.

Mrs. Barker has in her garden a freak dahlia which shows blossoms of three distinct colorings from one plant.

Mrs. Fred Safford and son Lewis are visiting for a few days in Providence

Mrs. Happy Tracy and Miss Ruth Davis have returned to their homes from the summer school at New Haven.

Mrs. Wilson and grandson, Webster Wainwright, left this week for a trip to New York.

Some men who never forget that they are gentlemen fail to remember that there are others.

POETRY

It's Great to Live and Learn

When a fellow thinks he knows it all,
his trouble just begins;
You slip and get an awful fall—why,
you are knocked clean off your pins.
You couldn't stand life's simple ways,
but now for them you yearn.
How litt! you knew in bygone days:
Gee! ain't it great to live and
learn!

Before you were twenty-one, and the ol' folks would advise,
Away from them you quickly ran,
their advice you would despise;
To you they weren't up to date, but now for them you yearn.
You see your mistake, but it's too late,
Gee! ain't it great to live and
learn!

The best little girl you ever knew you turned her down—and why?
She wasn't sporty enough for you—too backward, bashful and shy.
You wanted one from the great white
way—
Well, you got her, and the light don't burn;
You're taking your medicine game—but, say, ain't it great to live and learn!

You know there's nothing to a flashy gent with that flattering line of talk;
His spiel as a rule is not well meant—test him and you'll find he'll balk.
And remember a knock is always a boost, and the knocker he forgets
That chickens come home to roost and ofttimes one regrets

The nasty things he has said about a friend as well as a foe;
Remember you're a long time dead, so be straight before you go.
And when you're old enough to marry,
look before you leap;
It's better by far to tarry than make a mistake and weep.

And when you pick your girl, be sure you know that she loves you and you alone;
Pick out the one that can cook and sew and one that loves a home.
Don't get stuck on a pretty face, or a
Remember you're not having love and you're looking for a mate.

Never be too old to take advice and don't think you're the whole thing,
Because it's just twice as nice to be modest and to cling.
To these good old fashioned ways, and if you do you'll never turn
And some day you'll look back and say
Gee! ain't it nice to live and learn!

Aug. 29—Annual Corner picnic at Aunty No. 1's, Norwich Town.

RECIPES TO USE AND SAVE

Dear Sisters: These recipes are sent for such use as the members may have for them:

Chocolate Cornflake Pudding: One pint milk, three cups cornflakes, one-half cup sugar, two teaspoons shortening, four teaspoons cocoa, one egg. Scald the milk, remove from the fire and add the sugar, shortening, cocoa and cornflakes. When cool, add the egg well beaten. Pour into a buttered pudding dish and bake in a moderate oven (350 degrees F.) for one hour. Serve hot with hard sauce or cold with whipped cream. For variety one-half cup of raisins may be added. This serves four people.

Poor Man's Pudding: One-half cup chopped suet, one-half cup seeded raisins, one-half cup currants, one and one-half cups grated bread, one cup flour, two teaspoons baking powder, one-half cup brown sugar, two cups milk.

Mix ingredients in order given; beat well. Put into greased mold. Place in covered saucepan with boiling water half-way up sides of mold. Steam two hours. Turn out carefully. Serve with hard or other sauce.

Steamed Orange Pudding: One and one-half cups scalded milk, one cup bread crumbs, two level tablespoons butter, three eggs, one-third cup of sugar, grated rind and strained juice of two small oranges.

Pour the scalded milk over the crumbs, add the butter and let the mixture stand for 10 minutes. Beat the egg thoroughly and add them with the sugar; stir in the orange juice and rind, and beat well. Turn into greased molds, cover and steam one hour.

Cranberry Pudding: Two eggs, one and one-half cups sugar, one-half cup water, juice and rind of one lemon, one and one-quarter cups flour, one-quarter level teaspoon salt, one level teaspoon baking powder.

Beat the eggs and sugar together until thick and light. Add the water, then the flour, salt and baking powder sifted together, also adding at this time the lemon rind and juice. Mix very lightly, turn into a hot greased pan and bake in a moderate oven about 25 minutes. Turn out, spread thickly with warm cranberry sauce and heap spoonfuls of whipped cream around and on top.

Brown Betty: Prepare the same as scalloped apple, adding one-half teaspoon cloves, one-half teaspoon allspice, one-half cup molasses and one cup raisins, seeded and chopped. Bake in slow oven one hour.

MAJESTIC.

FOR TIRED AND BURNING FEET

Dear Cornerites: Just before retiring draw yourself water enough in the bathtub to soak your feet, or take out some in a pail, put a lump of soda in the tepid water about the size of a walnut. If you decide to soak them in the tub, put a piece the size of an egg. Soak your feet five minutes; dry well with a rough towel. Then take another pail of tepid water, soak the feet five minutes more and dry well with a towel. Then take an old pair of cotton hose, cut off the feet, rub your feet well with vaseline and wear them all night, and see how much they will help you.

Creamed Beef: One-quarter pound dried beef, one pint milk, one tablespoon butter, one-half cup flour.

Melt the butter into a pan and add beef (after soaking it ten minutes in hot water). Fry until brown; add milk and bring to a boil. Take flour, add water and form a paste, add this to the milk and stir until thick. Serve hot on buttered toast.

Cucumber Boats with Lobster Salad: Cucumber boats are made by cutting the cucumbers the long way after peeling. Scoop out the soft center and place shells in a dish of cracked ice. Mix lobster meat with finely cut celery and lettuce; mix with enough mayonnaise to moisten well. Drain cucumber boats, fill with salad and sprinkle with paprika. They are delicious with haddock salad and mayonnaise.

Chicken Patties: Two tablespoons butter, one cup cold diced chicken, one-half teaspoon salt, one cup chicken stock, two tablespoons flour, shake of pepper.

Melt butter in saucepan, stir in flour and add chicken stock; season and bring to a boil; add chicken and cook slowly five minutes; fill patty shells.

Richmond Rolls: One cup milk, one-quarter teaspoon salt, one heaping teaspoon of lard, two and one-half cups of flour, one yeast cake, one tablespoon sugar (level).

Scald milk; while hot add sugar, salt and lard; when lukewarm add yeast and stir in two and one-half cups of flour sifted three times; knead until very fine; let rise two hours, then place on board and roll out to one inch thick; cut out with biscuit, spread with butter or lard; fold once; let rise two hours longer, then bake. You start them at 8 in the morning and you can serve them at a 12 o'clock dinner.

GUESS WHO?

CANNING AND PRESERVING BLACKBERRIES

Dear Sisters: These recipes for canning and preserving blackberries are just in season:

Canning: Do not blanch; use 30 per cent syrup boiling hot (3 1-2 pounds sugar to 4 quarts of water); process 20 minutes at 212 degrees.

Jam: Three-fourths as much sugar as berries; cook to start juices, mashing (10 to 15 minutes). Stand over night. Simmer until thick. Juice of one lemon for each pound of fruit is delicious.

Spiced Berries: To five pounds berries add one pint vinegar, three pounds brown sugar (be sure and use brown) and spice bag (one tablespoon cloves, two sticks cinnamon, eight allspice, one-half nutmeg), cook until thick.

To make a spice bag, take a round of cheesecloth 12 inches in diameter, large enough for swelling; tie with a strong string, also a long string to allow it to be withdrawn at any moment; use stick cinnamon, whole cloves and allspice, bayleaf, ginger-root, whole pepper, mustard seed, also celery. Use brown sugar for sweetening.

Conserve: Blackberries eight pounds; mash, let stand two hours; two oranges, pulp and rind; sugar four pounds; raisins one pound; simmer until thick

Blackberry Jelly: You will have to combine half the quantity of currant or grape juice, preparing all juices without adding water. Use sugar equal to combined juices.

Cordial (this is non-alcoholic): Mash berries without heating, strain off juice and let pulp drip through the jelly bag. To each pint of juice add one cup brown sugar, one-half teaspoon cinnamon, one-fourth teaspoon each of cloves and nutmeg and a few grains allspice. Simmer 20 minutes, then add three teaspoons of grape juice.

IMOGENE

SILENT PARTNER HAS MORE QUESTIONS.

Dear Social Corner Friends: I thought I would write and tell you what success I had mending my vacuum cleaner bag. The court plaster stayed on a short time, but it couldn't stand the pressure. The man of the house thought he could improve on my experiment so he took the clamp off the bottom of the bag, and cut off a strip where the bag had given way, put the clamp on again, and the bag is as good as ever, so I am still saving that three dollars.

Master Terrance Kelsey: Thank you for the information about the red schoolhouses. I have since heard of some more.

Do any of the sisters know an old song, The Poor Old Tramp? I learned it years ago and have forgotten some of the words. It begins,
Begging a morsel of bread,
I'm footsore, and weary and ill.

I think it was printed in some magazine.

I would also like to find out who wrote the poem, Ellen Adair. I thought I had it in some of my books of poetry but failed to find it. Now you can see that I consider the Social Corner a good information bureau, but I won't tax your patience any more now. My sympathy to the sick, this weather must be very trying to them.

SILENT PARTNER. (Dec. 25.)

WEE WIFIE'S VACATION.

Dear Editor and Social Corner Sisters: I have been away for a vacation and thought I would write and tell you about my trip.

I left home on a Wednesday and went to Charlton, Mass. I stayed there with my sister-in-law one night. Thursday I went to Worcester and spent the rest of the day and night with my cousin. Then Friday afternoon I went to my sister's in Winchester. On Saturday afternoon we went out riding to see how many houses have gone up around there since I lived there. On Monday morning my sister and I got up early and rode in to Boston with my nephew. We did some shopping and I enjoyed looking through the stores. Tuesday I spent with friends in Woburn.

On Wednesday I took the train from Boston to Rockport and the bus to Pigeon Cove where my other sister was staying at the Woodford house. We went in bathing. As I had never been there before we went around Cape Ann and Gloucester. She took me to see a house that had been made from paper. The furniture was also made entirely from newspapers. The owner told us it had taken him seven years to complete it. It was wonderful.

Next we looked at the "witch house." It is so called because a woman of Salem, believed to be a witch and about to be burned, was taken there by her son and placed in hiding. A man in Boston named Oliver Williams owns it now and it is furnished with antiques.

There is a spouting rock on the beach that throws the water up like a fountain when the tide is coming in.

Another house we went to see was the Gott house, the oldest house in the place. It has been in the same family for over 200 years.

I came back to Winchester on Friday. On Saturday afternoon we went to Woburn and at 7.30 p. m. we started for Maine. We ran into a thunder storm before we got to Portsmouth, N. H. It was a regular downpour and forced us to stop for half an hour. We did not get to Yarmouth till after one. They were looking for us and had not gone to bed. While there I went around quite a little and saw many great fields of potatoes. I would have liked to have stayed longer only I wanted to get home in two weeks from the time I left. We enjoyed the long drive along York beach on the way home.

I hope you all will have as good a time on your vacation.

WEE WIFIE.

ALWAYS BE TRUTHFUL.

Dear Social Corner Sisters: It has been a long time since I wrote to the Social Corner, but Cosmos' appeal about truth telling, prompts me to answer, as I have passed through the same valley of humiliation.

Cosmos: A person is justified in telling the truth firstly by God's commandment, and secondly by your own conscience. You know which of you is the truthful one and so does your adversary. He will pass you by with drooping eyes and averted face, when he meets you. See if I am not right. Remember the old saying, "Truth crushed to earth will rise again." It may take a long time but in the end you will win out, if you persevere in the right. Silence is golden, but if we must speak let it always be the truth, and let it not be said of you Cosmos, "One among you has betrayed me." I hope my message will be of comfort to you as there is nothing so sustaining as a clean conscience, and I write from experience. I am sure the other sisters will commend your attitude on being truthful. I once heard a professor of Yale college tell the story about a little boy who was asked to define the word "lie." His answer was this: "A lie is an abomination to the Lord, but a very present help in time of trouble." If a lie is an abomination it certainly is not justified, so sister, keep on telling the truth at any cost, and your reward will be sure to follow you for good to you some time in some way.

ISADORE.

WANTS ROUTE TO BALD HILL.

Dear Social Corner: For the last five years, the writer has been a constant reader and admirer of the Social Corner page. Every letter, no matter how short, has interesting notes and aids, and I find myself looking forward to the page every week.

Of late I have missed Butterfly and 1492, although some of the newer members write very interesting letters, but these last two I feel almost acquainted with after following their letters all this time.

I wonder if someone of the members could tell me how to get to Bald hill, up near Stafford Springs. Was there once by machine some four years ago. The road was torn up for a new road from Stafford Springs to Southbridge, and we had to detour away around country roads so lost trace of any definite route. We rode to Phoenixville and then turned left but the rest was lost, as far as I could keep track of.

Also how far north can be seen from the top of Chestnut hill in East Killingly? What a pretty ride that is down into Ballouville, following the winding river and seeing the old iron bridge tableted 1819, and mill all crumbled away. At one time East Killingly must have been quite prosperous with so many mills now crumbled away. Will not take up too much time for my first letter, so will sign myself

AMERILDA.

MOCK CHOP SUEY

Dear Social Corner Editor and Sisters: Having read the Social Corner page regular I found a lot of sisters have sent in recipes for good things to eat. I have one perhaps someone would like to try. Give it a try once anyway. I am game enough to try anything once.

Mock Chop Suey: (for a large family). 1 1-2 lbs of hamburg steak, 1 1-2 onions, 2 cups of boiled rice, 1 can of tomato sauce or tomato soup. Fry the onions slowly first, best way is to simmer; have two cups of rice boiled and then fry the hamburg but do not fry hard. Last put all together and pour in the can of tomato sauce or soup, whatever is used, mix thoroughly after seasoning with salt and pepper. This makes a nice dish of meat and is very good for sandwiches for picnics or lunches.

Cosmos: Cheer up, the worst is always yet to come. I always believe in telling the truth as you do and did do, as the truth will always come out in the end in everything. There is always someone to deny, as in your case, and make you out a liar but wait and see. Didn't I tell the truth and wasn't I called a liar? But I am only waiting. Time will tell. Keep a stiff upper lip and hold on, all will come out O. K.

INQUIRIES ANSWERED

Dear Social Corner Editor: I have been enjoying the letters on the Social Corner page for several years and have received many helps from them. I have often thought that I would write and tell the sisters how much their letters were appreciated by an outsider and ask to join the Corner.

To the sister who inquired for a "little red schoolhouse" would say there is one in the north end of the town of Lisbon, made of red brick and known as "Brick School." It is an old school but still used, although now will probably be closed as the town has a nice new central school.

I know several Corner sisters, in fact some are neighbors of mine, but doubt if anyone could guess who I am. If I may join your Corner will sign myself as

REMOVING PAINT FROM COTTON GOODS

Dear Editor and Social Corner Sisters: To remove paint from cotton goods do not put article in water until you have rubbed the paint with cord thoroughly and then a little kerosene. Add a little dust of Dutch Cleanser now and then, and when the paint is removed wash the article in cold water and soap, and lastly hot water and soap.

DON'T RESORT TO FALSEHOODS

Dear Social Corner Friends: Last Saturday when I read the letter by Cosmos about truth telling and falsehood and asking for opinions on the subject, I thought at once of Aunt Mary, that beloved sister who dispensed such good counsel in the early years of the Corner. Were she still here with us I am confident she would write words of wisdom in reply to this letter. I like Cosmos, was brought up to tell the truth and I have no idea of going back on my mother's early teaching along that line, but as we get out on life's highway and mingle with "many men of many minds" we find it is best to acquire a lot of tact and diplomacy for their sakes as well as our own and so it will sometimes happen that we will not always speak the truth we may know. But although I believe it is not at all times and under all circumstances advisable to speak the truth, I do not advocate substituting falsehood for truth in a great many cases neither the truth nor a falsehood need be told.

If my neighbor, Mrs. Blank, should ask me how much money I received from the sale of a house, for example, I should feel that she had overstepped the proper bound in asking and I have no idea I should tell her that personal matter. But if, I had realized $2000 on the sale I shouldn't say I had received $5000, but in a polite way I would give her to understand that I did not care to make a statement on the subject. If she took offense I should realize that her friendship was not of a sort worth having. If I call on Mrs. Jones, just home from a hard siege in the hospital, I do not tell her she looks ten years older than before but neither do I feel called upon to cushingly exclaim: "Why, you look ten years younger!" There is nearly always a sensible middle ground that makes good travelling. It often happens that telling the truth makes a lot of trouble. Telling nothing often is much wiser. I think the cases are extremely rare in which a falsehood does any lasting good and every falsehood has an unhappy way of demanding others to sustain it. When I find a friend has mispresented things to me, spoken falsely I lose faith in him so I never really trust his statements again although he may chance to make some true ones. If we established a reputation for telling falsehoods we never again should expect people to have confidence in our words so I say with all my heart do not resort to falsehoods, whatever happens but stick to truth, only use it considerately, diplomatically, tactfully, lest at times it may hurt more than it may help. Then if it may chance the result is not what you expect or what seems just to you don't brood over it until you have become unhappy and oversensitive but forget it as soon as possible. I hope others are also writing on this subject.

Susanna: Thanks for your little travelogue. I have so longed to cross the pond. Don't forget to let us in on the cost of the trip.

Mr. Weather Man seems to have no regard for people planning picnics. Let us hope he will be good natured Aug. 29 that we may gather in force on that day to enjoy the hospitality of Aunty No. 1 With best wishes for all the members and all the Corner interests,

SOUTH COVENTRY TO LEONARDSVILLE

Dear Social Corner Editor and Sisters: Please excuse my delay in not answering the sisters' letters of last May If they will forgive me after waiting so long I will answer them in this letter. There was so much work to be done before we could setttle the house, but now all is finished and we are living happy. I received through your paper a shower of letters from the Social Corner sisters, and was very much pleased to think that some of my friends took this nice way to write to me, and will try to tell you somethin' about our trip to our new home at Leonardsville, N. Y., from South Coventry, Conn., and answer each sister's letter in a few words.

Nema tells me she hears my minister-husband has a wonderful voice. Well, I am pleased you think the same as I do on this one thing. I think he demonstrated that in South Coventry last spring after we were married.

Betsey Bray, another sister, says she hopes we won't get snowbound, so we can't come back to South Coventry on a visit. Well, a new Ford usually can get through the snow pretty fair, so we won't worry about it very much. Maybe some of the sisters might worry more about us when we come that way, as we are both great eaters and require plenty of good food.

Marigold tells me she was pleased to have a chance to meet my better half. Well, I had to show him off to my old friends, and I surely did enjoy calling to see you at different times.

Honeysuckle says best wishes to us. It ought to be. We did have to wait five days for our license. You can ask him if I'm worth the while.

Mary France says it is fine a dominie has been waiting for you all these years. I could not say which one was doing the waiting.

Thanks to Gentia for her kind thoughts for us as a well wisher and sister.

Wiltwyck puts in her letter lots of love and happiness in what she has to say. Well, I appreciate that and believe it will prove to be the truth.

April Flowers tells me she is glad I married for love. I would not advise anyone, young or old, to marry unless love was the main object.

Theoda wrote and said I had given the sisters a surprise. Perhaps it was a surprise to most of them; but to myself it was nothing of the kind.

Sister Wisteria said though I had moved away I will not be forgotten. I hope not. I am intending, if God is willing, to visit South Coventry this summer.

Will try to give you an idea of our trip from South Coventry, Conn., to Leonardsville, N. Y. We started from Willimantic April 26 at 7.30 a. m. It was one of those beautiful spring mornings, the sky so clear and blue, with the sun giving such warmth. Before we had gone but a short distance we met newly tarred roads, and you all know (who have cars) that just puts a fine touch of nice looks on a new car. But as we traveled on we became accustomed to it and it passed from our mind until we put up for the night. Then we saw our car was dotted with tar and sand, but decided that was in the game of life—the bitter with the sweet. Passed through South Coventry to Hartford, then by Danbury, Brewster, N. Y., to Peekskill, over the Great Bear Mountain bridge, a most wonderful view before and while crossing the bridge. You pay at th entrance according to number of passengers and size of car (ours was 80 cents). Nothing was said about newlyweds getting over without pay. Then we went through Highland Falls, Goshen, to Middletown, N. Y. Then we turned southward, following the Delaware river through Port Jervis to Dingman's Ferry, Pa., where we stopped for the night by paying $6.50—216 miles for the first day. Friday, April 27, we left at 7.30 a. m., after a bountiful breakfast of freshly caught fish, followed the Delaware river valley to Stroudesbury, where we turned northwest, climbing up the Pocono mountains to Pocono summit; then southwest through a comparative wilderness, the greatest I have ever seen, to Effort, Pa. Here began a rain which increased in violence all the rest of the day. From Effort we went back to Bear creek, a great mountain summer resort for people of the Wyoming valley, and from Bear creek down the mountain to Wilkesbarre, Pa. Then we turned northeast following the Susquehanna river valley to Pittston, then up the valley of the Lackawanna to Scranton, Pa., the great center of the anthracite coal fields. It was my first view of this great coal business and the enormous piles of culm and waste making regular hills of it. All this valley of anthracite undermined the city of Wilkesbarre. It has eight veins of coal being worked under it. The Susquehanna river has the same workings under it for many miles. From Scranton we turned northwest through the evening darkness and fierce storm through the notch, a narrow cleft in the mountain which furnish an opening for the highway, the Lackawanna railroad and the trolley line which runs up among the hills to Montrose, as well as for a large stream. From Scranton northward we were on the famous Lackawanna trail, a splendid wide concrete road, getting its name from the fact that many miles are laid on the old roadbed of the Lackawanna railroad. The road from the Delaware valley over the Poconos to the Susquehanna river bridge into the village of Great Bend was nearly washed away by the high water; so there was a detour of about one and one-half miles to gain about one-quarter mile, and such a detour! Pitch dark, rain in torrents, mud axle deep cars ahead getting stuck every few yards. Some fear! but the new Ford never faltered or halted, except to wait for the big cars ahead to get out of their troubles. More than one hour for that short session of mud. Then on good pavement again the 15 miles to Binghamton, the Parlor City of the Empire State, were swiftly covered. Found a party of husband's relatives gathered at his daughter's to greet us, although we were very late in getting there. Heard some fine music by new relatives. This day's mileage was 215, most of it made in a fierce storm. Saturday, April 28, we found some six inches of snow had covered the city and the river valleys. In the morning we went to Endicott to call on sister-in-law. She had kept her bed since early in January (paralyzed, she died in June). After dinner we left Binghamton and drove northward over the famous Belden hill, where the slushy snow was even there about 10 inches deep. Down to the farther slope of the Susquehanna river valley, which we left at Sidney to follow the beautiful Unadilla river valley for several miles. The beauty of the scenery was marred by the constant falling of snow, which melted about as fast as it came. We reached Leonardsville, N. Y., our new home, about 5 p. m., and were royally entertained by some good friends of the church. Leonardsville, N. Y., is a nice quiet place, with two churches and a high school. Will write more some other time.

SOME GOOD IDEAS

Dear Social Corner Editor and Sisters: I seem to be endowed with a few ideas that I wish to get off my chest. As the man of the house used to say to me when I commenced writing for the papers: "If I were you, I would write it, get it out of my system, then read it and put it in the waste basket," but after I sold my stories and won first prize in several contests, he never said any more about my putting my letters in the waste basket; let the other fellow do it. So when I get imbued with new ideas I like to pass them along. Make a large bag of red netting and fill it with pine cones (large ones). The bag is simply made by bringing the four corners up and tying them with a bright green ribbon. Then place the bag in an open grate—sending out cheer and a wonderful fragrance.

When ironing a shirt, place the button side on a long folded Turkish towel. The buttons will sink into the towel and the spaces between will be ironed perfectly smooth.

To dry clean soiled shades: This has been such a help to me. Spread in full length on the kitchen table or floor and rub thoroughly all over with dry salt and corn meal, renewing the mixture when it has become soiled. Then dust well with a soft duster. The shade need not be removed from the roller, and this method does not pull it out of shape or cause it to crack.

When frying eggs, if you sprinkle a little flour in the grease they will not pop. The flour prevents them from popping.

If you wish to hematitch before you attempt to remove the threads wet a small brush, rub it over a bar of soap until a lather is produced, and scrub the threads of the linen you wish to draw. You will find the threads will pull out easily.

In creaming butter and sugar for cake or hard sauce, use a wooden potato masher.

Pour hot water in the mixing bowls before putting the ingredients in, then pour it off, and it will warm your bowl. They will become a light, creamy mass with half the usual labor

A TRIP TO KOCHIA'S

Dear Editor and Friends: We had a fine day for our trip. We left home early and went to Danielson. The woods, fields and flower gardens were beautiful. The fields made me think of how they flourished 90 years ago with wheat, barley, rye, buckwheat, corn and potatoes. Then everything was done by hand such as the sowing, reaping and threshing and the grain was taken by ox team to Providence. Think what a change there is today with machinery and autos.

We went on through Central Village, which has not changed very much since I was a girl, though they have built some pretty little homes there. We went on to historic Plainfield and called on a cousin at the old Lafayette inn and later took notice of the new bridge at Bishop's crossing. Soon we took the country road south and came out at the Northrup four corners and went on to Glasgo. That is certainly changed since I lived near there. Then there was a little paper mill, but now there is a large pretty brick mill. Then we went to one of the oldest cemeteries in Connecticut, the old six town cemetery in which there are stones bearing the date 1713. There was one where we could not read the lettering but running my fingers over the surface I found the date 1673.

After lunch we started for home, turning to the right at the four corners and got a fine view of the Aspinook. Soon we reached the dear old town where I passed many pleasant childhood days and then we reached Kochia's home where he and his mother gave us a royal reception. I saw a number of friends and spent oen of the pleasantest days in a long time. We returned home without incident except one blowout.

Kochia: Tell your ma to send in the recipe for those cupcakes. Your chowder was also fine.

Rural Aunty: I was so sorry I could not be at the picnic.

If anyone knows the song, "One Balmy Day in May" will you please send it in.

American suspenders are good in any climate, it seems. The two principal importers in April were Labrador and Jamaica. Canada took the most American garters and arm bands, while Argentina and Cuba came next.

TELLING THE TRUTH

Dear Social Corner Members: As I joined the Corner over a year ago and have never written in except to join, I feel that I must try and do my bit for the Corner page as the others do. When I saw Silver Locks' request for the poem with the disciples' names I thought it quite a coincidence as I had learned it in school but had not thought of it in years until the night before I saw her request for it. I was amusing myself with a pencil and paper and this poetry came into my mind so I scribbled it down and was surprised to see it requested in the next morning's paper.

I wonder how many of the club members were up at Storrs on Tuesday, July 31st. I saw B Natural, Sumac and Mila and a few others whose pen names I do not know. I wondered if Kitty Lou was there, as she wrote us last week in her Corner letter some of the things about meat that we were told in the meat cutting class. My niece and myself drove up, arriving at about 11 o'clock in the morning. We attended the classes on rayon and meat cutting and heard a very interesting talk by Dr. Locke on infection and disease. We did not stay for the organ recital, and I guess it was just as well that we started when we did, because we had a blowout on the way home, and as there was no garage handy we changed the tire ourselves. When we were through we were rather the "worse for wear." A lady who lived near very kindly let us wash up at her well and provided us with soap and towel, for which we were most grateful. Tire changing is one of the inconveniences of driving, as you never can tell when you will pick up nails or glass, but I don't mind it if I don't have my "Sunday go to meeting clothes" on.

Cosmos raises the question of truth telling and says that "telling the truth lots of times makes trouble." I agree with her there. I have seen much trouble made and much unhappiness caused by this. I certainly believe in telling the truth, but if a white lie will make hearts a little lighter, don't some of you members think it is justified? I know I'll hear lots of "Noes," but I will try and give you the outlines of a story I recently read to illustrate what I mean.

This story was supposed to be absolutely true and was of a middle-aged lady who was a welfare worker in a big city. In her work she came in contact with a young girl who had come from the country, of good parents but had gone down the primrose path instead of the straight and narrow. When the welfare worker found her she had lost her beauty and health and was dying of tuberculosis. She had not repented, and the only favor she asked was that her mother be notified after she had gone. The worker stayed with her until the end, then, keeping her promise, she wrote to the parents.

In a short time she received a letter begging her to come to the little country town where the parents lived and tell them of their daughter's last days. The worker decided to go and, as she had never knowingly told a lie in her life, she was very much upset thinking of what she must tell the mother, who she knew believed her daughter to be a fine Christian girl. When she got there and met the sweet old lady and the crippled father of the girl she found that she could not tell them the truth and darken their lives. The mother asked if her girl had kept her faith in God that she had taught her, and the lady who thought she could not lie told her Yes. She left them happy and returned to the city and was surprised that her conscience did not bother her for that lie.

In cases like this, isn't a lie better than the truth? Of course, Cosmos' case was not like this, I imagine, from the way she writes, and she must have been dreadfully hurt to have her word doubted by one she had never told anything but the truth to. I hope things will straighten themselves out for her.

FROM ONE EXTREME TO ANOTHER

Dear Social Corner Members and Editor: Aug. 5th, with the thermometer registering 94 in the shade, I do not think my letter will be a long one this time. I had company today and we had lunch out on the lawn under the rock maple tree and later ice cream was served by one of the party. O, how hot it was! The next move was to hustle into the house, for a thunder shower was coming and the rain helped us to hurry up or get wet. After awhile four of the party left for Danielson and the other five went home later to Willimantic in their new Whippet car.

Now comes Monday—34 degrees cooler this a. m., and a fire in the house. Some change!

In looking over my garden I find the woodchucks have helped themselves to beans, carrots and lettuce in spite of a three-foot wire, and other gardens are being destroyed by 'chucks and skunks. Garden work is a pleasure, but very discouraging sometimes.

Now comes Tuesday—dark and rainy and no sun; but
What is the use of complaining,
For where there's a will there's a
way;
Tomorrow the sun may be shining,
Alto' it is gloomy today.
With all good wishes for the Corner and everybody.

SUMAC'S TRIPS

Dear Sisters and Editor: So many of the sisters are writing about the long rides they have taken that I think I will write about my good fortune in having some kind friends. A week ago last Sunday Pyrethrum's daughter took the children and myself and her mother and sister for a long ride through Ashaway and Hope Valley. Then leaving the concrete road we went through Wickford Junction and out on Tower Hill, where we turned off onto the old road and ate our lunch. We went from there to Point Judith and around through Narragansett Pier and Wakefield, back home, nearly 100 miles and nearly all on roads I had never been on before.

The next Tuesday Milky Way and her husband took Mr. Sumac and me to Storrs for the day. It was another long ride over roads that I had never been over and the demonstrations were very interesting. While the men were going through the barns and machinery building, Milky Way and I attended a demonstration showing the different stages of making rayon and how the threads were spun. We then met our better halves at the dining hall and had lunch. The men then went to see a mowing demonstration while we went to Holcomb hall, where we saw a side of beef cut into steaks and roasts and were shown the difference between sirloin, porterhouse and T-bone steak; although he didn't show us a belt-line steak. We then went in to see Miss Stratton's model kitchen, which is electrically equipped, and had a tendency to make us rather envious. We saw several Social Corner Sisters there, too. From there went to Gulley hall and heard a very good lecture on Contagion and How to Control It, by Dr. Locke. On our way home we stopped and had a lunch and the boys were waiting for us with the chores all finished when we arrived. Altogether it was a very pleasant day.

On the next Saturday, Mr. and Mrs. Milky Way took us again on a trip to the farm bureau field day in Waterford. Two of the boys went with us this time. There was bathing for those who cared for it. A clam chowder dinner was served in a tent and then Mr. Manchester gave a short talk which was very interesting. There were sports for men and women, boys and girls, but we had to leave before the cups were awarded. We saw Soma and Winter Robin and their friend whose pen name I don't know. Cosmos was there, too, and I hope nothing happened to her car that time. And say, Cosmos, I had a call from your sister-in-law and her son. They came on one bus and went on the next.

Well, the next day another friend took us to Sandy Point in a boat where we went bathing and had our lunch. It is a very nice place for the children to go in as the water is shallow for a long way out. I don't go anywhere very often, but when I do!

Olga: I saw where you lived. Did the daughter go to Storrs?

Ivan: Congratulations.

Tatting: I'm glad for you that it is over. Hope you will be feeling better soon.

Good luck, everybody.

INVITED TO EAST KILLINGLY.

Dear Social Corner Sisters and Editor: I am still on the mail. Have been busy working as the mill has been running for a few weeks but have thought of the Social Corner sisters a good many times and hope they are all well and enjoying the nice hot weather we have been having. Believe me it has been some hot. We have been enjoying the cool rides and the nice swimming at old Killingly pond as the water is always cool and we were certainly glad to get in bathing after the hot days.

Rosy Posy: Glad you are feeling better and hope you will still continue to gain and enjoy some more picnics with us.

Holly Hock: Have you got over your vacation at the beach? Hope you are rested by now.

How I would like to invite the Social Corner sisters to spend the day at East Killingly at the Jolly Social club room. I am a member and there are quite a few members of the Corner who belong. We would be glad to have them meet with us at any date which would be convenient to them. We have a big table and a stove to use and dishes if anyone forgets theirs. Just let us know when they could meet and some of us will be there to arrange things and help all we can to have a pleasant day. Hope all the sisters will come that can as we always have a good dinner and a good time after. Hope to hear from some one in regard to it as soon as convenient. Best wishes to all.

GREETINGS FROM ARBUTUS

Dear Editor and Social Corner Members: What funny weather we are having. The sun seems to be trying hard to come out today but doesn't succeed very well. What a short summer we have had this year. The canning season is here once more but I do not expect to do very much. I have not been feeling very well for the past four months, but am much better now.

Silver Locks: Was disappointed not to find you home the day I called, but I had a nice time with Yellow Daisy. I am glad you are having such a nice visit.

Yellow Daisy: I enjoyed my visit with you very much.

Sister Ready: I felt sorry when I read your letter that I did not send my card in.

Rose of New England: Glad to see you this week. What is the matter with your pen, or would you like me to send you down some ink?

Am sending in a very good sponge cake recipe. It is very easy to make and also very cheap. To make it extra fine beat it well together.

Sponge Cake: One cup sugar and two eggs well beaten together. One teaspoon baking powder sifted with one cup of flour; stir well together. Then stir in one-third cup of boiling water. Bake quickly in a medium hot oven. Salt and flavoring may be added to taste.

MARKING HANDKERCHIEFS

Dear Social Corner Editor and Sisters: All handkerchiefs ought to be marked, but most are not; because of the three usual methods of marking garments each has some drawback. Indelible ink is ugly, and by no means indelible. Woven letters sewed on are a little heavy for handkerchiefs, and embroidered initials, which require to be stamped, are too tedious and troublesome to be made in any number; yet, marking with needlework is the prettiest and most permanent way, and there is no reason why one's entire supply of handkerchiefs should not be embroidered with one's name, in one's own script. The method is simple, in that it requires no stamping, and no knowledge of elaborate embroidery, and takes very little time.

Stretch the corner of the handkerchief on a smooth board, pulling it even and smooth, and hold it tight with pins. Write the name legibly with a pencil, then unpin the handkerchief and run a thread of fine embroidery cotton along the pencil line, following it exactly and making fine stitches. Do not have the thread either tight or loose, and cut off both ends even with the goods. Then begin again, and follow the line with tiny over and over stitches, close together, taking up as little of the linen as possible with each stitch. The run-in thread gives a firm foundation and the work is so rapid and easy that one can soon mark all one's handkerchiefs. Use fine mercerized cotton, either white or of a tint to match the border of the handkerchief, if that is colored.

CARING FOR THE HAIR

Dear Members of the Corner: How easy it is to put off writing, especially this hot weather. I promised only just a few weeks ago that I would write each week to the Corner. It is two weeks now that I have neglected to keep that promise. I am ashamed. A promise should always be kept, even if one makes it to one's self.

Here are a few hints on taking care of the hair. Some day women will be as wise about their hair as they are about their teeth and use preventive measures to combat the evil effects of too much civilization.

After such illness as influenza or fever, after operations or confinements, and after periods of overwork or nervous strain, the scalp is debilitated, tired, "out-of-sorts," the hair falls, though possibly this may not be apparent for some time after the crisis. Also at the change of the seasons, when the whole physical organism, though apparently normal, is more or less disturbed, the ill-effects may be seen in the hair and scalp. This condition calls for great care. You should get a good hair and scalp specialist and let him or her care for your scalp at least once a month. Do not go to every Tom, Dick or Harry. Get a person that knows his or her business.

From the standpoint of physical beauty, civilization is a great curse. Present-day life is full of dust, dirt, grime and grit. A daily ritual of

IN NORWICH FIFTY YEARS AGO

Among the interesting items taken from the files of The Norwich Morning Bulletin 50 years ago was the drowning of a 5 year old Norwich boy in the Shetucket river. The boy fell into the river from the new iron bridge which he was crossing to Laurel Hill. Two companions with him reached the other side in safety.

Monday, Aug. 5, 1878—A very entertaining Sunday school concert was given by the children of the Central M. E. church last evening. Rev. Mellen Howard, formerly pastor of the church, delivered a short and telling address.

Rev. E. G. Selden of Manchester, N. H., conducted the services in the Park church yesterday. In the evening he delivered an eloquent and forceful sermon on the durability of the Bible and its adaptability to all ages and peoples.

Mr. and Mrs. Ebenezer Learned, Hon. L. F. S. Foster, Mrs. Thomas Hubbard and daughters, Miss Fannie Johnson and other Norwich people are in Saratoga just now.

James Hall, a little 5 year old stepson of Charles W. Willey of this city, was drowned in the Shetucket river at about quarter past 3 o'clock on Saturday afternoon. He went out early in the afternoon to play along the river bank with two sons of Mr. John Steiner. After a while the lads decided to cross the river to Laurel Hill and started over the new iron bridge. The other boys safely reached the further side and as they turned to watch their companion they saw him suddenly toss up his arms and plunge downward through the timbers into the water. A boat manned by bankmen failed in their attempt to rescue the boy, who floated on the surface for several minutes and then sank out of sight. His body was not recovered.

Tuesday, Aug. 6, 1878—The election of delegates at Uncas hall on Saturday evening resulted in the choice of P. J. O'Connor, Thomas E. Ryan, C. J. Winters and A. L. Whiteside. Alternates are R. H. Arnold, E. J. Starr, F. E. Henderson and J. T. Senay.

The Central M. E. Sunday school with their friends to the number of 170 went to Fenwick Grove yesterday on the barge Bela Peck. The trip was thoroughly enjoyed, a result that was due in great measure to Messrs. M. P. Lewis and John Troland.

On Thursday it is expected that the Atlantic Yacht club will race through the sound. The Universalist society have arranged an excursion to Shelter Island and Greenport, and at the same time have planned to have their patrons witness a portion of the race.

One hundred and twelve cars came down on the second express on the Norwich and Worcester road on Saturday evening en route to New York. The freight was so large on the same night that the steamer City of New York was obliged to lie out in the stream, that the Boston might be loaded.

Wednesday, Aug. 7, 1878—The body of little "Jimmy Hall," who was drowned in the Shetucket river on Saturday afternoon, was found lodged off the pier at thelower rolling mill by Thomas Shay yesterday morning.

A new baseball club that is expected to whitewash any nine in the country is forming here and is to be named the Chelsea. It is to contest the field, with the Willimantics soon and afterwards will descend on the Westborough club. Mr. Hutchison of the Yale university nine is one of the members.

The water in the reservoir was 44 inches below high water mark on Aug. 2nd. Last year on the same day it was 72 inches below that point.

A Voluntown mule team was just three hours in getting from Water street to the Preston bridge the other day. We have always held that a mule's head was located in a wrong part of the mule.

The Society of the Fourteenth Connecticut, the oldest military organization of the state, holds its annual reunion at Bridgeport on the 17th of November, the anniversary of the battle of Antietam.

Thursday, Aug. 8, 1878—Lieut. W. S. Baldwin of the United States revenue marine service, who is stationed at New Orleans, has been given a month's furlough, which he is spending in Norwich.

The Young Pequots of this city took the baseball scalps of the "Cedar Streets" of Jail Hill yesterday. The score stood 21 to 3.

The Sunday school connected with the East Main street M. E. church go to Fisher's Island next Tuesday on the barge Bela Peck.

At the August regatta of the Eastern Rowing association it is announced that a dark horse from Norwich, Conn., will enter.

Stephen Roath, Esq., formerly conductor on the Norwich and Worcester railroad, is making a visit to his relatives and friends in Norwich.

Friday, Aug. 9, 1878—Willard Bliss was thrown from his wagon yesterday, striking on his face and receiving severe bruises and scratches. A collision with an ice cart was the cause of the accident.

The excursion on the City of Lawrence yesterday under the auspices of the Universalist Sunday school of Norwich was one of the most enjoyable affairs of its kind during the season.

Charles H. Bushnell, James M. Fillmore and Charles O. Spicer, all belonging in Norwich, are going as second class boys on board the United States steamship Minnesota, Capt. S. B. Luce, commander. The enlistment papers were made out by Hon. John T. Wait.

Saturday, Aug. 10, 1878—William Meldron, chief of the police, and Dr. H. W. Dedicke, chairman of the fire committee of Newark, N. J., were in town Thursday and inspected the courthouse and fire department. They were enthusiastic in their praise of each

The Odd Fellows of this city will formally dedicate their new lodge rooms on Thursday, the 15th inst.

The chief engineer has fixed on Saturday, the 5th of October, as the day for the fall parade of the fire department.

J. McFadden, the builder of the new railroad bridge over the Shetucket river, is expected here next Monday and will begin the work of repairing the bridge.

SOCIAL CORNER

baths, creams and lotions has been evolved to combat it, but most of the thorough work stops at the hair line. Because it does not seem easy to get dirt out of the hair, many do not really try. Daily brushing with an antiseptically clean brush having long, flexible bristles is a necessity. Try it tonight and after about five strokes rub your brush on an old soft towel and observe the dirt.

How to brush: Grasp the brush firmly near the back. Use an upward movement which loosens the scalp and stimulates the circulation. The right brush will polish and cleanse the hair without breaking or pulling. It is very important to use a brush with the proper bristles, for broken bristles injure the scalp and tear the hair.

How to shampoo: Have in readiness plenty of towels; old lintless linen ones are the best, and of course plenty of soft water. Water from the hot faucet will usually serve, but in districts where the water is hard, that is, containing an undue amount of mineral matter, it is necessary to boil it before using. If this is not possible, at least boil the rinsing water. Adding borax or other "softeners" is not good for the hair. After spraying out as much oil and dirt as possible, work up a lather with a good shampoo, using both hands systematically over the whole of your scalp until the head is piled thick with foamy, creamy lather. Rinse and repeat the soaping. Then rinse again and again in fresh water, using cooler each time, but not really cold, as you must avoid chilling the scalp. For this it is very convenient to have a spray, but it is not absolutely essential. When the rinsing water is absolutely clean, dry the hair by hand. If possible avoid artificial heat and dry in sunshine when you can.

The hair and scalp should be in a normal, healthy condition to take a soft, pretty wave. After the wave is obtained, it is necessary to keep the hair properly lubricated in order to prevent breakage. Avoid water as much as possible.

When the hair falls out in patches is often due to lowered vitality or sub-normal conditions after illness.

Each hair has its root in the scalp and is fed by the glands. A healthy, clean, well-nourished scalp is necessary to produce strong, beautiful hair. Ask your scalp specialist if your scalp needs a tonic; if so, have him prescribe for you.

Kingston Brown: I am glad you found out what it was that did that snapping.

Kitty Lou: A few weeks ago you wrote and told how some of your rooms were arranged. I would like to see your house; it must be very nice.

HOW TO USE SOUR CREAM

Dear Social Corner: I have thought of so many of you having a nice time at North Windham today; would like to have been with you, but had to be somewhere else.

Bay State: I never seem to be able to get to your picnics, either. Maybe my luck will change some day.

Mila: You are a real sport.

Ina: Hope you are getting along fine. Try and go to Club No. 6's picnic at Atlantic Beach the 21st of August. We had a six weeks' old baby at the Sunday school picnic last week.

Slow and Zerviah: So sorry for you in your time of sorrow.

Tatting: I am glad to hear that you are doing so nicely after the operation.

Beers: Am anxious to hear about your trip.

Black-eyed Susie and Annette: Were you at Giant's Neck last Saturday? We were too busy.

Round Robin: Think you and I have many thoughts alike as to clean clothes. I was taught to be clean from the inside out, not to cover a dirty body and soiled underwear with pretty clothes. Many things I wore were patched but clean, and oh how much more comfortable one feels. I have always wished I could live where at the end of the lawn or yard there was a brook with a willow tree beside it, but it's probably a dream that will never come true.

I wonder if this will help someone who does not know how to use sour cream? I can make good drop cakes but never a good loaf cake, but last week I tried again and the experiment came out fine. Beat one egg, add 3-4 cup sugar, a little salt, 1-4 cup molasses, beat well, then add alternately 2 1-2 cups of flour and 1-2 teaspoon of soda and 2 teaspoons of baking powder that have been sifted together, and 1-2 cup each sour cream and milk; one cup raisins cut fine and one teaspoon of mixed spices. Bake in moderate oven about 3-4 of an hour. Hope if anyone tries it they will have as good success as I did. The cream I used was very heavy.

MAKING CORN HUSK DOLLS

Dear Sisters: Years ago an Indian girl would not have had a doll if it hadn't been for corn husks. This is the way she did it.

Select six large, perfect husks. Gather the base of the leaves together between the palm and fingers of one hand and rub down the length of the leaves with the other, as one would smooth down a skein of silk, with a knife, or a pair of scissors trim down the woody part of the husks. Then crumple a leaf by drawing it through the palm of the hand, and wind it tightly around the base of the husks, as one would wind a ribbon on a spool. On top of this bind a second leaf. When this is done, it looks not unlike the turbans that the Turks wear. This forms the foundation for the head of your doll.

Select a particularly soft leaf, one that is pliable for the head of the doll and fold this over the head from back to front, like a long scarf. Gather the ends of it in with the six original husks, from which the body of the doll is to be made. Later over it place a second leaf in the same manner. These hold the turban-like foundation firmly in place.

The next step is to make a smooth outer covering for the head. Choose two smooth leaves, very soft, and place them on top of the other. Tie a piece of twine around them so that it shire them tightly in the middle. Now bend the two halves containing the base down over the tips so the four sections hang like a tassel concealing the twine that ties them. Place the point that is tied at the top of the doll's head, rub the leaves down smooth, and even around it on all sides and tie a piece of twine around the neck.

Next take two leaves and crush them together by drawing them lengthwise through the hands. Trim off the ends so that about 8 1-2 inches remains. This is to be the arms of your doll. Beginning two inches back from each end which is to be an arm or hand, wind a piece of cord around and tie in a hard knot. Then, lace the two ends of the twine back and forth around the arm towards the wrist, where it is again wound around in a ring and firmly fastened.

Lift apart the sheath of husks of which the body of the doll is to be made and slip this strip in place, so that the ends form arms. To hold in position take corn husks, place the base of the leaf at the waist line, fold it over the shoulder diagonally from right to left and wind the tip of the leaf around and around the body at the waist. A second leaf is similarly placed, except that it is crossed over the other shoulder. Repeat this, using four leaves in all, two for each shoulder and fasten them in place by tying a cord around the waist.

With a pair of scissors divide the length of husks into two equal parts, out of which to make the legs. Starting 3 inches from the foot, wind a piece of cord around each leg and tie it in a hard knot. Then as in making the arms, lace the two ends of the cord back and forth around the leg towards the foot, where it is fastened. This makes a soft pliable sheath of husks which you can bend at the ankle to form a foot.

Such are the corn-husks dolls which the Indians loved and mothered, tucked them into small cradles and tied them to a swaying branch of some tree, just as they themselves had been rocked, singing soft lullabies.

BEERS' 460 MILE AUTO TRIP

Dear Social Corner Editor and Sisters: The cool weather is nice after the heat of last week. Tuesday noon July 31 husband came home with an address, asking me where in New Hampshire it was. He was told it was 110 miles from here. Wednesday at 7 a. m. we were on our way for East Jaffrey, N. H. It was nice and sunshiny. We went by the way of Norwich, Willimantic, Stafford Springs and Palmer. After leaving Palmer we stopped to eat our lunch and rest. At Ware it began to rain and rained very hard by spells. At Winchendon we had a very abrupt curve. It was worse than the hairpin curve on the Mohawk trail. After going around the curve we were at the railroad station. On the green was a large wooden horse that Cousin B talked about. We arrived at East Jaffrey at 5 p. m. with the sun shining and we had driven 175 miles, Cousin B said when we left Norwich that it was a straight line from there to East Jaffrey. I told him when we arrived at Hillcrest lodge the military highway had nothing on that route. It is a wonderful place to go for a good rest, nice and quiet and very reasonable rates. We stayed over night and I left at 9 a. m. Thursday we went to Keene, then across to Brattleboro, stopping at a small place, Dublin, to send cards. On beyond this place we stopped for lunch. After we had gone about two miles the road began to go up and up. Finally we reached the top of Hogback mountain, 2200 feet above sea level. If it had not been for the haze we could have seen five states, New York, New Hampshire, Massachusetts, Connecticut, Vermont. From Searburg to Bennington we were in the flood district and all down hill. The rivers along this route were very pretty, sometimes wide, then again very narrow. Part of the time they looked as though they flowed upstream. From Bennington we went on through Williamstown to Pittsfield. Here we stayed our second night. Just before entering the city we stopped at Lake Pontoosuc, it being the recreation and bathing beach of Pittsfield. Leaving the city Friday at 8 a. m. we had mountain fog till we reached Canaan. Then we went to Winsted and over Avon mountain to Hartford and on to Middletown, stopping in Wethersfield to see friends I had not seen in years. From Middletown we went to Colchester to New London arriving home Friday at 5.30 p. m., having driven 460 miles. Our speed was 15 to 20 miles an hour. We were out for pleasure and sightseeing and not to see how fast it could be done. Had good roads with only two detours about a mile each. Saw two accidents. The roads in Vermont were dirt roads, smooth and level. We saw road men working on all the routes between Brattleboro and the Molly Stark trail. She was the woman who manned the gun in the battle of Bennington. We had a delightful trip although not an expensive one. Chery was on her usual good behavior. Spent $5.50 for gas and oil. The price of gas ranging from 22 to 27c a gallon.

Very sorry to hear that Tatting is in the hospital. Hope for her speedy recovery.

BEERS (Club No. 6)

Mr. Editor and Social Corner Readers: Some few weeks ago I left the trail to tell you "Why the name of Eagleville" also of a "Fourth of July flag raising that didn't take place." I will now take you further along the trail, commencing where the Appoquaug river joins the Shetucket.

Up the Appoquaug over the trail we go, leaving the Shetucket. We follow the trail through the meadow, where today runs the railroad over the bridge. Just above the bridge and railroad was once a paper mill, burned down years ago, but further along we come to a paper mill, once that of Oberno. Here the Nipmuck passed through the woodlands along the river. Where through wood and bramble the Indians followed along at will years ago; today we find the quiet village of Hanover, the home of Park, proprietor of the Airlie mill.

From here "Johnny cake" has described the trail to Ford Ned, which was interestingly written as all readers said. She followed the highway in sight of the trail, describing the homes and people of days gone by. I will follow through the meadow near the river, where she couldn't go, and tell you of places and things, perhaps, of which she didn't know. First is a fishing pool; today known as Pratt's gulf. The next is "sikiag," where Deacon David Allen pastured his sheep. Now we reach Smithville. Yes and there stands Uncle Eleazer in the mill door, where I have often seen him. He owns the grist and saw mill. Then there was the old cider mill. Over the bridge, up the hill there's the old log watering trough filled by a spring where many a tired horse has rested and drank.

Taking up the trail again, we follow along near the river, where the Nipmuck with seine made of timber twigs, bound together with sinews and withers, tougher than leather; here they found splendid fishing, catching pickerel and trout. The Nipmuck now comes to where the beaver has built a dam, that flooded many an acre, making a pond in which the Indian finds an abundance of fresh water fish. The steep hills on either side, covered with a growth of forest trees, and laurel thicket, was a lurking place for the bear, elk and deer.

Today we see here the ruins of a once prosperous village, of which much has been written — Ford Ned. From the finding of many arrowheads or points in the nearby fields, we think battles were fought between different tribes, who may have encroached upon the Nipmuck's hunting and fishing grounds, of which he was jealous, or else he hunted the various animals which were abundant in this region. Some arrows missed their mark and were lost, to be found by the white man who cleared and tilled the fields. By the old people of the 17th century, it is said as a fact, that the Nipmuck trail passed through the forest along the edge of the pond, under a steep hill, about one-eighth of a mile west of Ford Ned, where today runs the highway up a steep and winding hill, called "Cork Screw hill." On either side of the Appoquaug we find the beautiful laurel. On the east side particularly along the road from Ford Ned to the old Safford and later the Reynolds mills, we pass along near the river on the left, and on the right under the shadow of a steep hill you would find plenty of laurel in June.

On either side there is a perfect labyrinth of laurel and earlier in year it was in full bloom, the colors varying from light pink to a dark shade, nearly red. Many drive over this rough country road to feast on the beauties of the blossoms, borne on the most crooked and angular shrub in New England. Here the valley is very narrow; just a narrow fertile strip of ground on the left bank of the river. The Nipmuck found game on the hillside, and near where the cold water from the many springs flow into the river he caught the lusty trout. Not until the trail leads him nearly a half mile does he find a broad plain of several acres, and here is one of his resting places. The squaw at once takes up her part of the work of establishing this, "Alabama." She cuts or breaks down the small saplings, sets them in a circle on the ground, slanting them to a peak, and with the bark from trees or with the skins that had formed part of her burden on the trail, she covers the sticks with them and sets shelter from the elements.

In the season for planting she at once sets about the preparation of the ground for natural products that grew wild, corn, beans and squashes. Cultivation improved the quality and quantity. On these few vegetables, with wild fruit, they subsisted during the summer in connection with the products of the chase, such as venison moose, fat bears, raccoons, wild fowls and fish of all kinds in their season. In the winter they subsisted on dried corn, beans and fruit, acorns, chestnuts and ground nuts gleaned from the forest. Animal food was to be had at all seasons of the year, yet at times they had but little or nothing for several days, but when they had provisions they feasted. What greater variety of food does some of the white families have today? This spot was one of the many fertile places where they made their camp along the many miles of trial. It was like a big amphitheatre, being nearly surrounded by steep high hills, except on the east fronting the Apponaug. Do we see the Indians' table groaning under the weight of eatables, or a downy bed on which to rest? No; the earth was both their seat and table; their best bed was a mat or skin. They sat upon the ground, commonly with their elbows upon their knees. The Indian had no set meals, but, like other wild creatures, ate when hungry. Their food was poorly seasoned. Salt was only used, and that obtained by evaporating sea water. The Indian government generally was an absolute monarchy, but in all important affairs he consulted his councilors. When they had given their opinions they deferred the decision to him.

It is now the fall of the year, when the various tribes met in some sheltered spot by a brook or spring to hold council. Harvest is nearly over and this spot or amphitheatre that I have described is the selected place on the Nipmucks' domain. By his invite the tribes for many years made his their council chamber. The sachem of each tribe has his lieutenant, called the sagmor, who precedes the tribe to give notice of the coming of his tribe. Now we see the sachem appearing bedecked in a most beautiful war bonnet and shirt, made of buckskin, trimmed with beads of various colors, made from shells, stones, teeth of animals and colored eagle feathers and quills. Now the sachem approaches and they all rise up and give him a greeting of welcome. Following him comes the priest, conjuror or pow-wow. Among the North American Indians the priest or pow-wow led in the wild and tumultuous exercises preceding the council. They are dressed in skins of odorous and frightful creatures, painting themselves in the most ugly forms to disguise their features.

The whole country, men, women and children, come together upon these solemities. We now see them dancing around a large fire built in the open field. Thousands of the Connecticut and Massachusetts warriors, with the squaws and children, join in the loud shouting, making the most hideous noises, using rattles made of shells which they shake in a wild and violent manner. They continue these tumultuous exercises for hours. The pow-wow over, by some certain sign the leaders of the various tribes enter into council. Here by the spring the council gathered. Tribes of the various nations are here in council and after song and strong invocation smoke the peace pipe calumet. They smoked no cigars or cigarettes in those days, but the pure tobacco that they raised. The Nipmuck squaws, unlike our white squaws or flappers of today, had for themselves too great a regard to smoke that which by its smell would drive a dog from a tanyard.

During the council or convention the squaws and children of the Nipmuck are busy gathering and roasting green corn, on which the head ones are to be feasted, with the addition of bear meat. The sachems, the sagmor and the priest, conjuror or pow-wow are invited guests. The bar quet is simple, consisting of roasted green corn, and two young fat bears roasted, the fat of which with salt is the seasoning for the corn.

The banquet is now ready. We see them seated in a large circle while the pow-wow inside performs some weird incantations, a dance, after which the corn and bear meat are passed around by the squaws.

The visiting warriors, squaws and children are not considered guests, so they eat such food as they brought with them.

As there was no prohibition law to break in those days, they drank the pure spring water. After the feast and a few more performances by the pow-wow, they depart for their various rendezvous.

Before separating, the Nipmuck tribe is invited to a banquet by one of the Connecticut tribes.

MERGER OF CONSOLIDATED AND BROOKLYN GAS CO.

NEW YORK, Aug. 10—(AP)—If the supple musician's fingers of George H. Cortelyou had not been so quick to learn the pothooks and shaded symbols of the shorthand writer's trade, he would probably now be bowing to concert audiences from a stage instead of heading one of the greatest gas and electric light combinations in the world.

By action of the public service commission in approving the merger of the Consolidated Gas Co. and the Brooklyn Edison Co. (over-riding Governor Smith's request that the hearing on the merger be re-opened), a billion-dollar corporation is formed which controls almost all the gas and electric light facilities in New York.

Cortelyou has been president of the Consolidated Gas for 20 years and will now head the corporation formed by merger of that company with the Edison company, in which he was already a director.

MARKING UP OF CALL MONEY RATE UNSETTLED THE MARKET YESTERDAY

NEW YORK, Aug. 10—(AP)—Trading in today's stock market was unsettled by the marking up of the call money rate to 8 per cent, an increase in bankers' acceptances bids of 6 1-2 per cent for time money and a break of more than 4 cents a bushel in wheat futures. With a few conspicuous exceptions, final quotations were generally lower, with numerous declines of 2 to 4 points.

Chrysler was the outstanding feature, soaring 9 3-4 points to a new high record at 94 3-4 on a total turnover of nearly half a million shares, or approximately one-fourth of the day's entire volume of business. Dodge Brothers issues, which are now convertible into Chrysler stock, recorded corresponding gains, the preferred jumping 10 1-8 points to 95 1-2, also a new top. Heavy buying of this issue for the account of interests previously active in General Motors was reported in Wall street, although widely circulated rumors that John J. Raskob would join the Chrysler organization after election were officially denied. General Motors ran into heavy selling, closing 1 7-8 points lower at 183 1-2 after having dipped to 181 1-4.

Call money renewed at 7 per cent, advanced to 7 1-2 and thence to 8 as banks called $25,000,000 in loans to strengthen their position at the Federal Reserve bank. This tended to dampen the bullish enthusiasm created by the retention of the 5 per cent rediscount rate by the New York Federal Reserve bank, and the relatively small increase in brokers' loans last week. Considerable mystery was created by the report that the Federal Reserve bank had "ear marked" about $3,125,000 in gold at the Bank of England. While this was characterized as a "drop in the bucket," in view of the exports of more than $500,000,000 of the yellow metal since last September, hope was held out in some quarters that it signalled the possible reversal of the gold movement.

Time money was officially quoted at a flat 6 1-4 per cent basis, although bids of 6 1-2 are reported to have been made by several brokers for time funds. Bankers' acceptance rates on 150 and 180 day bills were marked up to 5 1-4 per cent bid. This unusual mid-summer stringency of credit has aroused wide-spread criticism of Federal Reserve policy in financial publications, and brokerage circles.

A few venturesome pools followed the lead of the Chrysler sponsors in pushing their stocks to new high ground. Eaton Axle, Montgomery-Ward, Sears Roebuck, United Biscuit, Grand Stores preferred and St. Louis Southwestern were among the issues to attain new top prices for the year, or longer.

Amusement shares, which turned reactionary yesterday on an official denial of some of the rumors in circulation, received better support today. Warner Bros. A closing 3 1-4 points higher and Paramount Famous-Lasky 2. U. S. Steel common closed more than a point higher on the announcement of a drop of 66,082 tons in unfilled orders, as compared with earlier estimates of a decline of 100,000 tons.

Selling pressure was particularly effective against Allied Chemical, American Tobacco B, City Stores B, Commonwealth Power, and Union Carbide, all off 2 points or more, and the Fisk Rubber issues, which touched new low levels for the year.

Cotton rallied $1.50 to nearly $2.50 a bale on indications of a temporarily over-sold position. The decline in wheat was based on the publication of a bearish government crop report, indicating a yield of about 30,000,000 bushels above private estimates. Coffee and sugar showed little change.

Foreign exchange held steady in quiet trading, sterling cables ruling around $4.85 1-2.

ANNOUNCEMENTS

Broadway Theatre.

It will be pleasant news for Norwich theatre-goers to hear of the new policy which the Broadway theatre is offering to its patrons.

Starting next week Monday and Tuesday the Broadway tehatre is presenting the opening program of the Garrick Players in the sensational Broadway success, "The Baby Cyclone," exactly as played for over seven months at the Henry Miller theatre in New York city.

The Garrick Players are a group of experienced stock and legitimate actors and actresses, everyone of which has played in several Broadway productions.

The Garrick Players, under the direction of Robert Stevens and Jack Dunnigan bring to Norwich for the first time in local history, a series of popular Broadway plays, produced and offered exactly as shown in their original presentation in New York.

The local showing of the Garrick Players was made possible only after several months of hard work on the part of the Broadway management. Requests have poured in for Broadway shows. This has been impossible due to the terrific expense. Now, however, Norwich can see these shows at the lawest prices ever offered anywhere. Due to the large seating capacity of the Broadway, it is possible to gross a large amount. The Broadway management is ready and willing to continue to bring the Garrick Players to Norwich for two days each week as long as they will be supported locally. This places the burden on the Norwich people and, after the first showing, they are assured of a pleasant surprise.

Breed Theatre

When, in the early years of the last century, slave-running to the American coast became a popular and lucrative trade among conscienceless, semi-piratical adventurers, some of the most stirring events in the history of the country transpired.

This is the background against which "The Love Mart," George Fitzmaurice production for First National Pictures, coming to the Breed theatre tomorrow night, is laid.

Featuring Billie Dove, Gilbert Roland and Noah Beery, with a strong supporting cast, this photodrama offers unrivalled entertainment. The atmosphere of the story is most intriguing. It is like a draft of heady wine or a glimpse into the pages of a thrilling novel of pirates and romance in the good old days.

The story of a beautiful girl who is declared to be an octoroon and sold into slavery, only to be freed and proved white by the man who bought her makes a plot at once dramatic and intriguing.

Fitzmaurice employed his great skill to give to the investiture and atmospheric tone of the picture a realism which proves thoroughly convincing. The inn, constructed from an old ship grounded on the sands outside New Orleans; the slave market, the gay Tivoli cafe; the streets of the old French quarters of the romantic city; the fencing academy—these and other effective scenes make the film one that satisfies the eye, even as the story satisfies the mind.

Billie Dove, entering whole-hearted into the spirit of the role, did some of the best acting of her career as Antoinette Frobelle, the aristocratic girl upon whom the accusation of the "one drop of dark blood" rests.

Gilbert Roland fences with skill and makes love with a fervor that is most convincing. Noah Beery as Captain Remy, the slave-runner, is perfect.

Palace Theatre

Every character in "The Actress," Norma Shearer's starring feature which comes Sunday, Monday and Tuesday to the Palace theatre, is a real person copied faithfully from life.

This was the revelation made at the Metro-Goldwyn Mayer studio by O. P. Heggie, one of the best known actors in America and a personal friend of Arthur Wing Pinero, the author of the stage play, "Trelawney of the Wells" from which "The Actress" is adapted.

"I knew Pinero back in 1910 when he was managing the presentation of 'Trelawney' at the Duke of York theater in London," said Heggie. "One day while we were rehearsing, I remarked to one of his friends who was sitting 'out front' that the characters were remarkably well drawn and lifelike.

" 'No wonder,' he replied, they are all real people. Back in the '90's Pinero and I were as great friends as we are today. One evening we were bored for something to do and I took him down to a theatrical lodging house where some friends of mine were living. After that evening I noticed he went back again and again and wondered what was the attraction.

" 'Almost a year later, he invited me and the lodgers at the house to witness the premier of his new play, "Trelawney of the Wells." When the curtain went up, we discovered that he had faithfully mimicked all of us. That is the reason for the marvelous realism—but I have often wondered if Pinero wrote it just as a joke on us all.' "

Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer faithfully copied the original characters as portrayed in the first presentation of the play so that when "The Actress" was first shown, the joke—if it was a joke—was and is perpetuated.

Sidney Franklin directed the Norma Shearer production with an all-star cast including Ralph Forbes in the leading male role, Owen Moore, Gwen Lee, Roy D'Arcy, Virginia Pearson and William Humphrey.

Tim McCoy, whose face is known wherever motion pictures are shown, has been upon the screen less than two years, though he has been starred in a dozen big western and historical film dramas.

The Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer star of "Riders of the Dark," the production to be shown at the Palace theatre, was starred in the first picture he ever appeared in—"War Paint." He never buckled the extra list, never played characters nor bits and was never on the stage. He was selected as a western star because he is a real westerner—a rancher in Wyoming and an adopted member of the Arapaho Indian tribe.

McCoy is a daring horseman, knows the plains and mountains and is personally acquainted with more than twenty thousand Indians, including many aged warriors of the Sioux and Blackfeet campaigns.

His "Riders of the Dark" is a thrilling picture of California pioneer days and is replete with stirring action and adventure. Dorothy Dwan has the leading feminine role, while the supporting cast includes: Roy D'Arcy, Bert Roach, Frank Currier, Rex Lease, Dick Sutherland and others. The film was directed by Nick Grinde.

State Trade School—Putnam

While the active boy is attracted by the challenge embodied in the very practical nature of the training given at the State Trade School and especially the manuel and active parts of the work which provide an opportunity for exercise and apparent material accomplishment, nevertheless a complete program for training must be organized as to develop not only dexterity in the handling of tools and in the operation of machinery but to direct the student's mind toward the principle of science and art underlying the trade which he is attempting to learn.

His studies in drafting and design become not a drill and cram process but rather an interesting planning procedure and his math study becomes a means to achieve a worthwhile end. As an instance—motor rewinding requires a definite layout or plan of the windings including the manner of such windings and their connections. When work of this character comes to the school the net working results are preserved and a problem in winding design is built around this particular job. This is filed in the form of an instruction sheet and becomes a part of the academic material used by the electrical student in the progressive steps of his training.

Related material is therefore constantly increasing and is kept in a live and up to date state because of its relation to current work problems. One of the greatest dangers which can befall any training program is that of permitting the related subject material to become stereotyped and static.

Among the larger projects in which boys received training the past year have been the building of a seven room Dutch Colonial bungalow, several remodeling jobs, building of fireplaces, chimneys, brick piers, concrete work and plastering in the masonry department, wiring of several houses by the electrical students and the rewinding of a large number of electric motors of various types, building of special machinery and tools for local as well as out of town concerns and the manufacturing of cotton cloth in a variety of forms from the raw cotton to the finished state, all this work being definitely tied up with academic studies.

The school operates on a 44-hour week basis and is open the year round. Students may enter at any time and the course requires 4800 hours of satisfactory work to receive the State Board of Education's Apprentice diploma.

Evening school classes are also maintained in all the trades running from October to April. These classes afford opportunity for those employed to receive further instruction in their trade or industrial calling. Evening classes are always popular and are largely attended, students coming to these classes from all the surrounding towns. All instruction is free to residents of Connecticut.

Athletics, of course, are a part of the school's program and last year's athletic activities were very satisfactory. This phase of the work, however, is never allowed to absorb too much of the student's time or detract from the major objective, that of teaching the trade.

NEW LONDON PROFESSIONAL MAN AND WIDOW REPORTED MISSING

(Special to The Bulletin.)

NEW LONDON, Aug. 10—A prominent professional man is missing and so is a woman, a widow, with whom he has been friends for a long time, it has been revealed. The intimation of friends of the former is that the professional man has deserted his wife. The disappearance of the man and woman has caused much comment, especially among the friends of the man.

Commissioner of Motor Vehicles Robbins B. Stoeckel today ordered the suspension of the drivers' licenses of John J. Romano, a member of the crew of the U. S. S. Camden, and Frank Halliwell, 41 Gorton street.

FUNERALS

Frank E. Parrent

The funeral of Frank E. Parrent, former Ledyard farm hand, who died this week at Lawrence-Memorial hospital, was held this morning at 11 o'clock at No. 15 Masonic street, the services being conducted by Rev. Arthur Wagner. Members of the Namcaug Engine company, of which organization Mr. Parrent was a member, acted as bearers. Burial was in Lamb Town cemetery.

Youngs Morgan

The funeral of Youngs Morgan, former well-known Groton merchant, was held this afternoon at 2:30 o'clock at his late residence, 80 School street, Groton, and was attended by a large assemblage of mourners. The services were conducted by Rev. Henry Hulbert, pastor of the Groton Congregational church, assisted by Rev. George R. Athe, pastor of the Groton Heights Baptist church. The bearers were Henry E. Marquardt, C. S Woodhull, Davis, James Hardin, William Lee, Henry Camber and Joseph Gray. Burial was in Gardner cemetery, this city.

John Rafftery, formerly of New London and Mystic, now a resident at Jacksonville, Fla., is spending several weeks in New London, being registered at the Crocker House. Mr. Rafftery will be remembered as purser on the steamer Block Island, when that boat plied between Norwich, New London, Watch Hill and Block Island.

Albert and Guido Minucci and John Grafolio have sold a house and lot on Colman street to William J. and Nettie N. Sylvia.

Mary Samuelsen has sold a parcel of land in the rear of her residence, Mercer street, to Lucius E. Whiton. The property adjoins other property recently acquired by Mr. Whiton.

Lucy A. Kellogg has sold a house and lot on Hope street to James Ennis.

Fred Erickson was presented before Justice of the Peace Charles Watrous at Niantic last night, charged with intoxication and breach of the peace. He was fined $15 and costs.

The condition of Mr. and Mrs. Joseph Andelman, 1910 Main street, Hartford, and Mr. and Mrs. Frank Rose, 32 Florence street, also Hartford, who sustained numerous lacerations and bruises at Salem Four Corners, yesterday afternoon, when their car collided with another machine driven by Thomas Quealy, 27 Waterville street, Waterbury, is reported today at Lawrence-Memorial hospital to be favorable.

ATTEMPT TO BURGLARIZE SHOE REPAIRING SHOP

(Special to The Bulletin)

NEW LONDON, Aug. 10—An attempt was made last night to burglarize the Champion Shoe Repairing Co., 20 Bank street, the thief being scared away when he was in the act of attempting to gain entrance. He smashed a rear window and the noise of the crashing of the glass attracted the attention of a man named Maynard. The thief fled to the tracks of the New York, New Haven & Hartford railroad and disappeared in the darkness. The police were notified and a search of the railroad tracks and alleys was made. The shoe repairing establishment has been given much attention of late by vandals for, within a few weeks, stones have been hurled through rear windows.

Prosecuting Attorney Daniel M. Cronin has ordered all of the slot machines recently installed in stores at Ocean Beach to be removed, the action being taken because of one of the store proprietors making a complaint because of the use of the tokens. The prosecutor informed the owners of the machines when they were given permission to distribute them, that if a complaint was received or it became known that the machines were gambling devices that they would be ordered removed from the respective stores. The machines were represented not to be a form of gambling. A nickel is inserted in a slot and three wheels revolve and if certain characters appear at a specified position, tokens representing anywhere from 10 cents to a dollar are emitted. These tokens are redeemable in purchases, but when tokens from other machines were deposited in the machine of the complainant, he appeared to the prosecutor with the result that all of the machines were ordered removed.

Members of the New London Hebrew school will hold a picnic on Sunday at Woodland grove near the Boston Post road in Waterford.

The auxiliary to the local Masons are planning to hold an outing next Thursday. They will leave this city on the steamer Shinnecock for Montauk Point and Greenport. Each member will take a basket luncheon.

Mrs. Joseph St. Germain of Niantic will entertain members of the Catholic Women's club on Aug. 29 at her summer home. Complete plans for the affair were made at a meeting of the organization held last night in the State street club rooms. Following the business meeting a social hour was enjoyed. Those who acted as hostesses were Mrs. John F. Hokanson, Mrs. John Holland, Mrs. William Gilligly and Mrs. Annie Henley.

Two more petitions have been circulated for city offices. W. Alpha Lewis is a council candidate and Attorney Arthur F. Keefe is an aspirant for a position on the city school board. In all there are six petitions for the city council. Others are John F. Murray, Joseph F. Fitzpatrick, Henry H. Coogan, David H. Seamon, Silas Maxson, Jr., and Joseph Perrone. Tomorrow is the last day that petitions can be filed and if all the prospective ones show up at the municipal building there will be 11 candidates for council with but four places to be filled.

Herman Ellman, 29-year-old Negro of 11 Pearl street, was committed to the insane hospital at Preston today by Judge Christopher L. Avery after an examination was made by physicians at the county jail this morning. Ellman was taken into custody on May 2, charged with highway robbery, and at the time appeared to be sane. However, after he was committed to the Franklin street jail he began to act very oddly. He would go on hunger strikes that would last for several days.

Ellman and another Negro inveigled Manuel Silva to accompany them to Riverside park, where, it is said, they struck him over the head and robbed him of $40. His partner, Graves, is now at the jail awaiting trial in the criminal court.

Miss Gertrude Abramson of 259 Huntington street has accepted a position in the secretarial department of Mrs. Ellen N. Watrous' Business Service bureau. Miss Abramson is a graduate of Connecticut college, majoring in secretarial work and languages.

Mrs. Clark D. Edgar and Miss Eleanor Mercer of Hillside road, who have been touring the northwestern states and Canada, have returned to their respective homes.

Miss Betty Parker entertained a group of friends Wednesday evening in honor of her 13th birthday at her home in Garfield avenue. Games were played, after which refreshments were served. Those present were Misses Doris Lezarde, Irma Lanphere, Lillian Ferringer, Doris Valeite, Betsy Jane Hayes and Lucille Hayes and Donald Hayes, Edward Hayes, Buddy Kinnetz, Jr., Buddy Parker, James Cunningham, Mrs. R. J. Hayes, Mrs. Joseph Perringer, Mrs. Andred Cunningham, Mrs. G. M. Parker and Mrs. Bailey.

As a result of the rigid investigation that has been launched by the police department, two suspects are expected to be arrested shortly, charged with being the originators of the several recent fires, believed to have been of incendiary origin. The investigation is being made by Detective Sergts. Nelson S. Smith and John J. Cavanaugh.

Owing to heavy fog, the cruise of the New York Yacht club did not begin this morning as had been planned. Instead the fleets were forced to wait until this afternoon to get under way for Newport, the first objective in the annual regatta. There were in the neighborhood of 200 yachts in the harbor.

Manuel Sireci, 817 Main street, was presented in the police court today charged with violation of the state motor vehicle law in driving an automobile which was equipped with improper markers. He was fined $10 and costs.

Several more violators of the city's traffic laws are scheduled to be presented in the police court tomorrow. They are Cecil Cunningham, 326 Crystal avenue; William G. Burt, Lyme and Harry Mori, 581 Montauk avenue, all charged with parking overtime on State street. Mori has been arrested three previous times for automobile violations.

Charles Brooks, who undoubtedly is mentally unsound, but whose condition is not such as to warrant his being placed under restraint, went to police headquarters this evening for no known good cause and insisted on indulging in a rambling conversation with Desk Sergeant Frank Howard. The officer, who knew of Brooks' condition and was possessed of the fact that he has no means of a livelihood or means of support, detained him for safety. He will be examined by physicians for the purpose of determining his sanity. Brooks, who was formerly employed on the ferryboat Mohican, has been acting queerly for two years or more, but never displays strains of violence.

Catherine Grant, 4, colored and residing at 18 Stony Hill, was struck and painfully, but not seriously injured, by an automobile this evening when she ran in front of the car on Main street, a short distance from her home. The child had been on the sidewalk on Main street and started to cross the street to go to her home. An automobile truck of the Connecticut Power company was motionless at the point where the child stood and where linemen were making repairs. Just as the automobile driven by Mrs. R. J. Mahan, 730 Rugby road, Brooklyn, N. Y., received a signal from one of the linemen to drive around the truck, the child darted from the sidewalk and was struck by the fender of the car and thrown to the pavement. Mrs. Mahan alighted from the auto and another autoists conveyed Mrs. Mahan and the victim to the Lena hospital, where an examination revealed the child's injuries to be entirely to the scalp, which was lacerated. The cuts required three stitches to close. After the cuts had been sewed up the child was taken home. Mrs. Mahan then went to police headquarters and reported the accident.

This city was deluged with rain about 6 o'clock this evening. The downpour was sufficient to convert the streets into rivers. The rain fell just as the stores were closing, creating a demand for taxicabs that gladdened the hearts of the chauffeurs. The traffice post at Grenada Terrace on Pequot avenue, weighing 100 pounds or more, was washed from its position by the flood that came from the hill. Lower Bank street was a lake, so great was the volume of water there. In fact all the low streets were flooded.

The barking sands in the Hawaiian islands give forth a sound like the barking of a dog when rubbed together or slid over.

TAFTVILLE

Mr. and Mrs. John Wood of South Second avenue were pleasantly surprised at their home Wednesday evening by a number of their friends who gathered to observe their 25th wedding anniversary. Mr. and Mrs. Wood, who were married Aug. 8, 1903, by Rev. Mr. Hand, rector of St. Andrew's Episcopal church at Greeneville, were presented with a silver console set. The occasion was also the observance of the birthday of Miss Elizabeth Houston and she was also presented a gift. The evening was spent in games of various kinds, and music and singing with Miss Edna M. Krodel at the piano. Refreshments of sandwiches, cake, fruit, candy and tea were served. Those present included Mr. and Mrs. William Patridge, Mrs. Arthur Alquist, Mrs. Albert Lamphere, and Leonard Patridge of Norwich; Mr. and Mrs. Robert Mayor, Mr. and Mrs. William Cocker, Mrs. Woolley, Mrs. Robert McNeely and Miss Dorothea McNeely of Greeneville; Mr. and Mrs. William Masner, Mr. and Mrs. John Houston, Mrs. Fred Ince, Mrs. Margaret Hunt, Miss Mary Greenhalgh, Miss Edna M. Krodel, Miss Elizabeth B. Houston, Miss Ruby Houston and John Wood, Jr., of Taftville; Mrs. Charles Schmidt, Mrs. Kendall, Clifford Kendall and Robert B. Schmidt of Blissville, and Mrs. Mildred Brenton of Jewettville, and Mrs. Mildred Brenton of delightful affair were Mrs. William Cocker, Mrs. John Houston and Mrs. Margaret Hunt.

A piano recital given by the pupils of Miss Mary Newman took place Thursday evening at Miss Newman's home on North Third avenue, the program including work by beginners to the more advanced pupils. The numbers were all well given, and showed careful thought and work by both pupils and teacher. The pupils had the assistance of Miss Yvonne Berge of the Academy of the Holy Family at Baltic, who played Home, Sweet Home, arranged by E. J. Mergen.

The program follows: 'Tis Midnight Hour (Land), George Barlow, Jr.; range Blossoms (Ludovic), Helen Ulewicz; Report Band (Sweney), Mary Thiesault; Heather Rose (Lang), Evelyn Potter; Flash Light (Paul), David Ducharme; When Silver-Threads Are Gold Again (Ross), Matthew Pitras; Moonlight on the Danube (Anon.), Gladys Larkin; Burning of Rome (Paul), Mary Walusiak; Carolling of the Birds (Micherez), Gladys Kinder; Moonlight Echoes (Mergen), Anna Simoneau; Return of Spring (Moelling), Dorothy Simoneau; Grande Marche de Concert (Wollenhaupt), Andrew Shedlock.

Following the musical hour, refreshments were served, and Miss Newman had the assistance of Mrs. Simoneau and Mrs. Archibald Torrance.

Leonard Pingree of North C street and Lewis A. Aberg of North A street are at Pine Tree cottage, the summer home of Mr. and Mrs. Alfred Linderson at North Stonington.

Narcisse Gouger has resigned his position with the No. 2 carding department of the local mills.

Present indications point to a large attendance at the annual outing of the Pioneer Boys of Taftville to be held Sunday at Rocky Point, R. I. There has been a healthy demand for badges—the little blue sign that the bearer is a Pioneer.

Mrs. Edwin Gordon Crowdis and her sister, Miss Doris Palmer, who have been attending the state summer school at Yale university, New Haven, have returned to Mrs. Crowdis' home on North Third avenue.

Peter Lukoff of North Third avenue has been a recent visitor in Willimantic.

Newell Beardow, who has been at Camp Hazen, the Y. M. C. A. camp at Chester, has gone to Pine Knoll, the summer home of the Beardow family at Pine Grove, Niantic.

George Durrell, who has been mending some time at the Poneman house, has left town.

NORWICH BUILDER GETS CONTRACT FOR ADDITION TO THERMOS FACTORY

On Friday afternoon at the office of The American Thermos Bottle company the contract for the new addition to the factory was awarded to Archibald Torrance, the contract price being $18,740.27. There were 13 bids received on the job.

The figures which were received on this contract were enough below the original estimate so that the company was enabled to obtain about 3200 square feet additional floor space. It was not planned originally to excavate the basement to its full width. The award to Mr. Torrance was made on the basis of excavating the basement to the full width, giving the additional floor space above mentioned.

As previously reported, this addition is necessitated by the increased activities of The American Thermos Bottle company which is branching out into other fields, notably the manufacture and distribution of large sized containers.

Mr. Torrance is much pleased at receiving this contract on account of the fact that he built the original building in 1912.

The heating and plumbing bids will be received at a later date, also the electric wiring bids. The original estimates, plans and specifications were prepared by Chandler & Palmer who are acting as architects and engineers for the work.

WEST WILLINGTON BIRDS LEAD WHITE LEGHORNS

For the fifth consecutive month the White Leghorns of George Lowry from West Willington, Conn., succeeded in making the best monthly score in its breed division in the Storrs egg laying contest. A production of 296 out of a possible 310 eggs did the trick, and furthermore it was the best monthly score among all competitors. This performance wins another blue ribbon for Lowry.

These birds have a total of 2,308 eggs to their credit for the first nine months of competition, and they look more and more like sure winners of this year's laying trial. They are 203 eggs ahead of the second-high pen. Rhode Island Reds entered by Charlescote farm from Sherborn, Mass., and each week sees the Lowry birds increasing their lead. The Leghorns from Connecticut have produced at better than a 92 per cent rate during the past two months, and they give every indication of being able to continue at a strong pace for some time to come.

As might be expected, production eased off slightly during July. The contest flock of 1,400 pullets laid 24,569 eggs for a production of 56.6 per cent. This figure represents a loss of 1,473 eggs when compared with the production count for June, and a decrease of 474 eggs when compared with the score for the corresponding month a year ago. The contest birds have produced a grand total of 214,855 eggs in nine months. This is an average of 153.5 eggs for each of the 140 competing entries or better than 153 eggs per bird.

July Ribbon Winners

After Lowry's high-scoring entry came the Rhode Island Red pen of Clarence E. Lee from Auburn, N. Y., which led the Red field and placed second among all competitors with a score of 264 eggs. These birds win the blue ribbon in the Red class, and the Globus Poultry farm entry from Attleboro, Mass., took the red ribbon with a score of 230 eggs. The second-high Leghorn entry, and one that was third among all contestants, is owned by Tom Barron from Catforth, near Preston, England. These ten pullets shelled out 255 eggs. Third place in the Leghorn class was taken by the entry of Tip Top farm from Waldoboro, Me., with a score of 251 eggs.

In the Wyandotte division, the entry of the Fisher Poultry farm from Ayton, Ontario, won the blue ribbon with a score of 242 eggs. This production, incidentally, was the deciding factor in the climb from second to first place in the Wyandotte division for this pen in the past month. In the White Rock division, the entry of J. C. VanWinkle of Camden, N. Y., won the blue ribbon with a score of 199 eggs. In the Barred Rock class the pen owned by Spring Brook Poultry farm from South Wethersfield, Conn., led the field with a count of 203 eggs.

Changes Among the Leaders

Most of the changes among the leaders during the past month took place in the Rhode Island Red class. Clarence E. Lee's entry made the biggest jump of the month by climbing from fourth to second among the Reds, passing teams entered by West Neck farm from Huntington, N. Y., and the Globus Poultry farm. The latter entry passed that of West Neck farm but Globus is still in third place due to the fact that Lee jumped in a little faster to gain the position as runner-up. The Red Mount farm entry from Franklin, Mass., appears to display the Massachusetts Agricultural college entry for fifth position according to this report, but in reality Red Mount earned the position a month ago. An error in compiling the records was responsible for the failure to announce the change in the June report.

In the White Wyandotte division, the pen owned by the Fisher Poultry farm from Ayton, Ontario, took the lead by passing the entry of Tom Barron from Catforth, near Preston, England.

WILLIMANTIC BANK BRINGS SUIT FOR FORECLOSURE

Suit for foreclosure of a $250 balance on a mortgage has been brought in the superior court for the county by the Willimantic Trust company against United Foundations, Inc., of New York, Harry Levine of Colchester and East Hampton Bank and Trust company.

The property upon which foreclosure is sought consists of two tracts of land in Lebanon which Harry Levine mortgaged to the Willimantic bank for $1,000 on Dec. 21, 1916. Unity Foundations, Inc., assumed the mortgage by a written agreement dated Aug. 29, 1927. The defendant, Levine claims an interest in the premises by virtue of a mortgage dated Aug. 3, 1927 and the East Hampton bank claims this mortgage was assigned to the bank Sept. 30, 1927.

PROF. SELDEN'S PAINTING WINS SPECIAL MENTION

Henry Bill Selden, A. M., chairman and associate professor of the department of fine arts in Connecticut College for Women, received a most complimentary mention in the article on this year's art exhibit at Old Lyme in the New York Times for Sunday, Aug. 5. The article is signed E. A. J. and the reference to Mr. Selden reads as follows: "Henry Bill Selden has climbed to real majesty in 'Mountain Farm.'"

Rumor has it that there were several would-be purchasers of Mr. Selden's picture, which was promptly sold. Mr. Selden is now painting in Maine but will return to New London in time for the opening of college about the middle of September.

Arrested on Non-Support Charge

Arthur Machard, 44, was arrested Friday evening by Constable Dugas of Taftville at his home there at No. 43 Merchants avenue. He was brought to the local police headquarters, where he was locked up to await trial in the city court this (Saturday) morning on a charge of non-support of his family.

LYME ART EXHIBITION ATTRACTS MANY VISITORS

The Rotary Club slogan—"Bigger and Better"—applies admirably to the 27th annual exhibition of the Lyme Art association now in progress, judging by the enthusiasm shown by the thousands of visitors who have already enjoyed the colorful canvases so well hung in the association's attractive, well-lighted gallery. Miss Florence Griswold, hostess, in whose old Colonial house just up the road the now flourishing art colony was born somewhat more than a quarter of a century ago, reports that these visitors arrive almost as soon as the doors open at nine o'clock in the morning and are still coming in at the closing hour of six. The diversity of license plates adorning the automobiles in the association's generous parking place show that from the opening day both near and distant parts of the country, including the Pacific coast, have been represented.

The Saturday observed as Hamburg day was the banner day in attendance, a fitting ending to the big opening week. In addition to many other art lovers from far and near, Miss Bertha E. Landers, dean of the Gateway school, New Haven and lecturer on appreciation of art, brought a group of one hundred or more students, and teachers of art from various parts of the state, and women prominent in club and social circles to see the exhibition and meet Lyme artists.

The proceeds of the Hamburg day teas are devoted to the purchase of new books for the Hamburg library, the state of Connecticut doubling this amount in books. This substantial yearly increase in volumes circulated in remote rural districts is greatly appreciated by those whose lives are thereby enriched. Boxes of books are packed and sent from school to school, thence to the homes, the children acting as messengers.

This exhibition will continue a week longer than last year. The Wednesday and Saturday afternoon teas continue to be festive occasions, dainty flower-decked tables being set upon the lawn in the shade of gay umbrellas and the towering maples that spread protecting branches over gallery and grounds.

WASHINGTON PASTOR IN CENTRAL BAPTIST PULPIT

Dr. Samuel Judson Porter, pastor of the First Baptist church, Washington, D. C., a church advertised as "In the heart of Washington for the hearts of Washington", will be the preacher Sunday morning at the Central Baptist church. Dr. Porter is not only a preacher but also an author. In reviewing his book "Lamps of Gold" we read: "Twenty sermons by the pastor of the First Baptist church, Washington, D. C., which he has packed with illustrative material richly and imaginatively drawn from broad attractive fields—a valuable collection for the inspiration and aid of ministers. Emphasis is placed on the inner life with the delightful, stirring touch of true evangelism. Jesus Christ is clearly delineated with a treatment which subordinates all minor things to the setting forth of the Saviour in the proper light. For laymen the gospel of good will here developed and applied to daily life will bring progress in faith and fellowship, in altruism and friendliness, in reverence and hope." Dr. Porter will take as his theme Sunday morning at 10.45 a. m. "Lilies and Harpstrings" and in the evening at 7.45 p. m. "Releasing the Imprisoned Splendor."

MAKING HIT WITH RADIO DRAMATIC READINGS

John P. Murphy, son of Mr. and Mrs. John J. Murphy of 142 Broadway, is booked with seven different radio stations to broadcast dramatic readings from memory. He is scheduled to broadcast this (Saturday) noon over Station WRNY, New York, WGBS, New York, Aug. 20, at 6 p. m. and every Sunday evening from 9:30 to 10 p. m. and from WAAT, New Jersey. Mr. Murphy made his debut in the radio broadcasting world from WGBS, last Monday, and many of his local friends listened in on his work. The local radio artist at the time was highly praised by the management of the station for his efforts.

WANTS ANOTHER CONTRACTOR ON GOBEILLE'S CONTRACTS

The state highway department has advertised for bids for contracts to complete the two important road construction jobs which Eugene L. Gobeille, missing contractor of Worcester, Mass., and head of Eugene L. Gobeille, Inc., that city, left unfinished at Clinton and Killingly when he disappeared some days ago. One job is for the completion of about 12,986 feet of water-bound macadam on the Clinton-Deep River road in the towns of Clinton and Westbrook, while the other is for the completion of about 7,051 feet of bituminous macadam on the Danielson-South Killingly highway in Killingly.

Gobeille is still missing and being sought by Worcester authorities. The state loses nothing financially by his disappearance and the jobs left unfinished, as the company bonding Gobeille must make up any difference if the new contracts now advertised for are larger than the original contracts entered into by Gobeille.

The bids will be opened at 2 p. m. on Monday, Aug. 13, at the state highway office in Hartford.

At the same time bids will be opened for the contract to reconstruct the 12-foot concrete bridge on the Canaan-South Canaan road.

On the Danielson-Providence road contract, directly off Main street, construction has ceased since Contractor Gobeille mysteriously disappeared several weeks ago. The machinery being used on this roadway stands idle, coated with rust from the weather during the number of weeks work has been stopped.

According to information in Worcester papers Friday, police are following up the information given in Canada, that Gobeille left for a visit in Oklahoma.

CHANGE TO ELECTRICITY FOR TRAFFIC BEACONS

Failure of the American Gas Accumulator company to keep up with its contract to supply cylinders of gas for the flashing traffic beacons in use in the city is forcing the use of electricity in the beacons instead of gas. As soon as the cylinders of gas now on hand have been used up the installation of the electric attachments will be carried out. It has been found that this will result in a reduction of the cost of operation about $25 a year. Improvements are to be made on the beacons also by placing at the top a large white globe with red bulb inside, which will be illuminated only at night and will be turned on by the officer coming on duty.

All of the beacons, the three on Franklin square and those located on Thames, Burnham, Washington and Union squares and that at the Chelsea Parade will also be redecorated. The sections on the beacons at the present time painted black will be redecorated with gray paint.

During the coming week stickers 8 by 36 inches in dimension will be placed at the north corner of Shetucket and Water streets to signify no parking within 15 feet of the intersection.

STONINGTON MAN SEEKS DIVORCE FOR DESERTION

Helen Greenwood Turnbull of Stonington, is made defendant in a divorce action brought by James Turnbull of Stonington on the grounds of desertion, according to papers returnable to the superior court on the first Tuesday in September.

Turnbull alleges that his wife deserted him on Nov. 28, 1924, and he seeks the custody of a daughter Helen Dorothy Turnbull, 14 years of age. They were married June 11, 1904.

Colchester Youth in Navy

Albert Van Cleve of Colchester and John E. Palmer of New London have been accepted for service with the United States navy at the New London recruiting station it was announced by J. J. Kenerleher, officer in charge of the station. Palmer and Van Cleve were sent to the training station at Newport, R. I., where they will undergo eight weeks of military training before being assigned to definite duty.

Van Cleve plans to enter the aviation branch of the service by taking the examination for the pilot school at Pensacola, Fla. He is a graduate of Colchester high school and has a year at the Hartford School of Design to his credit.

Palmer is a graduate of Chapman Technical high school and plans to enter the United States naval academy at Annapolis by competing for one of the 100 appointments allowed the enlisted men of the navy yearly.

GIFTS PRESENTED AT FAREWELL SURPRISE PARTY

A farewell surprise party was given Thursday evening at the home of Miss Carrie Pascouche in honor of Miss Lucy D'Atri, who is soon to leave this city to reside with her mother in West Warren, Mass. Games, dancing and piano selections were enjoyed followed by luncheon for 18 persons. The hostess was assisted in serving by Miss Ida Petrone. A delightful surprise was given Miss D'Atri in the form of a genuine leather handbag presented her from her girl friends. Her friends will be sorry to see her depart from the city and wish her luck, prosperity and a happy future.

ECHOES FROM THE LODGE ROOMS

FOREIGN WARS VETERANS

Recent defeat of legislation destined to secure preference for veterans seeking civil service positions is scheduled for heated debate at the 29th national encampment of the Veterans of Foreign Wars of the U. S., to be held at Indianapolis Aug. 26th to 31st.

"There is a likelihood that forces of the V. F. W. will be marshalled behind the bill presented by Congressman U. S. Guyer of Kansas for a new campaign when congress re-convenes next December," declared Adjutant General R. B. Handy, Jr., at national headquarters at Indianapolis.

Veto of the Fish bill, after being passed by both the house and senate, came as a sore disappointment to champions of the measure during the last session of congress.

President Coolidge followed up his veto of the Fish bill with appointment of a special committee to investigate and make recommendations concerning veterans' preference in civil service positions. The committee, of which Congressman Fish is chairman, is scheduled to hear recommendations from the various veteran organizations for presentation to the next session of congress.

In the recommendations submitted by Edwin S. Bettelheim, chairman of the national legislative committee of the V. F. W., eight points are being stressed, urging congress to enact legislation similar to the Fish bill as amplified by the Guyer measure.

EAGLES

Norwich aerie, No. 367, held its regular weekly meeting on Monday evening at Eagles hall where it was decided to hold a class initiation on Aug. 20. Three applications were received and acted upon and the routine business transacted.

DEGREE OF POCAHONTAS

Sebequanash council, No. 11, met in the tepee at the Buckingham Memorial. There were a number of visitors from Hiawatha of New London and one from Iroquois of Putnam. The next meeting is to be a short one with whist and pinochle afterwards. Deputy Lavina Prevost was present.

PATRONS OF HUSBANDRY

Norwich grange held its regular meeting Wednesday evening with all officers present. An invitation to neighbor with Mystic Grange on Sept. 6 was accepted. Brother Gardner, high priest of Demetri is to be the speaker. Worthy State Master Minor Ives and several state officers were at the meeting with visitors from neighboring granges. A total of 111 members and visitors attended. New London County Pomona is to hold its annual picnic at Atlantic beach, Aug. 16. A basket lunch at noon with all sitting down together, as tables will be provided.

The grange auxiliary held a picnic Thursday afternoon and evening at Mrs. Eliza Walker's grove. Thirty-eight members and friends gathered for one of the best picnics of the year. Several of the men joined in the sports and games making it a gala day. Three tables of pinochle were in play with Mrs. Alida Boyens winning first prize and Mrs. Everett Maurice consolation. Pinning tail on donkey was quite a feat, the prize going to Leonard Staubley. At 6 o'clock the committee, comprising Mrs. Ida Richardson, Mrs. Browning and Mrs. Murray served a bountiful supper of meat loaf, pickles, sandwiches, tomatoes, salads, cake, ice cream and lemonade, also lolly pops and peanuts for all. The Walker grove was very pretty with its lanterns and decorations. A rising vote of thanks was given Mrs. Walker for her hospitality and all left at 8:30 at the end of a perfect day.

GROTTO

The financial campaign among members of Nemrod Grotto, Moyner, is about to start to raise the funds required in securing and developing Grotto home in the residence property of the late Zebulon R. Robbins on Cliff street. This has been acquired by a newly formed corporation of Grotto members, known as the Grotto Building corporation, of which the following are officers: Harry S. Rosenberg, president; Joseph W. Wellington, vice president; J. Lloyd Rush, treasurer and Russell E. Crowell, secretary.

The incorporators and board of directors are as follows: Harry S. Rosenberg, Joseph W. Wellington, J. Lloyd Rush, Russell E. Crowell, Harold H. Kramer, Fred C. Thumm, Raymond Grady, John S. Gallagher, Thomas Jones, Frank R. Wilson, Raymond E. Britton, John Morton, Everett Peckham, Earl Mathewson.

Other committees named follow: Building committee, John Morton; Joseph W. Wellington, J. Lloyd Rush; grounds committee, Fred C. Thumm, Harold H. Kramer; house committee, Harry S. Rosenberg, Rusell E. Crowell, Joseph W. Wellington.

Sixteen teams will engage in the financial campaign, the following being captains who are to select their own team of five members: Harry S. Rosenberg, Joseph W. Wellington, J. Lloyd Rush, Russell E. Crowell, Harold H. Kramer, Fred C. Thumm, Raymond Grady, Edmund Hindle, Everett Peckham, John Morton, Frank R. Wilson, Thomas Jones, Earl Mathewson, Raymond E. Britton, John S. Gallagher, Elmer E. Johnson.

The Robbins residence has been purchased for about $20,000 and the Grotto has voted to confer with George Pitcher & Son on the plans for alterations of the 18-room mansion, to arrange for a modern clubhouse, with a large ballroom, meeting room, billiard room, card rooms, bowling alleys, shower baths and other changes.

MOOSEHEART LEGION

Women of Mooseheart Legion held their regular meeting Thursday evening at Moose home with Senior Regent Minnie Smith presiding.

Under new business the senior regent appointed Past Regent Teresa Watters chairman of the entertainment committee for the rest of the year. The chairman appointed Ethel M. Hoelck on the committee and will call upon all the Legionnaires to do their bit, especially for past regent's night which is the last meeting in September.

It was voted to hold the school of instructions Aug. 23rd, starting at 10 o'clock in the morning with lunch served at noon by Chairman Nellie Dorr, continuing all afternoon with initiation at the business meeting at night. Every Legionnaire who can possibly do so, is urged to attend these instruction, which will be given by Deputy Grand Regent-at-Large Mrs. Weller and at which New London chapter will be guests. Chairman Irene Burns read the auditing report for the second quarter, and it was accepted.

Under good of the order the senior regent appointed the committee for the annual outing, as follows: Chairman Teresa Watters, Ethel M. Hoelck, Marie LaValle and Senior Regent Smith. All Legionnaires wishing to attend will be at the N. Y., N. H. & H. railroad station Wednesday, Aug. 15. Bus leaves at 10 o'clock sharp for Atlantic beach if pleasant. Bring plate, cup, knife, fork and spoon, also something good for the supper which will be served at 6 o'clock. Every Legionnaire is invited to be present and enjoy an all day general good time.

WOMAN'S RELIEF CORPS

Sedgwick Woman's Relief corps, No. 16, met at the Buckingham Memorial Friday afternoon. In the absence of the president, the senior vice-president, Mrs. Althea Mae Brown, presided. The usual reports were read and approved. General orders were read, most of these concerning the national convention to be held in Denver in September. The 18th and 26th regiments will hold their reunions Aug. 15 at the Buckingham. Several mentioned the fine singing by the G. A. R. quartet on Honor Day at Cromwell. A motion was carried to send letters of thanks to the drum corps and others who entertained at the 42nd anniversary of the local corps. The charter was draped in memory of Mrs. Chloe A. Warren, a past national senior vice-president, who died July 28. The corps closed with the salute to the flag and singing of America.

Bean-Knight Wedding

Friends of Miss Lillian Vianna Knight of Torrington, Conn., formerly secretary to the president at Connecticut College for Women, have received announcements of her marriage on Aug. 6 to Malcom Russell Bean, attorney-at-law of Boston. Miss Knight, the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. George Horace Knight of Torrington, served on the staff of administration at the college for two years prior to her resignation in June.

The man who praises the baby always wins the mother's smile.

POETRY

To Jessie, an Old-Fashioned Doll

Dear little friend of long ago,
Companion of the days
Of "make believe," when all untroubled
Were life's strange devious ways,
A creature vividly alive
You always seemed to me—
Ever responsive in your power
To love and feel and see.

As one by one I put away
All childish things, not so
Could I be moved to part with you—
I could not let you go!
And so I hid you safe away,
Lest foolish I should seem,
Like one who clings too long, too close,
To some sweet vanished dream.

Your flaxen curls and rosy cheeks
And eyes of violet,
The honeyed smile upon your lips,
Are lovely to me yet;
Still in the quaint and faded dress
My childish hands designed,
Today, as in the long ago,
Delight in you I find.

And for my teacher you were named,
That fair maid, my ideal
Of all things womanly and fine;
For her sake, too, I feel
But deeper love for you, wee friend—
My Jessie! Where, oh, where,
I sometimes wonder, is she now,
That one whose name you bear!

So now an honored place you hold,
Guarded as precious trust,
In the safe niche assigned to you,
Defying moth and rust,
The gnawing tooth of time, to steal
The charms you held for me
Of dear companionship in days
Of blessed memory.

—Louella C. Poole.

When Roses Blow

Always when the roses blow
Their beauty makes me glad.
And though I love their sweetness so
They sometimes make me sad;
For every time their loveliness
Takes one more year from me,
And I've one less in which to bless
The beauty that I see.

Always when the wild birds sing
I dearly love their song;
But 'neath their carols hides a sting—
The, cannot tarry long.
That is a painful thought—yet once
With wing that twitched a wink
A wee bird seemed to say: You dunce,
Just sing as I—don't think!

—Samuel Minturn Peck.

HUMOR OF THE DAY

"Is the upholstery of this car good?"

"Sir, the proof of the padding is in the seating."—Bystander.

The next step in the production of small cars is said to be one which can be used as a cigarette-lighter as well. —Punch.

"You life-savers have a good time here, don't you?"

"Oh, yes, we go in for everything." —Florida Times-Union.

"Have you ever driven a car?" the lady applicant for a license was asked.

"One hundred and twenty thousand miles," put in her husband, who was standing near by, "and never had a hand on the wheel."—Detroit News.

Teacher (in practical housekeeping class)—Can you tell me what four pounds of steak would be at 15 cents a pound?

Betty (very practical) — Rather tough!—Christian Science Monitor.

"You danced every dance. You must be extremely fond of dancing.

"Oh, not so very. I'm only trying to get my money's worth out of the cover charge.—Washington Star.

"Judge, I'm drawn on the August jury."

"Well?"

"But I had just made arrangements to go away with my wife."

"Aren't you in luck?"—Louisville Courier-Journal.

"I don't know whether this is a good story or not," said the new reporter, "but the Methodists, Baptists, Presbyterians, Episcopalians and Universalists are asking for funds for new church buildings."

"Fine!" exclaimed the city editor. "Write a column on it and we'll call it 'Sects Appeal'." — American Legion Monthly.

A messenger boy is publishing his reminiscences. Written in the loiter vein, we presume.—Humorist.

"Oh, the sin of lying, of exaggeration!" cried the speaker as he warmed up. "Would that I could tell you the number of times I have shed barrels and barrels of tears over it."—Boston Transcript.

The United States public health service states that no river in this country can now be regarded as supplying water that is hygenically safe without treatment.

Automobile manufacturers have been making special efforts to improve their designs so as to prevent water from leaking into the wood framework of cars.

French farmers in increasing numbers are using electric current. The central government provides subsidies for electrical development and often townships organize syndicates. When the seasonal demand is heavy the farmers take turns using power, operating their threshing machines on different days.

Venezuela's laws require every automobile to have two horns, but the really well equipped cars carry three, making the country a good market for such accessories. The law demands a hand horn for city driving and an electrically-operated signal for use on country roads. Drivers in mountainous territory add a third, operated by a button placed conveniently near the left knee, to permit quick or constant operation on steep grades and sharp turns.

Two-thirds of the women workers in Tientsin, the most prosperiousy city of north China, work for 11 1-2 hours or longer for an average wage of 36 cents gold a day, according to a comprehensive survey just completed by the Young Women's Christian association. Out of 10,000 women workers studied, fewer than half have one rest day in seven, and one-fourth do not have any rest day whatever. Most of those who have one day a week to themselves are employed in foreign factories. Two industrial secretaries of the Y. W. C. A. made a study of 36 establishments, factories and small shops, which were selected as a cross section of the Chinese woman worker's life in Tientsin. As many foreign factories were included, where conditions are above average, the picture is probably a little more favorable than the entire facts justify.

HOOVER IS ENCOURAGED BY REACTION TO HIS ADDRESS

Republican Presidential Nominee Has Been Flooded With Telegrams, Many of Them From Persons Unknown to Him—The Prohibition Declaration Apparently Attracted the Greatest Attention Throughout the Nation.

STANFORD UIVERSITY, Calif., Aug. 12—(AP)—Literally deluged with telegrams, many of them from persons unknown to him, Herbert Hoover today was receiving the first reaction to his address of yesterday accepting the republican presidential nomination.

The general tenor of the messages was of such a character as to bring gratification to the nominee, but he was awaiting editorial expressions from the newspapers and other evidences before undertaking to assess the effect his speech may have had upon the country.

A telegram which especially pleased the nominee showed that the sender was one of the thousands who listened in on the radio, as it referred to the incident during the notification ceremony when one of the male spectators yelled, "We are with you, Herbert," while the candidate was expounding his views on prohibition.

Just as it was given the greatest attention by the seventy odd thousand people who were gathered in Stanford University stadium, the prohibition declaration apparently attracted the greatest attention throughout the nation.

While at least some of the political writers interpreted this as an ultra-dry declaration, close friends of the nominee placed a somewhat different construction on the language.

First off they said that Hoover did not commit himself to the Volstead act, and that he omitted any reference to that statute; they also asserted that the "organized searching investigation of the fact and causes" proposed by him would go beyond the abuses which have grown up in the carrying out of the Volstead act; that it would be directed also to the question of the workability of the present law.

Likewise, these advisors contended, that in the very nature of its working, the nominee's statement that "modification of the enforcement laws which would permit that which the constitution forbids us, nullification", left the door open for changes in the present statutes if the investigation showed they were in conflict with the eighteenth amendment.

While the republican standard-bearer reiterated his own view against the repeal of the eighteenth amendment, he stated clearly that no one could deny the right of those opposing provisions of the constitution to seek to change it. He added that they were "not subject to criticism for asserting that right" but that "the republican party does deny the right of any one to seek to destroy the purposes of the constitution by indirection."

Regarding prohibition as "a great social and economic experiment," the republican candidate disliked to see it made a question of partisan politics. His own thought has been that it is too vital a matter to the welfare of the nation to be treated in that manner, and that it is an experiment to the ultimate solution of which the whole people should give their best thought and energy.

While he devoted a sixth of his address to farm relief, the nominee did not state fully all of the ideas he has upon that subject, and has promised to elaborate upon his acceptance speech considerably in the address he will deliver at his birthplace, West Branch, Ia., on the evening of August 21.

It is known that Hoover places a great deal of reliance upon the efficacy of voluntary conferences between the farmers, shippers and consumers such as he brought about between business men, shippers and consumers during his seven years as secretary of commerce.

The republican candidate holds that some plan along the cooperative lines that will enable the farmers to protect their surpluses, must be worked out. As a means to this end, he has proposed federal financial aid to farmer-owned and farmer-controlled stabilization corporations.

(Text of Mr. Hoover's address is printed on Page 8).

CREST OF FLOOD IN FLORIDA HAS PASSED

INGLIS, Fla., Aug. 12—(AP)—Threat of serious damage from floods in this vicinity was past today, with the flood gates of the Florida Power corporation's huge hydro-electric dam on the Withlacoochee river closed, and waters that spread over ten square miles of marsh land rapidly passing out to sea.

The flood gates through which torrents coursed yesterday, causing a feeling of uneasiness for the safety of this town and Yankeetown, were closed late last night when the lake level behind the big concrete structure had dropped more than a foot to normal.

The small amount of water that swept into the streets here as the water gushed through the emergency opening in the dam to relieve the strain on it had drained off today and citizens went about their normal Sunday activities.

The flood gates were opened early yesterday when water behind the dam reached a record high mark, due to torrential rains that accompanied and followed last week's West Indian hurricane in central Florida and power company officials became apprehensive for the safety of the big concrete structure and the $2,000,000 power plant at its base.

HARTFORD FIREMEN OVERCOME BY SMOKE

HARTFORD, Aug. 12—(AP)—Nearly a score of firemen were overcome, ten of them so seriously they were taken to St. Francis hospital for treatment, at a smoky fire in the cellar of Longley's lunch, 12-18 Union place, early tonight. Two alarms brought six engine companies and three truck companies to the scene.

Illuminating gas from a broken meter at a point where the fire raged highest mingled with clouds of dense black smoke and prostrated several of the men, among whom was Acting Deputy Chief Thomas J. Skelly, captain of Engine company 8. Deputy Chief John E. Carey also was affected but recovered and continued his work at the fire.

Union station and the surrounding streets were lined with hundreds of persons and traffic was at a standstill for more than two hours.

KISSIMMEE RIVER HAS GONE OUT OF ITS BANKS

OKEECHOBEE, Fla., Aug. 12—(AP)—Upsetting predictions, Kissimmee river has gone out of its banks here, washed away several houses, flooded Bonners Beach, a pleasure resort, and washed out approaches to the Seaboard Air Line railway bridge across the river near here.

The river today was more than a mile wide at places and was reported to be higher than at any time in the history of this town.

Eagle bay is burdened with the constant stream of river water that has rushed into it and today was breaking over and flowing in a wide stream into Lake Okeechobee.

BRITISH TRAMP STEAMER ATHELBEACH AGROUND

LEWES, Del., Aug. 12—(AP)—The British tramp steamer Athelbeach went aground off the Ship John lighthouse early today and tonight four tugs were standing by and will attempt to float her tomorrow. The ship carried about 7,500 tons of molasses to the Dupont corporations plant at Deepwater Point, Delaware. The Athelbeach sailed from the British West Indies and carries a crew of 40. A heavy northeast gale swept the region today.

PLANE CRASHED AMONG SPECTATORS, KILLING FOUR

AMSTERDAM, Aug. 12—(AP)—Four persons were killed when an airplane crashed among spectators at an aviation display at Heerlen, near Maastricht, today. The accident was caused by failure of the plane's motor.

TRUST COMPANY SWINDLED THROUGH FORGED CHECKS

NEW YORK, Aug. 12—(AP)—Disclosure that the Manufacturers Trust Co. had been swindled of $104,000 through a series of forged checks was made today by police, who said that ten days' investigation had failed to reveal the forger's identity.

All the forgeries were against the account of one wealthy depositor, Inspector Coughlin said. The forger opened an account at the Chelsea Exchange bank, obtained a copy of the wealthy depositor's signature, then drew checks to the name under which he had opened his account and signed them with the forged name.

These checks he deposited to his own account at the Chelsea exchange, withdrawing all the money in the account after seven forged checks had been deposited. The forgeries were discovered when the victim received his cancelled checks.

Police believed the forgeries were committed by members of a band led by "Th Scratcher," whose identity has not been established, although two of his alleged associates are under arrest in connection with other forgery cases.

H. P. WHITNEY'S VANITIE WINNER OF ASTOR CUP

NEWPORT, R. I., Aug. 12—(AP)—Harry Payne Whitney's Vanitie which led J. Walter Clark's Resolute home yesterday over a 38-mile course off Newport, today was formally declared the winner of the Astor cup in the schooner class. The official figures posted today gave the Vanitie's corrected time as 4 hours, 39 minutes, 1 second. The Resolute's corrected time was 5:13:34.

In the sloop division, Frank S. Crocker's Blackshear was the winner, outrunning Harold Vanderbilt's Prestige. The corrected times were:

Blackshear, 4:35:08; Prestige, 4:43:58.

Today the fleet of the New York Yacht club, 100 vessels strong, rested in harbor here with pennants flying. Tomorrow the annual cruise will be resumed with a run to Vineyard Haven for the Vice-Commodore's cup. The next run will be from Vineyard Haven to Marblehead for the Commodore's cup. The fleet will return here for next week-end and the King's cup race will be sailed off Newport, Aug. 20.

AIRPLANE CRASHED ON TOP OF AN AUTOMOBILE

SOUTH HAVEN, Mich., Aug. 12—(AP)—An airplane dropped out of the sky today, grazing tree tops and crashing onto the automobile of Mrs. T. J. Gehlert of Benton Harbor, Mich. The pilot, known only as "Soring," was seriously injured.

Mrs. Gehlert and a woman companion were not injured when the plane crashed on the hood of the car, forcing it into the ditch, one mile from here. The passenger in the plane, William Walther of Chicago, was only slightly injured.

BANDITS HAVE RELEASED FORMER GREEK DEPUTY

ATHENS, Greece, Aug. 12—(AP)—Former Deputy Melas, who was held captive by bandits for several days until ransomed, reached Janina today in safety although feverish from exhaustion. He said that during his captivity in the mountains he had been fed only dry bread and had been continually threatened by the band of 17 which had carried him off. The military authorities have undertaken a pursuit of the bandits.

200,000 Peasants In Funeral Cort[illegible]

Croatians Paid [illegible] Final Homage to Th[illegible] Militant Leader, Stefan Raditch.

ZAGREB, Jugoslavia, Aug. 12—(AP)—For more than seven hours today thousands of Croatian peasants paid final homage to their militant leader, Stefan Raditch. Then his body was lowered into a tomb to rest beside the bodies of deputies killed in the parliamentary outbreak last June when Raditch himself received wounds which contributed to his death.

The ceremonies began at 10 o'clock this morning and did not end until 5:15 this evening. In the funeral cortege walked more than 200,000 peasants and their wives who had come from all of the headquarters of the peasant party where the body of the dead leader had lain in state for two days.

The cortege was headed by mounted Sokols (patriotic-athletic organizations) and then followed the peasant delegations in their national costumes and carrying the flags of their associations, cultural and economic organizations. There were representatives of foreign lands, a delegation representing the city, and then came the choir, more than 1,000 floral tributes, and finally the clergy. Behind the hearse were only the relatives and deputies belonging to the peasant and democratic parties.

The body of Raditch was placed for the time being in the tomb containing the bodies of his nephew, Paul Raditch, and the deputy, Bassarichkek, who were killed during the shootings in parliament. At the tomb the only address was made by an elderly peasant, the oldest president of any of the organizations of the province.

After the funeral the peasants returned to the railroad station and made their plans to leave Zagreb tonight. The day, which had been awaited with misgivings because of racial differences in the kingdom of the Serbs, Croats and Slovenes, passed without incident, according to the Avila News agency, and in perfect peace.

Archbishop Bower and five bishops officiated at the service. General Mattich, commander of the fourth army, represented the king, accompanied by an orderly bearing the royal wreath which was inscribed "To Stefan Raditch from Alexander II."

Among the other wreaths was one of thorns tied with a ribbon of the Croatian national colors to which was affixed the bullet which wounded Raditch.

Two spectators were slightly injured when a stand erected on the route from the house to the cemetery collapsed.

MARINE PLANE FELL INTO RAVINE IN NICARAGUA

MANAGUA, Nicaragua, Aug. 12—(AP)—Captain Euville D. Howard, Berkeley, Calif., and his mechanic, Gunnery Sergeant James F. Hill, Fredericksburg, Va., while flying along the Coco river crashed a few hundred yards from the base of Captain Edson's marine patrol which on last Tuesday routed a number of rebels. The plane was completely wrecked but the aviators were unhurt.

Lieutenant Vernon L. Guymon brought news of the accident to Managua today. Howard experienced difficulty with downward currents as he attempted to drop provisions to Edson and his plane slipped, crashing into a narrow ravine.

Guymon said he circled around the fallen plane several times and when he observed that the two occupants were unhurt he signalled to Captain Edson's patrol to go to Howard's assistance. Guymon continued on to Managua, where he arrived today.

BECAME LOST IN THE WOODS IN NEW HAMPSHIRE

LANCASTER, N. H., Aug. 12—(AP)—Two campers who had wandered about lost in the woods of Coos county since Friday, were found today by searchers. They were Rev. Hubert Wood of New York and Daniel A. Sullivan of Lancaster.

The two men were camping at East Diamond and set out to go fishing at 1 o'clock Friday afternoon and became lost in the woods. When they failed to return next day, 25 experienced woodsmen took up the search. Two of the woodsmen found them this forenoon ten miles from their camp on the Diamond stream, following the brook in the hope of reaching a settlement.

GRASPED HIS BROTHER FROM EAGLE'S TALONS

LUBEC, Me., Aug. 12—(AP)—Bravery of his 5 year old brother saved Buddy, two year odl son of Guy Lyons of Straight Bay, Me., when an immense eagle swooped to the yard of the Lyons farm yesterday and seized the youngster in its talons.

The older boy, undaunted by the seven-foot wing spread of the big bird grasped the ankle of Buddy and tugged him clear from the eagle's clutches.

The bird soared to a nearby tree and remained there all day. It was the first time that an eagle has been known to attempt to carry off a child in this territory, although the birds, protected by federal law have raided poultry yards.

OBITUARY

James B. Laughlin

PITTSBURGH, Aug. 12—(AP)—James B. Laughlin, a director and former treasurer of the Jones and Laughlin Steel Company here, died today at his summer home at Hyannisport, Mass. Giant Redwood Trees Are Menaced By Fire

Forest Fire Has Defied the Efforts of 300 Men to Bring It Under Control.

YOSEMITE, Calif., Aug. 12—(AP)—The Merced grove of giant redwood trees was menaced today by a raging forest fire which, after sweeping over 15,000 acres of the Stanislaus National forest, defied the desperate efforts of 300 men to bring it under control.

Reports from the national forest service, in charge of the fire fighting, said that unless the fire was controlled it probably would eat its way into the park because of the topography of the country.

The fire fighters were handicapped, officials said, because of the inaccessibility of the fire zone, making difficult the transportation of men and supplies.

Park Supt. E. P. Leavitt said the fire was 25 miles from Yosemite and was headed north to the Merced grove on the extreme western border of the park.

ROY C. TOOMBS TO FACE INSURANCE COMMISSIONERS

ST. LOUIS, Aug. 12—(AP)—Released at Chicago today by order of Chief of Police Joseph A. Gerk of St. Louis, Roy C. Toombs, president of the International Life Insurance company, was expected to arrive here tomorrow morning and face insurance commissioners of ten states.

Toombs was arrested in Chicago last night by order of Circuit Attorney Howard Sidener. While no information was made public against the president of the company, a photograph of a check for $185,000, issued June 1, 1928, was the evidence on which the arrest was made.

The release came today, Chief Gerk said, when Toombs signified his willingness to appear before the commissioners who have been investigating the alleged missing securities of the company totalling approximately $3,500,000. The request that Toombs be released was issued by Sidener.

The state insurance commissioners said they had merely presented their report of their investigations yesterday to Circuit Attorney Sidener and Attorney General Stratton Shartel. Neither Sidener nor Shartel could be located tonight, and the commissioners said they did not know what formal charges, if any, would be brought against Toombs.

The commissioners said their report to the circuit attorney contained sufficient evidence to warrant the filing of charges of "embezzlement and perjury, converting the funds of the company to his own use" and other infractions of the general law and the Missouri state insurance statutes.

SPEEDBOAT BROKE UP DURING TRIAL RUN

DETROIT, Aug. 12—(AP)—The speedboat Miss America VI, Gar Wood's new Harmsworth trophy defender, launched yesterday, broke up in the north channel of the St. Clair river at Algonac, near here, today while on her second trial run.

Wood, world's premier speedboat pilot, and his mechanic, Olin Johnson, Detroit, were thrown into the water and painfully but not seriously injured. They were rescued, Johnson unconscious, by two trailing boats. Johnson was then taken to a hospital.

First reports were that the powerful boat, equipped with two 12-cylinder 800 horsepower Packard motors, had exploded, but Wood said the craft had fallen to pieces under the strain of the terrific speed at which he was sending her over the water. Wood did not estimate the speed he attained, but declared it was the fastest he had ever driven a boat.

Wood had planned to pilot the boat in the international Harmsworth trophy race on the Detroit river next month.

He announced late today that a new Harmsworth defender would be built at once and equipped with the same type of motors as those which powered the Miss America VI. He said he would have the craft ready to defend the trophy next month.

GUARDSMEN RAID GAMBLING PLACES NEAR NEW ORLEANS

Acting on Governor Long's Orders National Guardsmen Raided Fashionable Clubs and Seized Paraphernalia—Newspaper Photographer Was Beaten Unconscious When He Attempted to Take a Picture—Guardsmen Rescued Him—Col. Ray Ordered the Soldiers to Shoot Without Hesitation if the Order Was Given

NEW ORLEANS, Aug. 12—Threats of Gov. Huey P. Long to suppress gambling in St. Bernard parish went executed today when national guardsmen, acting on the governor's orders, raided two fashionable clubs and seized gambling paraphernalia.

Names of approximately 225 persons found in the two places—the Jai-Alai Fronton and the Arabi club, located just outside the New Orleans city limits—were taken for future reference. The patrons, many of them women, were released after being questioned.

The only casualty of the raids was Neil Simmes, staff photographer of the Times Picayune, attacked and beaten by about 50 men as he attempted to take a picture. Guardsmen rescued him. He was unconscious when found.

Governor Long, who was in New Orleans last night, heard that the two places had reopened. He issued an order to Adjutant General Raymond H. Fleming to see that they were closed. Unwilling to trust the order to a messenger, the governor travelled several miles in a taxicab to deliver it in person. Within half an hour the raid was over.

Colonel E. P. Roy, who was placed in personal command of the raids, warned his men to shoot without hesitation if the order was given.

Three officers and five men went to the Jai-Alai club and two officers and five men went to the Arabi club. The establishments face each other on the same street.

Heavily armed, the soldiers entered the clubs. Women screamed and several fainted. A shot rang out, believed to have been fired by a sentry on guard to warn the gamblers of what was taking place. There was a quick grab for money on the gambling tables. Order was restored in a few moments.

A big bonfire celebration was held this afternoon and all inflammable gambling paraphernalia was burned.

The rest was destroyed with axes. What disposition will be made of the money had not been decided today, although it was generally understood it would revert to some state fund.

General Fleming said his troops would watch the gambling houses in St. Bernard parish and that if any of them attempted to reopen they would receive the same treatment meted out to the two clubs today.

One of the men who operated a device told General Fleming after the raid that he "had a hunch" not to open last night.

"I wanted to open but I had a hunch something might happen," he explained. "Finally, I decided to toss a coin. If it came heads I was to open and if it came tails I was to stay closed. It came heads and now look what has happened."

SMITH TO CONFER WITH DEM. LEADERS TODAY

ALBANY, N. Y., Aug. 12—(AP)—Before putting the finishing touches on his acceptance speech, Governor Smith will confer tomorrow with a group of farm leaders from the west and south, some if not all of whom have expressed dissatisfaction with the stand of the republicans on agriculture.

The exact make-up of the delegation that will come to Albany for a round table discussion of the farm question with the democratic nominee has not been disclosed, but it is expected to include at least half a dozen of the men who have had a big part in the fight in Washington over relief legislation.

Arrangements for the meeting have been made by George N. Peek of Illinois, chairman of the committee of twenty-two on agriculture, who recently declared for Smith, and it was he a forerunner of a series of conferences the governor will hold during the next few days with men whose advice he will seek regarding the conduct of his campaign.

The expectation is that Peek will bring with him at least two of the delegates to the republican convention in Kansas City who waged a losing fight for a farm plank in line with the principle of the McNary-Haugen bill vetoed by President Coolidge.

Earl C. Smith of Illinois and Frank W. Murphy of Minnesota, both of whom served on the platform committee at Kansas City, are counted on by Smith advisers to be here.

STRATON WILL NOT DEBATE WITH SMITH IN CHURCH

NEW YORK, Aug. 12—(AP)—The Rev. Dr. John Roach Straton, pastor of Calvary Baptist church, in a message read by his son, Hillyer, from his father's pulpit tonight, refused to meet Gov. Alfred E. Smith in debate in that edifice.

The young Straton conducted the evening service in the absence of his father who is at his summer home at Greenwood lake, N. Y.

"I stand ready to meet the governor at any time, except the Lord's day and in any suitable place," Dr. Straton wrote, "and I sincerely hope that he may be led to take my acceptance of his challenge at its face value."

The pulpit of Calvary church was used as the rostrum for a debate between Dr. Straton and William A. Brady, theatrical producer, when the minister opposed him in a debate on the theatre.

ACHIEVEMENTS BY STUDENTS AT JUNIOR SHORT COURSE, C.A.C.

STORRS, Aug. 12—(AP)—At a camp fire service today which closed the tenth annual junior short course at Connecticut Agricultural college held during the past week, eight boys and girls received special recognition for distinctive achievement in 4-H club work. MILWAUKEE, Wis., Aug. 12—(AP)—A planned picnic outing for boys of the St. Stephen's Athletic club of Milwaukee, was a tragic failure this morning when two of the youths were killed and nine injured, some seriously, when the truck taking them to the picnic grounds was struck by a train.

TWO YOUNG BROTHERS DROWNED IN CANAL

BOSTON, Aug. 12—(AP)—Three-year-old Alfred Creedon, stumbled over a piece of iron and fell into Broad canal in the Charles river today. He sank from sight and his brother, James, 7, dived in after him although the latter could not swim. They were both drowned.

HAD DEFRAUDED EMBRYO SCENARIO WRITERS

LOS ANGELES, Calif., Aug. 12—(AP)—Accused by post office inspectors with being the leader of a ring of Hollywood "scenario agents," declared to have defrauded hundreds of embryo writers out of approximately $100,000, Luther N. Hanger, alias Zane De Mille, Roberto Francisco, Jacques Fougere and Estelle De Marselle, was held here today on a fraud complaint.

The Hollywood ring, federal officers said, recruited its victims from the ranks of hopeful authors throughout the country, some of them as far east as New York, Pennsylvania and Connecticut.

The method of operation, the officers said, was to solicit scenarios, inform the writers that they had "placed" the stories with various film companies and demand additional sums for writing them and placing them in marketable condition.

Hanger is said to have operated under the firm names of: The American Writer, Shadow Stage Guild, Nordstron & Nordstron, Spartan Play Co., Zang De Mille Service corporation, Writers' Placement bureau, Authors' Service institute, and dozens of individual names. A corps of a dozen secretaries and stenographers were employed by Hanger, postal agents said.

FOURTH ANNUAL OUTING OF JEWISH FARMERS

HARTFORD, Aug. 12—(AP)—More than 1,000 Jewish farmers of New England took part today in their association's fourth annual outing, the program of which included a tour of several Connecticut farms, a meeting and picnic at the Rockville fairgrounds and the awarding of prizes by the Jewish Agricultural Society, Inc., an organization which seeks to promote the cause of Jewish farmers of 11 states.

At the afternoon meeting the farmers listened to talks by Governor Trumbull, Gabriel Davidson, general manager of the Jewish Agricultural Society, Inc.; S. McLean Buckingham, newly appointed commissioner of agriculture, and Sidney Edwards, chief of the state bureau of markets.

Of the 12 prizes awarded by the society in the New England states, 11 were won by Connecticut farmers.

SENATOR VARE SHOWS STEADY IMPROVEMENT

ATLANTIC CITY, N. J., Aug. 12—(AP)—Dr. John J. Shaw, who has been attending Senator-elect William S. Vare since the latter was stricken with partial paralysis in his Chelsea home, ten days ago, said today that his patient continued to show steady improvement.

(AP)—Dr. John J. SETAOIN SHRDLU

"He had a very good night and a very good day," said Dr. Shaw. "He sat up again today and appears to be progressing steadily. The paralytic condition is slowly clearing up. This is a tedious process and will take time."

He added that the senator was now partaking of food and that his temperature and respiration continues normal.

ROBBERS MADE VICTIM TO DRIVE AUTOMOBILE

STAMFORD, Aug. 12—(AP)—Three young robbers who acted at midnight held up Frederick Hurley, night attendant of the Stamford Oil Co. gas station, at the point of a gun, emptied the drawer of $50 and then commanded him to get into their stolen machine. They made him get out after driving 12 miles, outside the limits of Portchester.

The three men perpetrated the hold-up after asking Hurley for a valve and drawing the gun on him when he returned. Hurley gave the police of Portchester a good description of the trio, who told him that the machine was a stolen car.

MISSING MAN'S BODY FOUND IN RESERVOIR

STAMFORD, Aug. 12—(AP)—Two days after starting to work on a farm here, Marty Levine, 21, Bronx, N. Y., disappeared on Thursday and today his body was found in the reservoir. He left a note of his intention to commit suicide at the end of which he asked to be buried alongside the grave of his brother here.

FOUR INJURED WHEN CARS COLLIDE ON BRIDGE

(Special ot The Bulletin)

WILLIMANTIC, Aug. 13—A Maxwell touring car was wrecked about 11 o'clock Saturday night and four Hartford men who occupied it were painfully injured when the machine collided with the one-way river bridge separating the towns of Mansfield and Coventry in Flanders. The quartet, who were taken to St. Joseph's hospital for treatment, were Romeo Lemay, 14 York street, lacerations of the scalp and leg; Alphe Lemay, 70 Francis street, lacerations of the face; Philip Martel, 121 Allen place, fracture of the arm, and Henry Martel, 597 Zion street, lacerations about the face. The car, which was owned by Henry Martel, was towed to a local garage. It is understood that he was the operator and that he was notified by state police from the Stafford Springs barracks, who investigated the mishap, to appear in court today.

Mrs. Estella Josephine Barrows, 75, died at her home in Chaplin Sunday morning after an illness of some duration. She was the widow of Charles Leander Shumway, and was born in Mansfield, Nov. 2, 1853, a daughter of Ezra and Lodicia (Harrow) Abbott. She is survived by one daughter, Mrs. Grace Albee of Mansfield, and a sister, Mrs. Emma Church of Chaplin, besides several nieces and nephews.

Entering upon the second year since its location in this city, the Hutchings Organ Co. Thursday of this week will make a shipment of two organs containing some of the late patents, the inventive work of Fred J. Flaherty, who is in charge of the plant here. The operation of these instruments will be displayed to the public Tuesday evening at 8 o'clock when an "open house" has been arranged through the chamber of commerce. The plant is located at the corner of Brook and Chapman streets and the concern is one of the best established companies of its kind in the world.

The storm of Friday night put 90 telephones of the Willimantic exchange out of commission but through the prompt work of the repair force of the Southern New England Telephone Co., service has been restored to the subscribers so affected. According to Manager John C. Frazier, the storm seemed to travel toward New London and the exchange in that city was badly affected. Twenty-one telephones were temporarily "lost" in the Lebanon exchange, while Stafford was only slightly affected. Other than a slight impairment of the electric light service of the Rockville-Willimantic Lighting Co., the storm did no other damage here.

Noah D. Webster, for 58 years connected with the Willimantic Savings institute, for the greater part of that lengthy period as treasurer, has requested the incorporators to relieve him of his responsibilities. Reluctantly, the incorporators have granted the request but they have succeeded in persuading him to continue his connection with the bank as secretary. As treasurer, he will be succeeded by Sherwood H. Potter of Brooklyn, who will assume his duties Aug. 16. Under the administration of Mr. Webster, the institute has grown to be one of the strongest and most prosperous banks in eastern Connecticut. As secretary, he will continue to meet patrons and his many friends as usual. Mr. Potter has had a large banking experience and comes to this city highly recommended.

The right to operate of Dona Bernard of this city has been suspended, according to a notification received over the week-end by Police Chief Thomas F. Grady from the state motor vehicle department from Robbins B. Stoeckel, state commissioner of motor vehicles. Commissioner Stoeckel has restored the operator's license of Edward Leclair of 92 Hope street.

The purchase of Windham field by the city for a memorial for the veterans of all wars has been completed. The sale will have to be sanctioned by superior court order, however, before the transfer of the deed to the property from the receivers of the Quidnick-Windham Manufacturing Co. to the city. This, however, is a technicality.

The democratic town committee has sent out invitations for a meeting to be held Monday evening at 7:30 o'clock on the third floor of the Capitol theatre building on Main street for the purpose of forming a Smith-Robinson organization here. Town Clerk Frank P. Fenton will be in charge of the session. There will be speakers of state-wide prominence.

At Columbia Lake Saturday, 80 members of the Sunday school of the Methodist Episcopal church enjoyed a delightful picnic. There was a basket luncheon and games were played while many of those present took advantage of the bathing privileges. The committee comprised John A. Wrana, Mrs. Albert Spellman and Mrs. E. Byrd Freeman.

Harry A. Brusie of East Hartford, noted horse race driver, sustained a fractured left clavicle and was an overnight patient at St. Joseph's hospital where the injury was attended by Dr. E. J. Ottenheimer. Friday afternoon at Pascoag, R. I., he figured in a crash during a circuit meet and came to the hospital here in the evening.

Failure to negotiate the "old bend" curve at South Windham near the home of E. W. Avery early Saturday morning resulted in a Ford touring car crashing into a tree. The car, in which were two Munson, Mass. people, a man and his sister, was badly damaged. The road was slippery due to the rain.

Friday afternoon at the range off the Natchaug river, members of the police department, including Captain Frank McLean and Lieutenant Edward P. NOANK

STRANGER WANTED AX BUT NOT FOR NOTHING

Several workmen were digging a pit for the new heater at the school house cellar the other morning when Elmer Baker's shovel hit something that looked like a stone. It was the color of the dirt. He dug it out and found that it was part of a stone axe like the Indians used while fighting around the fishing village. It must be over 135 years old. Boss M. Tryon, rubbed his glasses to get a good look at the Indian war ax. It is wonderful how they could make it. "Let me tell you a story about the Indians," the boss said. "When I was a little fellow around the age of 9, my grandfather set me on his knee one evening and told me how the Indians fought around Connecticut. Where the school house is now standing was a meadow with tall weeds and grass and a place to skate in the winter time. It was there where the Indians had a battle—no houses then in sight." For hours he would talk about what his grandfather told him about those early times. I fell to sleep, listening to the story about the Indians. Mr. Baker was proud over his find and was showing it to some friends at the waiting room, when a man from Cape Cod saw it. He asked if the finder wanted to sell the stone axe. "No! but if you want it I will give it to you" "That is my hobby, getting hold of old stuff like that." Shaking Baker's hand when saying good bye, Baker found the stranger had left a $5 bill for the Indian axe.

Mrs. Duncan McDonald was in Westerly recently for a visit.

CHAMPION WALKER RETAINS HIS TITLE

Daniel Roberston, champion walker of the village and Harold Sweet left in a large sedan with managers and a starter for North Stonington Friday afternoon to have a race for the championship of Noank and a bet of a pair of shoes against a Sunday hat. It is 3 miles from there to the village. Manager Walter Buddington was for Champion Short Step Robertston while Manager Gordon Clark had Two Step Sweet in charge. It was 2:30 when Starter William Franklin fired the pistol. Then the race got under way. Roberston was taking it easy holding his wind to the finishing line. At the town hall, Sweet was going like a ball of fire, thinking he could do it in 10 minutes. Both managers were telling them what to do. Reaching Mystic, Champion Roberston was ahead by only a few feet. The crowd on the street cheered him and the All-Irish basket ball players that knew Short Step Roberston said, "Go to it Daniel and give him the heavy oil!" Getting down to Elm street, in front of Rose cottage, both men were even. Sweet was going strong and with the finish line in sight as the mill workers were on their way home. They stopped to see the foot race. A crowd lined both sides of East Main street to cheer the walkers. The judges were Frank Eldredge, Alden Hewitt and Nora Burdick. Manager Buddington said "Let out, Roberston!" and he did, crossing the line the winner with only 40 inches to spare, so Champ Roberston holds the honor still. The time was Roberston 1 hr 49 minutes, H. Sweet 1 hr. 48 minutes.

The Martha Winthrop club of New London held its annual outing the past week at the Clark Studio Tea Garden, Noank. A delicious luncheon was served on the terrice, after which the members of the club played bridge, there being seven tables. Miss Thelma Douglas won first prize, Mrs. J. R. Latham second, and Mrs. Wm. Guest third. The club left at five o'clock after an unanimous vote that the afternoon had been a perfect one. The officers of the club are Mrs. H. H. Mochon, president, Mrs. Harry Searle, vice president, Mrs. Arthur Beckwith and Mrs. Burton Gates outing committee and Mrs. E. A. Henkle, treasurer.

The worst rain storm of the season came Friday evening. The lightning was sharp and the thunder was heavy. Lightning struck in some places at Groton Long Point. East Main street was a young river; automobiles were going by with water up to the hubs. All that was needed was a pair of oars to row down the street. Branches were blown down along Pearl street. Cellars were flooded and one automobile got water in the engine and would not go. The driver worked out in the rain, got all wet, got mad, then gave Henry Ford a kick, saying, "Stay there!" He got out his sedan and towed the stalled car back to the village from Groton Long Point. The fishermen saw the hurricane coming, the cloud in the glass falling. They put out extra lines during the afternoon.

Miss Marie Whitney of New London is spending a week with her cousin, Mrs. Peter Shandor.

Joe Butson was at Lantern Hill Friday.

Sam Carson has returned from a short visit in Eagleville.

DANIELSON

MUCH DAMAGE DONE TO TELEPHONE SERVICE BY STORM

(Special to The Bulletin)

DANIELSON, August 12—Telephone service in Danielson received one of the most disastrous setbacks this summer, that it has witnessed in many years, when after the electrical storm, received here on Friday evening, a checkup revealed over 300 stations out of service and over 50 out in the Moosup exchange. The storm started in New London and followed the line through to Putnam, where it broke. In Danielson, it seemed that the height of the storm was reached. Saturday and until late Sunday afternoon telephone repairmen were out on duty, restoring service to normal.

In the rural districts much damage was done to the already late crops. There was no word of anyone being injured by the sharp bolts of lightning, and observations taken in the outlying districts did not reveal any washouts of highways or railroad embankments.

Mrs. Harmon Francis Smith, for a number of years a native of East Killingly died at her home in Putnam Heights today. Mrs. Smith was born in Woodstock on July 9, 1837, the daughter of George and Hermine (Hayward Basto. Mrs. Smith received her education in the schools of Woodstock and Killingly, where the family later removed. After the death of her husband, Samuel Smith, Mrs. Smith left her home in East Killingly to reside with her son, Frank H., of Putnam Heights. She is survived by five sons, William B., James E., Robert and Edwin A. of East Killingly, and Charles of California and one daughter, Mrs. Nellie M. Hammon of Boston. The body was brought to her former home in East Killingly by Undertaker A. F. Wood of Danielson.

Funeral services were held this afternoon for William N. King of Pomfret Landing, from the undertaking parlors of L. E. Kennedy in Danielson. The service was conducted by the Rev. Frank Abbott of Danielson. The bearers were George King, Arthur Spatcher, David Baker and Clarence Watson. Burial was in the Westfield cemetery. A committal service was conducted by Rev. Abbott.

The veil of mystery, regarding the disappearance of Contractor Eugene Gobielle of Worcester, who disappeared from Danielson several weeks ago, is still dense and little information is available at present relative to his whereabouts.

The theory advanced that Gobielle had become a victim of foul play has been discounted since it was learned he was seen in St. John's, Canada. Today information gathered from Worcester authorities, said little trace of him has been found since he left his Canadian haunts over two weeks ago. The statement given Canadian officials by the boarding house owner that Gobielle was to return within a few days is believed to be a blind, as the time for his return is long past due.

Bids are now being made for the uncompleted task of the Danielson contractors by others and it is believed the highway running off Main street will be completed late in the fall months. According to the highway department there remains 7,051 feet of uncompleted bituminous roadway and bids have been asked by the department for the completion of the work.

Today at the Day Kimball hospital, Mitzi Maleak and Chester Petreas were reported as considerably improved. Both are recovering from fractures of the skull. Mitzi is suffering from a fracture of the jaw also. The time allotted for the indications of internal injuries to make their appearance has passed, and it is thought the boys will regain health soon.

J. Arthur Atwood, Elbert L. Darbie N. Lorne Greig, and Sabin S. Russell were elected as vice chairman for the town of Killingly of the Windham County Hoover-Curtis Republican club organization meeting held at the Clarence W. Bowen mansion in Woodstock hill Friday afternoon. The above mentioned leaders will direct the affairs of the organization in Danielson and Killingly, during the remaining campaign months.

Large strings of bass are being taken from certain sections of Alexander's lake, reports indicate. On open days the lake is generally thronged with the anglers. Many specimens have been obtained by Danielson sportsmen, who say that the body of water is one of the best bass haunts in the country, apart from the fact that they are difficult to net.

Traffic delays of several minutes each were common in Attawaugan today, where the one way traffic is in effect. The lines of cars passing over the new state roadway at the village today, wege detained at either end and were allowed to pass slowly over the new stretch of concrete highway. The volume of Sunday traffic over this route resulted in the delays.

The contractors are now laying the remaining half of the highway. On Saturday morning the large concrete mixer began its first pour of the stretch and by noontime had completed several hundred feet of the route

Since the question regarding the disposal of sewage by emptying it into the river has risen, many are in favor of the plans now being worked out by officials of the state wate, commission, relative to the removal of this method of disposal.

A story, which to many will be accepted as a yarn, but history serves as a base for its truthfulness, was that before the sewage passed off into the river, the Quinebaug, as far north as Danielson was at one time a shad and salmon run, and many of the older residents recall the days of the year when the fathers spent hours on the banks of the stream hauling in the fish, that have since disappeared, due to the construction of dams and to the pollution of streams by the sewage.

Not long ago, a column of The Bulletin was devoted to a story relating to the times when the salt water fish were taken in Norwich from the Thames, of which the Quinebaug is a tributary. This tale, it is believed revived the memories of the days when the schools of such fish swam up the streams as far north as Danielson.

If the action of the state is followed by every city and town, the rivers will be relieved of their present contamination and after a period of time probably will regain their one time purity. To follow the state's plans will involve the spending of several thousand dollars for the construction of such filtration beds as are in use in Danielson. Even with the streams relieved of the sewage, the shad and salmon will not be taken from the river in Danielson, but the water commission feels that health conditions will be better than at the present time.

PUTNAM

HOME FOR AGED PEOPLE DEDICATED AT ABINGTON

(Special to The Bulletin)

PUTNAM, Aug. 12—More than 100 people were in attendance at the dedication exercises held Saturday afternoon at the "Haven," home for aged and helpless people, in Abington.

The structure, now a beautiful infirmary, was once the Adventist church of Abington and has several historical incidents connected with it. A few years ago it was taken over by Mrs. Susan Griggs, formerly of Norwich, and after complete renovations took place Mrs. Griggs opened the Haven for the destitute. Its success brought a number of bequests and Mrs. Griggs began operations to enlarge her property.

The work has been recently completed and now the institution is equipped with modern improvements, in addition to its professional assistants.

The programme opened with a historical address by Rev. George B. Hawkes, pastor of the Congregational church in Abington. Following Mr. Hawkes' address, Mrs. Geo. Ingalls of Danielson presented the Haven with a framed motto, "God is Our Refuge and Strength." This is to be given a place in the assembly room.

A delegation of the United Workers of Norwich, were present to witness the work of one of their former associates, Mrs. Griggs. A large picture of Rev. Charles Northrup, for 20 years pastor of the Norwich Congregational church and also for a number of years, city missionary in Norwich, was presented to the Haven, by the Norwich group of workers. Mrs. Arthur Chaffey, field agent of the adult welfare department of the state, was present. Mrs. Chaffey spoke briefly, commenting upon the valuable work being done in the community by Mrs. Griggs. Rev. Dr. Sherrod D. Soule, D. D., of Hartford, noted historian of Windham county, and a native of Hampton, also addressed the gathering. A letter of greeting was read by Rev. Hawkes, from Rev. Yvo O. Wain of Niantic, formerly of Abington. Mr. Wain, in his letter, regretted that he could not have been present to witness the dedication of the home he had assisted in bringing about. Other speakers were Miss Emma Allen of Worcester, a hospital instructor, and Rev. Leonard B. Richards, of Pomfret who delivered the dedicational prayer.

The programme was continued with a number of vocal selections by Mrs. Arthur Gallun and musical selections by the Christian Endeavor society of the Congregational church of Abington.

KOKERNACK IS FINED FOR BREACH OF PEACE

(Special to The Bulletin)

PUTNAM, Aug. 12—After a delay of over a month, the city court of Putnam heard the charges against Stanley Kokernack, ex-Dudley policeman, who attempted assault upon State Policeman Elton T. Nolan of Danielson barracks on July 12.

In court Saturday morning Kokernack was charged with breach of peace, the charges of attempted assault and transportation of intoxicating liquors being dropped. Kokernack was represented by his counsel, Attorney Irving H. Miron, who entered a plea of guilty. Officer Nolan related in the court, the scene that took place on Front street on the morning of July 12, when he arrested Kokernack at gunpoint, drawing his weapon to prevent a directly aimed blow at his head. Judge Geissler imposed a fine of $15 and costs of the court.

Kokernack, at the time of his arrest, was in possession of a large car in which were found a number of large cans, each containing a portion of the liquor that had bee nin them before the load was delivered. The car was returned Saturday by police officials.

PUTNAM WOMEN ORGANIZE LOCAL REPUBLICAN CLUB

(Special to The Bulletin.)

PUTNAM, Aug. 12—The republican batteries in Windham county since opening their fire last week have concentrated upon this section of the county, each day moving into a new sector to obtain new voters for the campaign. On Friday evening, a corup of women, under the direction of Miss Katherine Byrne, vice chairman of the republican state central committee, met at the community rooms of the Putnam Savings bank and organized a Putnam unit of the Windham County Republican club, with the following officers being elected: Chairman, Mrs. Walter W. Rich; vice chairman, Mrs. Genevieve Letters; secretary, Miss Bertha Plessis; treasurer, Miss Anna Levitt; caucus committees: Mrs Genevieve Letters, Miss Ellen Wheelock, Mrs. J. J. Dupre, Miss Bertha Plessis, Miss Anna Levitt, Mrs. Walter Rich, Mrs. C. Russell Bowen, Mrs. W. R. Barber, Mrs. I. H. Miron, Mrs. Alice Carpenter.

During the past week, the republicans have established headquarters in the Putnam Savings bank, to be used as registration rooms Since the rooms were opened several new voters have been recorded on the republican roll call.

Miss Katherine Byrne, vice chairman of the state central committee for the republican party, stated Saturday that a club similar to the one organized in Putnam will be in operation in every town in the county, before September 6.

The electrical storm here Friday evening, crippled telephone service in this district, resulting in 100 stations being cut off from service. The majority of telephones out of order, being in the outlying districts. Saturday the linemen were engaged in repairing the damage and by night nearly all were reported to be functioning.

During the storm, Friday evening, lightning tickling along the electric light lines cut off power and at different intervals, the city was in darkness for nearly three quarters of an hour. Operators at the power stations soon had current restored, before the storm had cleared away. In the rural districts the intense rains proved disastrous to the growing crops, several acres of corn were levelled with the ground, and much damage done in orchards. High winds caused much damage to trees along the highways.

An advertising scheme originated by the merchants of the city, attracted the attention of many Saturday afternoon, when 200 balloons, with a number of these toys containing a slip entitling the finder to an article of merchandise, were released from the Elks' block. It was exnected that a few of the balloons would travel through the air and land in some surrounding town, but a sudden cloudburst brought the inflated globes to the ground and a scramble among children on the street below, resulted in the merchants' offers going to them.

Sanitary Engineer W. R. Copeland, of the state water commission was in Putnam Saturday and cooperated with City Engineer George W. Perry, relative to the erection of a crib, to be used in the measurements of sewage flow into the Quinebaug river. Engineer Perry said today that Mr. Copeland inspected the coke pits, recently erected by the Eastern Connecticut Power company used for the purpose of keeping the poisonous waste materials from the river. Mr. Copeland informed Mr. Perry that he was pleased with the action taken by the power company and was also glad of the cooperation given him by the city of Putnam, regarding the removal of sewage from the river.

Mrs. William R. Taylor and son Charles Cushman of Farrows street, left Sunday by automobile for a two weeks trip to Maine.

Miss Mary Woodbury, a nurse in a Philadelphia hospital, arrived in Putnam Friday night to spend her vacation with her parents in Woodstock.

Boy Scouts of America, Troop 1, returned Saturday afternoon from a week at Camp Kennedy at Webster lake. During the week reports show that no accidents of any nature occurred and excellent camping weather was enjoyed. The camp was in charge of Scoutmaster Edward Decario.

The monthly shift on the police force became effective today. Officer Benoi Durand, who has performed duty on the day shift for the past month was transferred to the night shift and Officer Alpherie Sponcey began day duties this morning. Officer Joseph Pare on night duty in the business section was transferred to duty in the north end of the city, with Officer Durand assigned to the beat in the south end of the city.

The girls of St. Mary's church, who have been at the boy scout camp at Crystal lake in Eastford during the past week, returned to Putnam Friday evening. This session of the camp conducted for the girls of the parish was arranged by Rev. U. O. Bellerose, pastor of the church, after the Boy Scout troops had returned. During the session, the camp was governed by Alderman and Mrs. Eugene Mizneault and a council of older girls.

Miss Margaret Sherlock, secretary in the law offices of Torrey and Geissler, is enjoying her annual vacation.

Adelard Mayo, of North Grosvenordale, whose automobile figured in a collision in Mechanicsville a week ago, was arraigned in court before Justice F. P. Tourtelotte, charged with reckless driving. He entered a plea of not guilty and was granted a continuance of one week, the case to be heard on Saturday, August 18. Mayo, was arrested by Officer Carmody of the state police barracks at Danielson, after an investigation of the accident. Miss Renee Scott of Hartford, who figured in the accident received a fracture of the arm and collar bone.

Today parents and friends of the members of the Headquarters company motored to Camp Trumbull in Niantic and spent the day as guests of the company. At noon the visitors joined with the soldiers at the mess hall, where a chicken dinner was served.

Telegrams containing the congratulations of the members of the Windham County Republican club, organized at the Bald Hill farm, in Woodstock Friday, were sent to Herbert Hoover on his 54th birthday. Clarence W. Bowen of Woodstock hill, organizer of the club stated that the republican nominee for the presidency was informed of the Windham county organization when it was only a few minutes old, at the time the telegram was sent to Mr. Hoover.

The radio brought to hundreds of eager listeners in Putnam and vicinity the speech of acceptance of Herbert Hoover on Saturday evening. In many of the radio retail stores of the city, apparatus was installed on the sidewalks and numbers braved the heavy mists to listen to the speech of the nominee, delivered from the athletic field of Stanford university in California. Due to the disturbances in atmospheric conditions, radio reception was somewhat marred.

Tiny Mosquitoes Carry Disease

Viciously Attack Defenseless Sleepers At Night

Mosquitoes are ruthless in their attack on their human prey. Under cover of darkness they cause constant annoyance and untold misery.

So treacherous are these tiny insects that civilization has been retarded where mosquitoes are found in large numbers.

Nothing can spoil a person's rest and disposition like the presence of even one solitary buzzing mosquito in the bedroom. Many a one has spent a frantic half hour in fruitless efforts to find and swat one of these tormenting pests.

Mosquitoes not only disturb rest but inject disease germs directly into the bloodstream. Scratching the itching bite often caused blood poisoning.

Try FLY-TOX and see how easily it does the work! You do not even have to see the pest. Just spray this fragrant and stainless liquid freely about the room, on screens and curtains.

FLY-TOX is a scientific insecticide for the home developed at Mellon Institute of Industrial Research by Rex Research Fellowship. Sold in bottles with the blue label.

COLCHESTER

THIS RECKLESS DRIVER CERTAIN TO GET HIS

(Special to The Bulletin.)

COLCHESTER, Aug. 12—Joseph Zarcow, of 54 Windsor street, Thompsonville, Conn., is to be brought before Justice of the Peace Charles F. Brown at 5 o'clock Monday afternoon as a result of having driven his car into two other cars on the New London turnpike, about 7 o'clock Friday evening. Zarcow, who was driving a Buick roadster, Conn., license No. 52241, was coming from New London toward Hartford. When he reached a point near the old Collins Keeney farm, about three miles below Colchester village, he sideswiped a Buick coupe, license No. Conn. 7740, operated by W. H. Scoville, an insurance appraiser of Hartford. The Zarcow car did not stop after hitting the Scoville car, but Mr. Scoville succeeded in reading the license number on the fleeing car. The Scoville car sustained a badly damaged fender but Mr. Scoville kept on toward Colchester. Upon reaching the village, he noticed several automobiles parked by the highway near the Dr. E. J. Howland residence and one bore the same license number as the machine which had sped away after sideswiping his car. Investigation showed that Zarcow's car had collided with a Ford sedan, N. J. license No. H-21773 owned by Wm. O'Brien, of Jersey City, just as the O'Brien car was leaving the highway to turn into the entrance of the Dr. Howland property. At this point, Zarcow was placed under arrest by Constable Harold F. Brown and ordered to appear in court Monday afternoon. All three autos had damaged fenders and the occupants of the O'Brien car were badly shaken up.

TERRIFYING ELECTRIC STORM DOES CONSIDERABLE DAMAGE

The severe electrical storm between 10 and 11 Friday evening, caused considerable inconvenience and resulted in some damage to property. The flashes of lightning were almost continuous for over half an hour. Lightning struck a transformer on an electric light pole near the Atlantic & Pacific store and the pole was a mass of flames. The electric fluid passed along beneath the A. & P. store and instantly the floor joists became ablaze. By quick work, the current was shut off and the blaze was extinguished before much damage was done. In the meantime, Abraham Lazinsk, owner of the building had proceeded to the second floor, where a large crowd was witnessing a motion picture show. With great presence of mind Mr. Lazinsk requested the audience to leave the hall in single file, which was done with very little confusion. It was reported that as the audience reached the front porch the charge of electricity in the floor was so great that several people received a severe electrical shock. Linemen were in town all day Saturday installing a new transformer and repairing the other damage done.

The beautiful, multi-colored phlox, gladioli and cannas on the rear lawn of the Charles T. Williams estate are much admired by passersby. Mr. Williams has the largest collection of phlox in this section and he takes a keen interest in its growth. Although somewhat crippled with rheumatism, he spends several hours daily, working among his flowers.

Many attended the meeting of the Patrons of Husbandry at Grange hall Friday evening when 23 candidates were given the third and fourth degrees. A team from Mystic Grange had charge of the degree work. At the close of the meeting a fine supper including cold meats, salads, pie and cake was served.

Visiting patrons were present from Mystic, Old Lyme, Lyme, Salem, East Haddam, Hebron, North Stonington, East Hatrford, Preston City and Pachaug. There was a total attendance of over 150, several state officers being present.

David S. Bigelow, Stephen D. Rainard and Mrs. Asa Brainard of Westchester were in the village Friday evening.

Ira Gifford, James Lane and Lawrence Spencer of Salem were in town Friday evening.

Miss Helen Klingon of New York is visiting friends in town for a few days.

Roy Sanford of Rockville was here Saturday in the interests of the C. C. Power and Light Co.

Men are laying a new concrete sidewalk in front of Bacon Academy building.

Edgar J. Standish of Salem was in town Sunday.

John W. Piper and family of Hartford passed through the village Saturday en route to their cottage at Lake Oxoboxo, Montville, for over the week end.

Local friends of William T. Curry, of Lebanon are encouraged to hear that he is able to sit up a few hours daily at St. Joseph's hospital, Willimantic, where he has been critically ill with double pneumonia.

Miss Ruth Mehuron returned to her home in Waitsfield, Vt., Sunday after a week's visit at the home of Miss Clara Park.

C. G. Markham and Harry Bock of Westchester Center were in the village Sunday.

A large crowd attended the open-air dance on the rear lawn of the Stephen Skawinski property, corner of North Main street and Amston road Saturday evening. The lawn was gaily decorated and scores of electric light bulbs gave the place a festive appearance.

The Milhan family of New York who have a summer home on Hell hill, left Sunday on a motor trip to Canada.

Mr. and Mrs. H. L. Kaufman of Hartford and Mr. and Mrs. J. A. Cohen of New York were guests of relatives at the Hotel Fairview over Sunday.

Mr. and Mrs. William F. Coon of New York are visiting friends and relatives in town.

Mrs. Edwin Conway is visiting her parents, Mr. and Mrs. John Condren.

One of the best looking pieces of corn in this setcion is that owned by George T. Loomis of Westchester Center. Mr. Loomis has a 5-acre field of corn bordering the highway near Hoadley's corner, and practically all of it has been hoed by hand.

Dr. Eugene M. Clifford of Hartford and Thomas F. Clifford of New Haven were guests over Sunday of their parents, Mr and Mrs. Michael Clifford.

A number of local young people attended the dance held at Schiller's Country club house on the Norwich turnpike Saturday evening.

Edward H. McCall of Goshen was in town Sunday.

Townspeople listened by radio Saturday evening to the presidential nomination acceptance speech delivered by Herbert Hoover at Palo Alto, California.

Dr. Thomas O'Connell of East Hartford was a guest of his sisters over Sunday.

Mrs James R. Case of Danbury was a guest over Sunday of her sister, Mrs. Calvin H. McCall.

James F. Purcell of Waterbury was a guest of friends in town Sunday.

Jeremiah O'Connor of Hartford was a visitor with his parents, Mr. and Mrs. Jeremiah O'Connor over Sunday.

Mr. and Mrs. Saul Azranovitch of Norwich were guests of borough relatives Sunday.

Executive Secretary Edward L. Kelley, of ridgeport called on friends and relatives here Sunday.

ANDOVER

George Nelson, rural carrier, with C. E. Hodges of Waterbury as his guest, motored to Manchester, N. H., Saturday and that evening attended the banquet given by the Carriers' association of that state. They returned home Monday.

MR. HOOVER ACCEPTS

Without a doubt there has been recognition, irrespective of partisanship, that the republican party had selected a man of extraordinary equipment for that high office, when its convention nominated Secretary Hoover for the presidency. That conviction is strengthened by his acceptance address delivered at Palo Alto Saturday and heard around the world by radio. It declared adherence to the republican platform and carried in this declaration a sense of personal faith and conviction and his conception of a government devoted to the purpose of bringing health, comfort, security and prosperity into every home in the land.

With clarity of vision, he sees the prosperity which the country has enjoyed as a result of republican policies under the administration of President Coolidge and he pledges himself to a continuation of these policies in principle. He recognizes that the farmers, comprising one-third of our population, are entitled to a fair share of the nation's prosperity, and he proposes measures of farm relief through the development of inland water ways, through the tariff, and through a farmer controlled stabilization corporation which should have the backing of federal finance. He holds out no false hopes of nullification of prohibition by indirection, but suggests that the only road to reform is through an impartial investigation that will convert the overwhelming mass of the voters, including fair-minded drys, to a recognition of the necessity for reform. Of Quaker lineage himself, it is natural that he should advocate religious tolerance in which the nation will agree with him. He is also a man of peace, but not so much of a pacifist as not to recognize that the primary assurance of national safety lies in maintaining our naval defense and our merchant marine in strength and efficiency.

Viewed as a whole, Mr. Hoover's speech of acceptance presents him before the country as an inspiring leader whose qualifications and expression of his political faith have given him a commanding lead in the presidential race.

A PHILIPPINE FORWARD STEP

As Governor General Stimson points out, the appropriation by the Philippine legislature of funds for the employment of technical advisers is "one of the most important forward steps which have been taken in the development of responsible government in the Philippines." Such advisers would not themselves have administrative powers. But they are expected to aid in developing the administrative departments so that they may be safely intrusted with tasks which now add greatly to the responsibilities of the governor general. The measure passed by the Philippine legislature fulfills the same purpose as the Kiess-Willis bill, which awaits action by congress. But it has additional advantages, in that it increases the native co-operation in the government and development of the islands. This action is radically different from the obstructions which the Philippine politicians placed in the way of enterprises fostered by Governor General Wood. These same politicians have evidently seen a great light.

FINAL TEST FOR CALLES

The world is beginning to enlarge its estimate of the stature of President Calles of Mexico. He was long regarded with suspicion by most Americans, many of whom viewed with astonishment the extreme methods employed against the ancient faith of the Mexican people. In his recognition of the rights of Americans in Mexico many thought he had merely responded to the persuasive powers of Ambassador Morrow. But events of recent weeks have served to show that the Mexican executive has exceptional ability. When a single inept word, a single short-visioned act might have set the factions in Mexico at each other's throats and thrown the republic back into civil war, President Calles has commanded the situation with marked steadfastness. Now it is practically assured that the Obregon party will support Calles, that the assassin of President-elect Obregon will be accorded a civil trial, and that the whole aftermath of Mexico's recent startling tragedy will be cleared away by the process of law, without the country at large being involved in serious disturbance.

Senor Calles as yet has not met the supreme test which awaits him. On Dec. 1, the president, under the terms of the Mexican constitution, must turn his office over to a successor. Will he be able to fulfill that duty? If he does so, will he be able to obtain a peaceful administration for that successor, or at least a sufficient peaceful period for the new administration to get under way? With General Obregon dead, President Calles remains the one "strong man" in Mexico. While no one questions the sincerity of his desire to observe the constitution and retire to private life at the end of his term, this is likely to be possible only in the face of strong opposition from influential persons who believe that constitutional provisions are of little merit as compared with the stability of the nation.

If President Calles actually retires to his farm at the end of his constitutional term of office, it seems to be apparent that he will have to shoulder the major responsibility for maintaining his successor in the presidency. Should he manage to observe the forms of the Mexican constitution and still put behind General Aaron Saens, who is expected to be chosen to succeed him, or behind some other president, sufficient support to place the new and untried man securely in power, Calles will have performed a very exceptional feat in view of the existing disturbing factors. Further, the people of Mexico will have shown themselves well advanced on the road to permanent constitutional government.

STUDYING FOG FLYING

Recently Col. Charles A. Lindbergh has been doing some rather mysterious flying about the country, seemingly to no particular purpose. Occasionally there have been stories of his having been lost in fogs. Some anxiety has been expressed on this score, and the matter has puzzled Lindbergh's admirers, who comprise practically the entire population of this country. Now comes an official explanation from the Daniel Guggenheim fund for the promotion of aeronautics which solves the problem. The fund, its president, Harry F. Guggenheim states, is to "establish a full-flight laboratory on a section of an established airway where fog flying under regular operating conditions can be studied." Lindbergh is to act as special adviser, having already made a partial survey of a number of routes tentatively selected for the experiment. It was in the course of this survey, in which he was deliberately looking for fog, that his recent experiences occurred.

The purpose of this research is to find methods of conquering fog, which is the airman's greatest enemy. A large staff of pilots trained in fog flying will be hired. Especially built planes with additional wing spread to give exceptionally slow landing speed for protection in case of crashes will be used. All known devices for combating fog will be employed and tested and if possible developed.

Those who have risen from the earth by plane face no terror greater than the mists which cling to its surface. A pilot cannot determine his location or the nature of the terrain. His sense of direction is affected. Clouds in the upper air are not so dangerous for they can be evaded, or when encountered, soon left behind by changes of course. But the cloud that rests upon the earth is the foe to be feared.

If through the researches and experiments conducted by the Guggenheim fund a way can be found to permit fog flying without risk, one of the most serious obstacles to regular commercial flying can be overcome. It is appropriate that Lindbergh, one of the most skilled pilots the world has ever produced, should be identified with this work, which makes for the establishment of the airplane as a dependable means of rapid transit in daily business.

MR. VROOMAN'S BOLT

To the rapidly lengthening list of leading democrats who have decided to vote the republican ticket this year is now added the name of Carl Vrooman of Illinois. He was assistant secretary of agriculture under President Wilson and author of the first farm relief measure introduced in congress. As an expert, he is disgusted with the farm-relief plank of the democratic platform, which he regards as a "masterpiece of ambiguity so framed as to admit of one interpretation in the east and another in the west and south." Corn belt radicals are led to believe that it promises the equalization fee, while easterners are assured that it does not indorse this device.

This is not the only lone Mr. Vrooman has to pick with his former party. He can't stand for Tammany's nomination of the national democratic organization and finds it guilty of treachery to the last three democratic candidates for president. But the chief significance of his defection from the democratic party is that it evidences the belief of this student of farm problems in the soundness of the republican farm-relief programme, and his repudiation of the democratic plank as a counterfeit and a sham.

EDITORIAL NOTES

Somehow a "sweeping victory" for Hoover sounds natural.

No military expert has been able to show that the submarine is anything more than a pernicious habit.

The man on the corner says: To know when not to fly is one of the lessons a successful aviator must learn.

Gene Tunney, disdaining the pugilistic championship belt, prefers to be known hereafter as a white-collar man.

However this summer's weather may please us locally, Lieutenant Commander McMillan says conditions are ideal for an Arctic trip.

Belgium's liquor law is recommended to the United States. Will this increase tourist travel to Belgium by those who want to give it a fair trial?

All kinds of popularity are available to Gov. Al Smith. The number of personages who would like to share the spotlight with him on the debating platform is beyond calculation.

The surprising part of the story about the Gulf stream changing its direction is that it hasn't been offered as the explanation for the extremes of the early August weather.

Sending movies by radio will represent a great triumph of the human brain. An improvement of the scenarios corresponding to the improvement in mechanical equipment should come next.

WOMAN IN LIFE AND IN THE KITCHEN

SUGGESTIONS FOR THE HOUSEWIFE

Tea should always be infused, never boiled.

Plums are always canned with the skins on.

Red cabbage is good cooked with sliced apples.

Custard pie is best when flavored with nutmeg.

A bowl of soup and a dessert provide a satisfying lunch.

Place strips of cotton cloth under a fish, when baking it, by which it may be lifted from the pan.

Serve cheese crackers with the pear salad.

Noodles may be served as a vegetable.

The hooked rug is again strongly in favor.

Bake ginger bread in muffin tins and serve with hot chocolate.

Moistened salt rubbed on egg-stained silver will clean it.

A collapsible shoe wardrobe is a great addition to any closet.

Remove stones from dates and fill cavities with Neufchatel cheese.

A sprinkling of paprika will improve the flavor of grapefruit.

Use the corn popper for washing currants, raisins and other small fruits.

Dip slices of pineapple in flour and fry to a golden brown.

If you have casement windows oil the hinges occasionally. This helps to prevent their rusting.

A cloth wrung out of vinegar will clean windows and leave them clear. Polish with paper.

Don't buy ground coffee in large quantities. It will lose its strength.

Use as little water as possible when making pie crust if you wish it to be flaky.

The most satisfactory table for the small kitchen is the part attached to the wall by hinges and which can be folded out of the way when not in use.

AMMONIA TO THE FRONT

A few drops of ammonia in the water when washing very greasy dishes will help matters in every direction, even giving the housewife a cleaner odor to inhale during the process.

TO BRIGHTEN PEWTER

To brighten pewter soak the pieces for a day or two in one quart of water to which a piece of potash has been added. Take from water, rub carefully with a cork dipped in oil and whiting. When pewter has once been cleaned it may be kept bright by washing with hot water and soap.

PUTTING UP CURTAINS

Put a thimble on the end of your curtain rod and it will shove through a starched curtain easily, with no danger of tearing the curtain.

HEALTH AND BEAUTY

Boil all linens used in a sick room, rinse them and hang in the sun if possible.

Dry, whole wheat toast, lightly buttered, is the best form in which to give the young child bread.

How often have you seen a medicine closet which contains a roll of absorbent cotton all out of its wrappings and with places torn in the inner paper where hasty hands have dug for a wad of cotton? Yet such cotton is considered antiseptic and is used for really important dressings.

Wrap up the cotton securely and return to the box after each using and it will really be antiseptic.

Fruits and fruit juices should have a daily place in every child's diet. For the child under 1 year, orange juice should be the staple fruit. Between the ages of 4 and 7 raw fruit may be introduced cautiously, provided the child chews them well. Begin with apples, pears, berries which are not too seedy, melons and peaches. It is wisest to use only cooked fruits for supper at this age.

A CURE FOR FOOT WEARINESS

Walking becomes a pleasure rather than merely a means of getting somewhere, provided, of course, that our feet are kept in perfect condition. The first essential in the proper care of the feet is rigid cleanliness. Perspiration and dust cause offensive odors and often result in skin abrasions and blisters as well.

A cool or tepid foot bath after a long walk will make you feel fresh enough to want to start all over again. It will allay any sensation of burning and will stimulate and harden the skin.

Scrub the feet briskly with a stiff nail brush, using plenty of soap to efface all traces of dirt. This treatment will remove any dead cuticle and will cleanse the pores thoroughly. It will help keep the feet in a vigorous, healthy condition. After rinsing the feet in clear cold water, dry thoroughly. Dust the entire surface with talcum or foot powder, sifting a greater amount in between the toes.

HOMEMADE SHOE RACK

Cast-off curtain rods may be used as shoe racks by nailing them on the baseboard inside the clothes closet. The heel of the shoe hangs on the rod.

INSURED AGAINST LEAKAGE

If you are afraid the bottom of the glass or pottery vase leaks, pour melted paraffin into it about a half inch thick. Then use as usual and have no fear concerning leakage.

ORRIS ROOT IN THE BOILER

A lump of orris root in the boiler on wash day will give a lovely fragrant odor to the clothes, lasting even after they are ironed.

LIFE SAVERS

For very hot days, prpare a casserole dish of some creamed food early in the morning, put on the ice and all you need do for supper is bake it.

DICTATES OF FASHION.

Paris sends us a stunning beret type of hat in the most pliable of straws, with little sprigs of color on top.

Priced at a very modest sum is an adorable little tailored combination of white crepe dotted in orchid and green and bound in the latter color.

Two large squares of chiffon, joined at the corners and hanking like diamond shaped wings over the shoulders, forms an evening model.

As cool as it is attractive is a suit with a skirt coat of white pique and a skirt of the same. The blouse is of red and white dimity.

Quite the coolest looking frocks for hot mornings are those of pale green linen. Fagotting and hand embroidery in white further add to the illusion of coolness.

A black pleated skirt is topped by a chartreuse crepe jumper with a row of tiny jet buttons running from the right shoulder to the left hip-line.

Smart bathing beauties will wear berets fully as often as kerchiefs for headgear this year. They come in soft jersey, in flannel, and in broadcloth.

Yellow, fast making headway in the color range, adopts a buttercup tone for evening wear, especially in chiffon. A new changeable chiffon reveals two-tone reflections.

Among the newest hots now appearing are Reboux's velvet cap, and poke bonnet, a cheekline felt and batter's plush model, the two latter showing the tendency to curve down on one side.

Woven leather bags form a checked design. On one of red and white the flap is woven and the lower part is plain red. Also white patent leather purses are stamped with small red or blue polka dots.

NEW HAND BAGS FLAT.

Flat envelope purses are in the majority. Two from Worth and Lelong both use a strap which passes through a silver eyelet. They are made in various colors of calf and antelope, which will be very strong again this fall. Bags trimmed with striped leathers are appealing.

BATHROOM ENSEMBLES.

As a suggestion for complete harmony in bath accessories is a set displayed in shades of green, although other colors will be just as interesting. Shower curtains may be of white, coin dotted, in green, solid color patterns in self tones, or a print. Two-toned rugs and towels of green linen all add to the pleasant color scheme.

FOR THE SUMMER BOUDOIR.

Color in the bedroom now means linen and spreads that have renounced the snowy whiteness of tradition. With green sheets or white ones having green hems is the accompanying spread of green tinted organdy, much beruffled, or a similar type in white swiss dotted in green to match the ruffled tie-back curtains.

LITTLE GIRL'S FROCK.

A dainty frock for the little girl is made of crepe de chine in blue, rose, red or white, and is very simply trimmed with leaves made of the crepe de chine and arranged to form a continuous band around the yoke, armholes and bottom of the skirt.

NEEDLEWORK HINTS.

When darning socks put a thin piece of material under the hole and darn over it; then the socks will last longer.

When making a garment where it is necessary that pleats stay pressed, try stitching the back of the pleat close to the edge and almost to the hem. Then press as usual and the pleats will stay pressed.

To draw threads easily for hemstitching make a stiff lather of white soap and brush it over the linen where the threads are to be drawn. Let it dry, and the threads will come out easily.

One can make excellent use of an old hat pin when crocheting and there is no pocket to hold the thread. Run the pin through the spool or ball, then stick it into a cushion of some material that will not show the pin prick.

FOR THE WOMAN WHO CROCHETS.

When crocheting an edge on round luncheon doilies on square linen napkins, turn a very narrow hem and baste it in place. Then, with a large needle in the sewing machine, but no thread, stitch around the edge close above the top of the hem. This gives a series of holes large enough for the insertion of the crochet needle and so uniformly spaced as to make the work unusually attractive. After the crocheting is done, pull out the basting thread and the hem will stay in place, even though the work is not disfigured with stitches.

This same method may be used when finishing the ends of towels that have no hemstitched ends. Toweling by the yard, cut into the right lengths and each one finished on one end with a very narrow crochet, and on the other with a pattern a little more ornate, makes very inexpensive and durable towels with a bit of real distinction about them.

Shell-stitch so applied in finishing little girls' slips at neck and armholes takes no more time than hemming and sewing on lace, or even binding, and it wears considerably longer.

Another very pretty and economical method of finishing such underwear, says the Christian Science Monitor, is by means of insertion with a beading edge. Apply the insertion as required, then trim away the lawn on the outside edge and crochet shells or some other simple pattern into the little holes. This also costs less than lace and is easier to apply, but it also has the added advantage in that the trimming may be ripped off the garment and used again when the article is worn out or outgrown.

DUST PROTECTORS FOR HATS.

When traveling, nothing could be more convenient than transparent covers for hats, which come in a number of shades. They fold into a flat shape something like a triangle.

NEW SCARF.

A new scarf, which will be a success wherever worn, is designed by a famous modiste. This scarf is worn with a point in the front, the ends tying in the back.

CONCERNING WOMEN.

Of the half a dozen women traders in Wall Street the best known is Mrs. Irma Dell.

The first woman to hold a state office in Maryland was Mrs. Anna B. Jeffers of Annapolis, who was appointed state librarian by Governor Lowndes in 1896.

This year marks the jubilee of the publication of "Daniel Deronda," one of George Eliot's most famous novels. The great woman novelist, it is said, took more pains over this work than any other.

Queen Wilhelmina, who is known as the stay-at-home of European royalty, may visit London this summer accompanied by the Princess Juliana. The Queen is almost a stranger to the British metropolis.

In the palatial new home of the United States embassy in London one of the most attractive rooms is the boudoir of Mrs. Houghton, wife of the American ambassador. The room is an exact reproduction of a Louis Seize room in the palace of Versailles.

THICKENING SOUPS.

In thickening cream soups allow a tablespoon each of butter and flour to every quart of soup.

LEFT-OVER JELLY.

Left-over jelly may be used on top of a ball of cottage cheese served with a salad or on half a slice of orange as a garnish for the meat plate.

RECIPES.

Ginger Crush: In a small piece of cheesecloth tie a tablespoonful of crushed ginger. Cover with one quart of water and boil for 20 minutes. Add one cup of sugar, the strained juice from two lemons and set aside to cool. When cold, remove the ginger and bottle the fluid. Leave on ice until needed, then dilute to suit the taste with ice water. Crushed pineapple may be added to each glass.

Rhubarb Punch: Rhubarb punch or tea is a very refreshing beverage and will assist in carrying out a pink color scheme. It is made in the following way: Over one cup of rhubarb, finely cut without removing the skin if young and pink, pour one and one-half cups of boiling water. Cover tightly and allow to steep until cold. Drain off the juice and add to it one tablespoon each of lemon and orange juice. Sweeten to taste with a thick syrup made by boiling together half a cup of sugar and one-fourth cup of water. Serve cold.

LETTERS TO THE EDITOR

Time for Action

Mr. Editor: "Inasmuch as ye do unto the least of these, so do ye unto me."

Not being present at the G. A. R. Relief corps meeting referred to, I was unable to voice my sentiments—but I do not believe the term "begging" is applicable. Every native of Norwich from his or her earliest recollection has a heartfelt love and veneration for the Grand Army of the Republic.

Why shouldn't we, when our nearest and dearest gave of their heart's blood to save the nation and preserve its unity!

The ladies of the G. A. R. have been wonderful. They have carried on, nobly. And as their loved ones have passed away, they devote their lives and labor and money to perpetuate the memory of those dear to them.

And they deserve every praise. Now, however, is the time to show appreciation and in a helpful spirit let all join and build a fund which will cover present expenses of repairing, not only that, but form a nucleus, a foundation to which donations may be added from time to time.

Please awake to facts. The G. A. R. members are less in number every year. We all recall the days we were proud to gaze on the imposing sight, our men in blue. Now all that remains is a memory, a wonderful memory.

Now is the time to do our bit.

A. G. A. R. ADMIRER.

The 19th District Senatorship

Mr. Editor: Your editorial of Aug. 11 in connection with the nomination of a candidate on the republican ticket for senator from this, the 19th district, presents fairly the situation that exists today in this district, consisting of the towns of Ledyard, Preston and Norwich.

A critical examination of the available men for the republican nomination for the senate would reveal the fact that regardless of town lines or of any local claims there is no better qualified man for the state senate than Representative John F. Richardson of Preston. He is a man of mature years, a successful business man now enjoying the fruits of a busy life. Mr. Richardson has been a life-long republican through sunshine and storm. He has for many years occupied a leading and influential place in his home town and by his devotion to business, strict integrity and fair dealing has achieved a success rarely attained. He is a man of wide reading, has traveled through this country extensively and stands four square on the principles and doctrines of the republican party. He is no recent convert to the faith nor has he ever been an office-seeker but has been willing and has devoted his time and talents to the upbuilding of his community and the welfare of his party regardless of the effect upon his personal fortunes.

Norwich needs in the senate at this time a man of deliberation and good judgment with vision and an experience with men of affairs which can be applied and used to the advantage of this constituency. John F. Richardson's record in the last general assembly of this state, his record for many years in the town affairs of his home town, his life-long and loyal service to his party, all commend him. This senatorial district is fortunate at this time that it has a man of Mr. Richardson's caliber for a position that requires a man. His Preston neighbors, friends and party associates should urge him to accept this nomination. He is almost as well known in Norwich as he is in Preston.

Respectfully,
A LONG-TIME REPUBLICAN.

CHILD TRAINING

Observing Your Children

Jeannette Stevenson Murray

"We bought Jean a new coat yesterday," said her mother. "At every turn today I've found her standing in front of me with that coat on."

"Of course," said the neighbor, "she wanted you to talk about the coat—tell her how nice she looked in it."

"Oh, I never thought of that," her mother replied. "I just kept telling her to take it off and go away and play. That was too bad. I remember now she seemed rather disappointed."

Too often mothers are so absorbed in their own interests that they brush their children's affairs aside as of no consequence. I have one mother in mind who sits down quietly and observes her children, even arranging for others to come in regularly, that she may have a group to study. These children will have a great advantage over the two lads in the corner cottage, for much of their home training had to be undone.

David, the elder, was self-effacing, while John was always wanting to occupy the center of the stage. Their parents emphasized these characteristics by talking about them before the boys. Mother would say, "John, you can tell the clerk what I want better than David."

Fortunately for David, he entered kindergarten alone. The teacher observed that he was painfully shy and always giving up to others; so she began commending his work at the tables, asking him to choose the game and expecting him to take his turn.

One morning his mother visited the kindergarten. The children were acting out "The Three Bears." She was surprised when David was asked to be the great father bear, and more surprised when she heard David's "great gruff voice."

After the session, the teacher explained what David needed to bring him out. The mother had her eyes opened to the fact that she had been accentuating the faults of both boys and that they should have been treated in exactly opposite ways.

At home the parents stopped speaking of David's shyness, invited in company especially for him, encouraged him to go alone to his friends' homes, drew him into conversation by making it easy for him to express himself and took it as a matter of course that he would stand up for his rights in the home and among the children of the neighborhood.

With John their problem was to divert him from himself and interest him in other children so that he would not interrupt and override them. It is true that John had superior ability, but his parents ceased to mention it.

They were advised to buy him tools and encourage him to make things. This gave a vent to his superabundance of energy and initiative and lessened his desire to "boss" everything and everybody.

A mother has much to gain in visiting the kindergarten. She can observe her child as he does his part and compare him with the others. Then, too, she can confer with the teacher, who is an impartial and trained observer, ever ready with suggestions as to the best method of dealing with each child.

YOUR HEALTH

Refraction in Children

By D. C. Bryant, M. D., Los Angeles, Member Gorgas Memorial.

Very little has ever been written about refraction error in childhood and the later troubles that can be avoided by a little care.

Hyperopia, farsight, is the most common error found and unless it be of very high degree causes very little trouble to the patient until the use of the eyes for near work at school age is required. Astigmatism, both near and far-sighted, is the next common error and should always be corrected with glasses when found. Myopia, near-sight, the least common of all the errors of refraction, when of high degree, should be corrected. Hyperopia is very common and, on account of the very good distant vision, excepting cases of very high degree, is not discovered by the parents or the patients themselves until they are compelled to do much close work.

The child having far-sight, or far-sighted astigmatism, or both, is compelled early in life to overuse his muscles of accommodation in bringing rays of light from the object looked at to a focus on the retina, thereby obtaining perfect vision.

In children with myopic, near-sighted eyes, either plain or combined with astigmatism, the refractive power of the eyes is greater than normal, hence there is not the same call for overuse of the muscles of accommodation as in the far-sighted eye and the child gets along much more comfortably with his studies and close work. If the error is of high degree, however, the child will be barred from all distant work of the blackboard, etc. This necessitates the use of correcting lenses strong enough to bring the distant vision to the normal, or nearly so, a little below normal being safer and at the same time giving the child good vision for all distances.

Hyperopia, far-sight, unless of very low degree, should always be corrected before allowing the child to begin school work. The same can be said of astigmatism, whether it be of the near-or far-sight variety, for here the irregular contraction of the muscle fibres, in order to bring out clear images of the object looked at, soon tires the eye-muscles, making it very difficult for the child to continue his studies. Wearing proper correcting lenses not only improves vision but also removes overwork from the eye-muscles, allowing them to grow stronger and stronger as the child grows older, thus making him more fit for his life's work.

It would be much safer if the eyes of all children were examined before they begin their school work.

Underweight Man Gains 35 Pound:—Feels Fine

To McCoy's Laboratories:

I beg to say I was underweight, tired and run down, thin and weak. A friend told me to try McCoy's Tablets so I sent for 6 One Dollar Boxes, but had no faith in them. I thought it was a lot of cheap pills put up to sell, for I had been taking all kinds of tonics and nothing did me any good, but when I started taking McCoy's Tablets I weighed 119 pounds. Now I am on my last box and I weigh 152 pounds and never felt better in my life. If any one wants to know what they will do call me up or write me. The people here in this State all know me, for I have done business here for thirty years.

McCoy takes all the risk—Read this ironclad guarantee. If after taking 4 2 One Dollar boxes any thin, underweight man or woman doesn't gain at least 5 pounds and feel completely satisfied with the marked improvement in health—the purchase price will be refunded.

The name McCoy's Cod Liver Oil Tablets has been shortened—just ask for McCoy's Tablets at Lee & Osgood Co., or any drug store in America.

Undertaker C. A. Gager was in charge of the funeral arrangements.

NEW LIQOR PRESCRIPTION FORMS NEXT MONTH

After September 5th, Norwich druggists will not be permitted to accept the old form of prescriptions for medicinal liquors, according to orders issued through the office of Deputy Prohibition Administrator Frank T. Putney and coming from the office of Major Philip Hamlin, acting prohibition administrator for New England. The orders affect all druggists in New England.

According to treasury decision 36, first promulgated July 26, 1928, by Commissioner J. M. Doran at Washington, prescription forms to be used by doctors have been revised and were to be used for the first time August 16. Because of delay in the delivery of the new forms, however, the date for their use in New England has been extended to September 1. This extension of time applies only to the First Prohibition district, comprising all of New England, and not to other parts of the country.

The new regulations provide for all doctors' prescriptions to be made out in duplicate. Patients needing liquor will take the prescription from the doctor to the druggist in duplicate. The druggist will then send the original copy to the district administrator, and will keep the duplicate for his own records. The doctor also will send an original copy of the prescription to the administrator and will keep a duplicate for his record. The new regulations will affect about 3,000 doctors and druggists in Connecticut.

MANY CAMPERS ATTEND GARDNER LAKE SERVICE

"Other Sheep" was the subject of the sermon given Sunday afternoon to a church filled with young people by Rev. George Warren Potter at Gardner Lake Methodist Episcopal church. Rev. Mr. Potter pointed out that through the various stages of the life of Jesus Christ He was always wider that His day, larger than His race, greater than His occupation, larger than His creed, wiser than His derogination—that He lived far beyond the present, away down the ages to come. In all these things young people can enrich their lives by following His example.

Rev. George W. Borden, of Leffingwell Baptist church, read the Scripture lesson, the first sixteen verses of the tenth chapter of St. John's Gospel and offered prayer. At the close of the service Rev. Mr. Borden pronounced the benediction.

The singing was in charge of Samuel Gillingham, a senior counselor of Camp Cadabo. In the absence of Jack Latshaw, the organist, Mrs. George W. Borden played.

The camps represented at the service were Adajuan, Juanita, Cadabo, Tohaci and the New London Girl Scouts.

GROTON MAN PASSED C. P. A. EXAMINATION

Notices that they had passed the state test for certified public accountants have been sent to seven of the 30 who took the examination in May. The successful candidates include G. E. Nye of Groton.

The papers were judged by the state board of accountancy, composed of Charles F. Coates, of Hartford, president, Irville A. May, of New Haven and Herbert F. Seward of New Haven.

The examination was of two days duration, and was held for a total of 15 hours. The applicants were tested in commercial law, auditing and accounting theory and practice.

SMALL BOY KNOCKED DOWN BY TAXICAB

About 11 o'clock Saturday morning, Alexander, aged 4 years, son of Mr. and Mrs. Bolislaw Zawicki of 36 Avery street, was slightly injured when struck by a taxicab owned by the Norwich Taxi Co. and driven by William R. Eliat, 25, of No. 275 Prospect street. The boy's injuries were attended at the W. W. Backus hospital, where he was taken and later discharged.

FIVE PERSONS HURT AND TWO MACHINES WRECKED IN CRASH

(Special to The Bulletin)

GROTON, Aug. 12—Two automobiles were wrecked and their five occupants badly injured, three of them seriously, Saturday night, in a three-cornered crash on Fort Hill, Poquonoc Bridge. Two of the cars were wrecked completely and their occupants, Mrs. Mary Carver, No. 481 Williams street, and her brother-in-law, Richard Carver, clerk in the employ of Palmer Brothers, Ottoman Wasmuth, Submarine base, and John Bale and Abel Desmarias, sailors aboard U. S. S. Pequot, are patients at Lawrence Memorial hospital, New London. Mr. Carver and his sister-in-law are suffering from possible fractured skulls. Mr. Carver also received a partially severed right wrist and lacerations of the forehead. Mrs. Carver has a dislocated hip and her scalp was partially ripped from the skull. Their condition was reported as being as comfortable tonight as could be expected, but it will be a day or two before the result of their injuries will have been definitely determined. Wasmuth has a possible fractured skull and serious lacerations of the face and head. Bale received a fractured nose, and lacerations of the face and head. Demarias has lacerations of the head and eyes.

The automobile driven by Mr. Carver was descending the grade and when about midway of the hill, the car driven by Wasmuth and traveling in the opposite direction, attempted to pass a machine driven by Peter Bestola, of Mystic, also being driven up the hill. Wasmuth's car caromed off the side of the Mystic car and then swerved to the left side of the road and crashed head-on with the Carver auto, both cars overturning. All of the occupants were thrown through the windows, which accounted for the lacerations. They were given assistance by passing autoists and a hurried call was sent for the hospital ambulance, which made a fast run to the location of the accident and return to the hospital.

The state police investigated the crash and it is probable that Wasmuth will be arrested when his condition permits and will be charged with violations of the rules of the road or with reckless driving.

NEW HAVEN ROAD BOUGHT MILLION AND HALF TIES

More than a million and a half railroad cross ties were purchased last year by the New Haven railroad, an article by N. M. Rice, vice-president in charge of purchases and supplies, in the July issue of Along the Line, monthly railroad publication, reveals. For several years the railroad has been purchasing practically all of its ties in New England and due to a special creosoting process, the annual number of ties purchased is decreasing.

The exact number of ties purchased last year was 1,513,923, all purchased along the line of the railroad. These ties were purchased as follows: Forty-seven-three per cent from Connecticut, 38.7 per cent in Massachusetts, 8.1 per cent in Rhode Island and 4.9 per cent in New York.

For the five-year period 1920-24 inclusive, 2,000,000 ties were purchased annually, and the total amount of native timber, including cross ties, amounted to 369,828,033 feet at a cost of $13,040,077.

Since the effects of the wood preservation by creosoting has become apparent the number of ties purchased has fallen off steadily, until this year only 1,300,000 new ties will be used.

Some idea of the economy brought about by this process is gained from the replacements required yearly. To the average mile of tracks there are 3,200 ties, and between 1920 and 1925 in annual replacements per mile of track averaged 410 ties. As against the average of 410 replacements per mile of track, the estimate for this year calls for replacement of only 268 ties to the mile. It is hoped by the officials as low an average replacement as 100 ties to the mile may be reached, which will mean an average life per tie of 20 years.

MRS. M. W. BYRNES AT 85 IN FAIRLY GOOD HEALTH

Today, August 13th, will be the 85th birthday of Mrs. Minnie Lamb Byrnes, of 22 Union street, Norwich. At the week-end, Mrs. Byrnes began to receive cards and messages of congratulation from friends and many more will reach her on her birthday.

She is the last surviving child of Mr. and Mrs. Joseph Griswold Lamb and was born in the old Lamb homestead at Norwich Town, in the same room where here father was born. This house stood on the site of what was later the Keeler grocery store. It was the home of Mrs. Byrne's grandfather, also named Joseph Lamb, who was a fife major in the War of 1812.

Joseph Griswold Lamb was at one time state comptroller. Mrs. Byrne's mother was a member of the prominent Winship family, of Norwich. The Lamb family ancestors came to Connecticut from the vicinity of Boston.

While her health permitted, Mrs. Byrnes attended services at the Chuch of the Good Shepherd (Universalist) and friends there as elsewhere will felicitate her on reaching her anniversary in the possession of her mental powers, with clear and accurate memory, and in comparatively fair bodily strength.

THE OCEAN BEACH NURSE HAS HAD A BUSY SEASON

Miss Bessie A. Ryan, R. N., who has been in charge of the Red Cross hut at Ocean Beach during the absence of the regular nurse, Miss Margaret M. Murphy while the latter was taking a special state normal course at Yale, has had an exceedingly busy season.

Up to the close of last week, when Miss Murphy returned to duty, Miss Ryan had cared for a total of 1,139 cases since July 1st. In a single Sunday she has had to give aid in 105 cases.

There were severe cuts and bruises to be tended, one bad case of nose hemorrhage, and a number of cases of acute indigestion. Miss Ryan has been faithful and prompt and her services have been greatly appreciated. She will have a vacation before resuming her duties at St. Francis' hospital, Hartford, about Oct. 1st.

It has been fortunate this season that there have been no drownings nor near-drownings at Ocean Beach. Four paid men have been constantly on duty in the Red Cross Life Saving corps—Capt. John Jarvis, John Andrews, Bernard Farnham and Howard Corey, so that the beach has been well guarded in a number of cases where swimmers have become exhausted the life guards have aided them.

The Red Cross service is maintained until Labor day.

U. C. T. MAY CHANGE PLAN OF MEETINGS

Of late, there has been a lot of discussion over the meeting places of Thames Valley council, No. 39, U. C. T. Some are in favor of leaving them as they now are, while others are in favor of having (one meeting place) either Norwich or New London. At the June meeting a motion was made that beginning at the July meeting and including the October meeting, a tabulation of members attending these meetings be made by the secretary and treasurer.

The matter will be settled by a vote to be taken at the October meeting.

The annual field day and outing of the council is to be held this week at Gardner Lake. The sports will include 100-yard dash, open for all; tug-of-war between Norwich and New London; fat man's race, 100 yards, 200 pounds or over; potato race, open entry; farm yard golf, elimination; sack race, open entry; 3-legged race, open entry and ball game, New London and Norwich.

MACHINES CAME TOGETHER NEAR BREED THEATRE

A Dodge sedan owned by the Blue Ribbon Cab Co., and operated by Charles F. Lawton, 29, of 23 Lake street, collided with his Star 5-cylinder coach owned and operated by Walter R. Jerome, of Elizabeth, N. J., Saturday, on Main street, near the Breed theatre. The New Jersey machine was damaged to the extent of $5.

LOCAL PLANT COOPERATING WITH DESIGN BUREAU

The Schwarzenbach-Huber Co., which operates a plant in this city, is cooperating with the design registration bureau, organized several weeks ago by the Silk Association of America, Inc., to act as a clearing house for designs in an effort to prevent design duplication in the silk market.

Until August 20 samples of printed fabrics put into work during the past sixty days or since June 19, will be accepted for registration as well as original drawings of designs which it is proposed to send to printers. In the former case the samples of printed fabrics submitted must be accompanied by an additional affidavit from the printer that the printing was done from an original drawing belonging to the applicant. No decision will be made until August 20. After that date only original drawings will be accepted with the exception of fabrics printed outside the borders of the United States which are governed by special rulings.

Effect on the eye of the ordinary observer-purchaser will be the basis of decision as to whether or not a design submitted to the bureau is a copy or a duplicate. This method of judging and filing designs has been adopted in accordance with a ruling already laid down by the federal courts.

The first requirement for registration is that an original drawing be submitted to the bureau accompanied by information as to the number of rollers to be used, an application form to be supplied by the bureau, and the registration fee. If the design is approved two photostatic copies will be made, one to be filed in the bureau, the other to be returned to the applicant with the original drawing and a certificate of registration bearing the official registry number. All designs will be printed for one year.

To be considered for registration a design must be in active use. On each application, therefore, must appear the name of the printer to whom the design is to be sent. When a design is accepted and registered, the printer mentioned is asked to notify the bureau if he does not receive the design within ten days. If the design is not forwarded to the printer with instructions within that period, the registration will be cancelled.

In the case of materials printed outside the borders of the United States, a sample of the fabric sufficiently large to show a full repeat must be presented together with an affidavit stating the origin of the design and where printed.

No one will have access to the designs submitted or to the files except the bureau's staff who have been engaged to carry on the work. The confidential character of the work will be most carefully guarded.

Letters of cooperation are being received every day by the Silk association, it is stated, from members of the trade pledging their support of the movement to prevent design duplication. Silk manufacturers, converters and cutters who have experienced the inconveniences of having rollers engraved and afterward discovered that their designs were already in use or who have undergone the delay in patenting designs in Washington, are especially enthusiastic about the establishing of a design clearing house.

NORWICH LOOKING FOR DEMOCRATIC CONVENTION

The difference of opinion expressed at the New London gathering between Democratic State Chairman Walsh and State Committeeman Thomas J. Kelly of the nineteenth district attracts attention to one of the veteran members of the state committee, of whom Connecticut as a whole knows very little, says The Hartford Times. The difference arose out of the lack of desire of Norwich democrats to have a dinner in their city and a dispute as to the proper place for holding the congressional convention of the second district. Kelly wants the convention in Norwich, Norwich like Middletown having a candidate. State Chairman Walsh, possibly somewhat in haste, suggested to Mr. Kelly the propriety of resigning, without having evoked any very enthusiastic response. A good guess would be that Kelly won't resign and that it would be difficult to oust him if it were attempted, which it probably won't be. He has been a member of the committee since 1916. Only three men who are still on the body were members then. William R. Palmer of Oxford; John A. Walsh of Stamford and John F. Addis of New Milford. David E. FitzGerald, who is now a member from one of the New Haven districts, was then state chairman but not a member from any of the districts. The membership of the others has been continuous. Palmer states back to 1910 and he apears to be the dean of the committee in point of service. Messrs Walsh and Kelly date from 1916 while John Addis's membership goes back to 1914. Prior to being state central committeeman of the nineteenth district, Kelly was democratic town chairman of Norwich, as it is recalled. He is a veteran of Norwich politics and is firmly entrenched in his own territory, although being of quiet disposition he attracts little attention outside of it.

HIT BY AUTO WHILE WALKING ON STREET

While walking on the street at the intersection of Boswell avenue and North Main street, Saturday evening, Zigmond Maryski of No. 34 Cedar street, New London, was struck by a Maxwell coupe owned and driven by avenue. The New London man received William H. Disco, 32, of 551 Boswell ed a scalp wound and bruises about the face, which were attended by Dr. Paul F. Gadie. He was taken to the W. W. Backus hospital. In reporting the accident at police headquarters Mr. Disco claimed the lights from an approaching machine blinded him.

NORWICH TOWN

PASTOR OF METHODIST CHURCH TO TAKE A BRIDE AUG. 28

At the Methodist church Sunday morning, to a congregation of about seventy, the pastor, Rev. George Warren Potter, preached from John 10:16, "Other sheep I have which are not of this fold." The choir, under direction of Mrs. Lewis Aldrich sang, Stanton W. Brown read an invitation to the members and friends of the church to attend the wedding of their pastor Tuesday afternoon, August 28th, in the Niantic Methodist Episcopal church at four o'clock. Rev. Mr. Potter is to wed Miss Helen L. Haviland who recently resigned as director of religious education of the South Manchester Methodist church.

Preparations for the annual picnic of the First Congregational Sunday school are completed. The picnic will be held at Ocean beach Thursday Aug. 16th. A special trolley car leaves Norwich Town green about 8.30 and returning leaves the beach at 4.45, arriving at Norwich Town at 6.50. Should the committee deem it best to postpone the picnic on account of the rung at 8 o'clock.

Members of both church and school have been urged to attend and may take the car at any of the regular stops from Norwich Town green to Buckley switch. The committee in charge is Mrs. Carl Ricker, Charles Barber and C. M. Beebe.

Mrs. Martha A. Hunt has returned home, following a stay of five weeks with Mr. and Mrs. John W. Haseiden of Norwich, at their cottage at Chapman Point. During her stay, airplanes passed so close to the cottage that those abroad were easily observed from the veranda.

Mrs. Alice E. Tufts for many years a resident of Otrobando avenue, is now making her home with Mrs. Martha A. Hunt in the Norwich Town section of Lafayette street.

Eight large busses of the Connecticut company passed through Norwich Town Saturday morning and evening, filled with employes of the Rossie Velvet mill of Willimantic, en route to the beach.

MARRIED

BEEBE-CHERRICK—In New London, Aug. 11, 1928, by Rev. J. R. Danforth, Howard Beeb

KOZIOL FLATTENS KOP IN FIRST MINUTE OF DUWELL A. A. FEATURE

Al Koziol hopped into the ring, shed his bathrobe, the bell rang, and away he went at Johnny Kop in what was talked about as a real grudge fight, as the feature attraction of the Duwell A. A. amateurs Saturday night. Kop smilingly met Koziol half way and the latter started in. He swarmed over Johnny refusing to let him get started and showered blows like trip-hammers, while Kop hardly landed a good wallop. Stepping in close Al brought over his fast right and down went Johnny. If he wasn't out then he certainly was after his head hit the floor, and Referee Busch did not need to count. The fans were rather disappointed that the fight didn't last longer, but those that have been cheering for Koziol just sat back saying "I told you so." Koziol came in for more or less razzing for some reason or other when he entered the ring which went to show who the favorite was. But unmindful of that, Koziol added another scalp to his ever-increasing belt, and thereby won his prize, a nifty suit of clothes.

The first show in months under the A. A. U. sanction drew a crowd of about 1200 and again it shows that the Duwell A. A. was right when they thought that fans were anxious for real good amateur shows. The card was very good throughout, and the judges, Mike Kelly and Jackie Wilson, did not have much trouble deciding winners.

The card started off with a hard fought battle with Harry Golden of Worcester winning the award over his less experienced rival, Tony Maretti of Westerly. Tony had the shade in the first round, but from then on Golden held the upper hand, and tired Maretti considerably. Maretti weighed in at 108 and Golden 109.

The second go brought about quite a surprise. Ernest Gauvin of Tartville was winning from Arnaud Carello of Worcester, but ran into a right to the point of the jaw which sent him down and out, in the second round. Gauvin drove Corello all over the ring in the first and took the lead in the second. Carello was trying hard to get his right over and the first time he did the fight was over. He weighed 118 to Gauvin's 121.

Tony Rita from Westerly with right hand body punching made Walter Lis of Danielson quit in the 1st. Lis tried hard but Rita was too strong for him. Both weighed 123.

Benny Salinski lost a tough one to left-handed Jos. Sposato of Westerly and it took Sposato four rounds to do it. Benny found Joe rather hard to fight on account of the stance, but kept driving in his hard rights. Joe, too, drove home plenty of hard lefts to Benny's body which had the latter tired in the fourth round which gave Sposato the win. It was a great fight. Salinski weighed 125 and Sposato 126.

Johnny Yaggin, a fighter, and Lionel Paradis, a boxer, came together in the fifth encounter. Yaggin from the Worcester stable, drove through the Danielson boy's defense and downed him for the nine count in the second. Again in the third Paradis went down from the hard blows of Yaggin, but the latter could not connect solidly enough to K. O. Paradis who has a good defense. Both boys weighed 118 lbs.

The next affair ended rather abruptly. Chas. Bauvenant of Westerly, who boxed here last under the non-deplume of Young Chappy pulled the unusual for him when he rabbit-punched Tony St. Germaine of Danielson and lost the fight, on a foul. Bauvenant usually cool, had St. Germaine on his hands and knees in the first round and continued to drive over-hand punches to his neck. Chappy, no doubt, would have won the fight had he continued to keep his head, but Frankie Busch did not hesitate to disqualify him and award the fight to St. Germaine. The latter weighed 130 and Bauvenant 132.

Freddie Basade, fighting under the Duwell colors won from Bob Kane, another Worcester entry, but had none too much to spare. Kane is the lad whom Koziol knocked out at the Armory last winter under another name. He has a terrific right hand punch and when it landed it hurt Basade although he tires rather easily. But the latter took the aggressive and piled up enough points to win. This was another excellent bout. Both boys weighed 145.

Harold "Chick" Mara the local Adonis, showing about 100 per cent improvement over his last fights here, left-handed and body-punched Arthur Miller of Jewett City into submission in the second round of their affair. While it lasted it was chock full of action Miller trying hard every minute. Mara gradually wore Miller down, however, with his right to the body, and brought over two rights to the jaw which sent Miller to dreamland. For good measure 'Chick" landed another right while Miller was on his way down. Either one of the three would have done the trick. Miller weighed 151 and Mara 148. Mara looked great Saturday night and if he continues to improve should certainly be heard from.

In a mighty fine exhibition of cleverness for which he is noted, the local favorite, Jimmie Quinn won over Ero Peterson of Worcester, former junior lightweight champ of New England. Jimmy had to use every trick in his bag, but it was enough to out-smart Peterson. The latter is certainly a fast boy and has a hard wallop in his right which Quinn made sure did not connect too often. Jimmy brought in left after left while Petersen was trying hard to get his right over. It did land a couple of times but Jimmy shook them off, and went right after the Worcester lad. Quinn weighed in at 122 and Petersen 124.

The tenth go was about the toughest of the evening and showed two boys throwing all science to the winds and slugging each other for all they were worth. It was merely a survival of the fittest and it looked any minute as if either one or both would drop. They both stood the gaff however, and were fighting at the final bell. Jos. Merringlo of Westerly took the honors over Clyde Brouillard of Danielson and if they both had won it would have been alright. They weighed 134.

Bill Pedace did the announcing and Jack Carney tolled off the seconds. Now that we have fights back with us, the crowd can look forward to another card in two weeks. If it will be as good as Saturday's every one will be satisfied and as the Duwells have yet to put on a "bloomer" the fans can be sure that they will get their 75 cents worth.

INDIANS SCORE THREE IN NINTH TO BEAT TIGERS

CLEVELAND, O., Aug. 12—(AP)—Cleveland broke through the brilliant fielding defense which had saved Earl Whitehill for eight innings and beat the Detroit Tigers with a three-run rally in the ninth today, 3 to 2.

Doubles by Morgan and Jamieson and singles by Lind and Pinch Hitter Autrey made Cleveland's last stand good after ninth inning threats had lately fallen short in two earlier games of the series. Walter Miller allowed one run on three hits for seven innings and then retired for a pinch hitter. Hudlin finishing in good order and receiving credit for the victory which kept Cleveland in fifth place. It was Detroit's sixth beating in 19 starts.

CROWDER BLANKS WHITE SOX WITH BUT FOUR HITS

CHICAGO, Aug. 12—(AP)—St. Louis took the odd game of the series from Chicago today behind the excellent pitching of Crowder, who allowed only four hits in blanking the White Sox 7 to 0.

Young Ed. Walsh was wild and Lyons, who relieved him, was pounded hard in the third when the Browns scored four runs.

The loss today gave the Sox a record of nine won and 12 lost for the home stay. It was Crowder's 13th victory of the season.

CINCINNATI CONTINUES TO FORGE TOWARD TOP

CINCINNATI, O., Aug. 12—(AP)—Cincinnati held on stubbornly to its new winning streak by defeating Philadelphia today, 6 to 3. Manager Bert Shotton sent out a parade of pitchers when the Reds started hitting hard in the latter innings.

Rixey settled down after the second inning and held the Phillies in all innings except the seventh when Thompson tripled to right, scoring Lerian, who batted for Ring.

WORLD SERIES WILL START OCT. 3

NEW YORK, Aug. 12—(AP)—The world series of 1928 will begin on Wednesday, October 3, at the grounds of the club winning the American league championship, the Associated Press learned today. The opening game automatically fell to the American league this year under the alternation plan formulated by the late Charles H. Ebbets, and the dates for this series were agreed upon last week by the officials concerned.

The schedule agreed upon calls for games in the American league park on Wednesday and Thursday, October 3 and 4, with a day for travel intervening before the battle is resumed in John Heydler's sector "if a western club wins the National league pennant". If two eastern teams play for the championship, the series will begin on October 3 and continue without a break until one team has won the requisite four games.

The breaks of the schedule under the Ebbets plan this year are such that the Athletics, the only pennant possibility unable to play Sunday games at home, would not draw a Sabbath date in any of the several charts likely to be ordered. Commissioner Landis is empowered under the Ebbets plan to alter the schedule to permit a Sunday game which otherwise would be lost through a lay-over in a non-Sunday city.

One regulation in the Ebbets plan seldom pointed out is that which provides for the same schedule arrangements even with two teams from the same city playing in the series. This means that a Yankee-Giant series this year would see the first two games at the Runnert stadium the next three at the Polo grounds, and any others required at the Yankee park, instead of the every day shift heretofore prevailing.

The Ebbets rules also empower the club drawing the first game to sell tickets for four contests, including a possible seventh, but no club has taken advantage of this concession in the three series played under the plan of the late squire.

Another Ebbets departure from the old order is the provision regarding tie games. Any drawn contests now are to be played-off in the city where occurring but only if necessary after the seven scheduled games have been played. The old Brush rule was that a tie game, like one rained out, was to be played off the following day on the grounds where it occurred, with the rest of the schedule moved back a day to accommodate the shift. Commissioner Landis saw the Yankees and the Giants permission to depart from this rule in 1922 after George Hildebrand's famous confusion of sunlight with moonlight. The judge acted to avoid needless confusion in ticket distribution.

While only the Yankees and the Athletics were concerned in the American league consideration of the coming series, it is understood that five National league clubs joined in the discussion.

No mention was made of the prices for tickets, but they doubtless will remain substantially the same, from $1 to $6, plus any taxes levied by the government. The ticket scale and other details will be announced next month by Commissioner Landis when he formally gives out the dates for the games.

YANKEES SHUT OUT RED SOX IN EASY GAME

NEW YORK, Aug. 12—(AP)—The New York Yankees made it four in a row over the Boston Red Sox and five straight in the league when they blanked the Sox by 8 to 0 today. This victory increased the Yankees' lead to five games as the Athletics were idle.

Herb Pennock, in superb form, turned in his 17th victory, allowing Boston but three hits. It was his fifth shutout of the year, putting him in the lead in both leagues in this useful endeavor.

Mark Koenig led the Yanks with four hits in as many tries, two of them being doubles. He drove in two runs. Ken Williams' fielding featured.

CUBS CUT LEAD OF CARDS TO 2 1-2 GAMES

ST. LOUIS, Aug. 12—(AP)—A disastrous first inning reduced the St. Louis Cardinals' lead in the National league to two and one-half games here today, when the Chicago Cubs won, 4 to 2.

A homer by Cuyler, who drove Beck in ahead of him, and another by L. Wilson immediately following put the skids under McKechnie's crew. Rhem was relieved by Reinhart after three and a third innings, but the fact that Reinhart allowed the Cubs but a lonely hit in the next five and two-thirds stanzas failed to change the Cubs' advantage. LILLIAN COPELAND SETS NEW SHOT-PUT RECORD

BRUSSELS, Belgium, Aug. 12—(AP)—With one world's record and three first places, Lillian Copeland, of Pasadena, Calif., led the American women's Olympic team to victory over the leading European stars in an international meet here today.

Miss Copeland won the shotput with a heave of 11.71 meters (38 feet 5 1-2 inches) breaking the record of 11.52 meters (37 feet 10 3-8 inches), set in Fraulein Lange, of Germany. She also took first place in the javelin throw with 33.23 meters (119 feet 1-8 inches), and won the discuss throw with 38.83 meters (127 feet 6 1-2 inches).

The American girls took four first places in the nine events. In addition to Miss Copeland's victories, Mary Washburn captured the 80 meter hurdles in 13 3-5 seconds. Great Britain won three first places in the 100 yard dash and the broad jump, both won by Miss Gunn, and the 200 meter handicap which went to Miss Thompson. The other two firsts went to Leontine Stevens and J. Seghers of Belgium in the high jump and 800 meter run.

JARVIS PITCHES BRILLIANT GAME ALLOWING V-G CLUB BUT TWO HITS

Saturday at Taftville was Lamory day and not only did the Taftville A. A. beat Voluntown-Glasco 4-3 but Charlie Lamory single handed did the trick. It took Taftville eleven innings to do it and Lamory just two swings of his willow. The first swing drove the pill sailing out in the field and brought in two runners in the last of the ninth after two were out, and with three men on, Manager Burdick went wild.

The second swing in the last of the eleventh after two were out brought in the winning run and the game for his team which drove the fans wild and Burdick prostrate.

It looked bad for Taftville all the way through, right up to the very last minute. Unfortunately Taftville had a bad inning, the third, when Jarvis made a couple of bad throws, one to first and the other to third which gave Volutown their three unearned runs. Lloyd, however, aside from that one spasm pitched a wonderful game, setting the V-G's down with two scratch hits and fanning eleven and walking only one. Lefty Smith, former Providence college star also turned in a good game although Taftville got to him for five scattered bingles. He walked eight and struck out six, which gave him second honors to Jarvis.

Ted Dabrowski scored for Taftville's first and only until the ninth when he came home on Lefty Dugas's hit. From then on Taftville could not get men on bases. The battle of pitchers carried the game through until the last of the ninth when Smith started to weaken just enough to let Taftville take the aggressive. Dugas, Eccleston and Mills walked in succession and with three on and two out Lamory hit to left which brought in Dugas and Eccleston to tie the score. Smith hit his stride again. The Burdick boys went out easily in their half of the eleventh. Smith struck out Jarvis and Dugas, Eccleston connected for a hit that bounded over the Voluntown's third baseman's head and Mills walked. With two on Lamory again crashed a terrific drive over left fielder's head to bring home Eccleston.

Voluntown played a great game behind Smith, Guillett at second making two nice plays, Spike Liberty in left also made a beautiful catch. Dabrowski and Lamory starred in the field for Taftville. It was a great game to win and at the same time a tough one for Burdick and his boys to lose. But it was a great ball game and certainly gave the fans plenty of entertainment for their money. Taftvill. Beats Kensington

To show that they are never whipped until the game is over, Taftville pulled the same thing with Kensington Sunday that they did with Volontown Saturday. With two out in the ninth and with one run behind, Taftville came through and beat Kensington, 3-2 in a thrilling contest which the latter figured they had won.

It was West against West in the upstate contest. In lieu of Lefty Dugas, who has a bad finger, Taftville used Tohy West and the latter turned in a great game, allowing only six hits, although Kensington took advantage of every one of them. On the other hand, Taftville touched Freddie West, a former U. of P. groundsman, for 16 bingles, but unlike Kensington, failed to grasp their golden opportunities.

Not a man on the Taftville team went hitless although they just couldn't get the runs after their first in the sixth. The game went along in airtight fashion and Kensington added one run in the eighth to put the game on ice, as it were. But then Taftville got desperate. Yerrington and West went out, Normandin hit, stole second and then stole third. Harry Mills, the old standby, hit an easy roller to third, but beat the throw to first, thus scoring Normandin. Mills went to second and came home with the winning run on a double by Dugas. The never-say-die spirit again asserted itself for the second time in as many days. Those are the kind of games the fans like to see. The score:

PETTY OUTPITCHES COONEY TO BEAT BRAVES 3 TO 1

BROOKLYN, Aug. 12—(AP)—Brooklyn made it two out of three over the Boston Braves here today as Jess Petty outpitched Johnny Cooney to win a 3 to 1 decision. Petty allowed the Braves six hits while the Robins found Cooney for nine.

A triple by Flowers and a single by Bancroft gave the Robins their first run. DeBerry's single with the bases full added two more. The Braves did not score until the ninth when Richbourg's single, Brown's double and Sisler's long fly chased a run over the plate. Score:

KOP JOINS STABLE OF DENNY McMAHON AT MERIDEN

Johnny Kop, local amateur lightweight, who has been fighting in the amateur bouts in Norwich and Eastern Connecticut and who was knocked out by Al Koziol in Saturday's bout, has joined the boxing stable of Denny McMahon at Silver Lake. McMahon who saw Kop fight earlier in the year was much impressed and sent word to Al Beauregard to bring the local boy to Silver Lake whether he won or lost with Ziziol. Kop is to become one of the many sparring partners for Louis (Kid) Kaplan who fights Bruce Flowers next Wednesday night at Hartford. In all probability Kop will join the professional ranks and perform in the new talent shows about the state. Kop is a fast hard punching boy who with a little more experience should make good in the pros. He is the third of the Norwich boys to go over to the pros. Vic Darr and Mush Moriarty already having done.

SMOKE SHOP WINS FROM WILLIMANTIC ALL STARS

Playing brilliant ball behind the equally brilliant pitching of Babe Santora the Smoke shop team won an 8 to 5 decision over the fast Willimantic All Stars at the Hollyhock Island diamond on Sunday afternoon. Santora, for Blue Ridge and Boston Twilight league pitcher, was in fine form and pitched exceptionally nice ball during the entire game, allowing but four hits. He looms as one of the best pitchers that has worn a Norwich uniform in some time and will bear watching. The Smoke shop team hit well in back of Santora which together with several bad Willimantic mistakes gave them an easy verdict. Willimantic scored in the first half of the first but the Smokers evened the count in their half. The Willimantic team scored again in the second but in the last of the third the Smoke Shop added three more. Again in the sixth the Smokers pushed across three runs followed by one in the seventh. The All Stars made a strong bid in the seventh when they score three runs by the aid of some loose playing on the part of the Smoke Shop. There was no more scoring after the seventh inning. WESTERLY

LOCAL FRIENDS ATTEND FUNERAL OF JOHN W. CHURCH

(Special to The Record.)

WESTERLY, R. I., Aug. 13—Funeral services for John Winfield Church were held Sunday afternoon at the First Baptist church at Narragansett, following a short prayer at his home, at 2 o'clock. The floral remembrances were beautiful. The services were conducted by the pastor, Rev. Ernest L. Allan. The body was met at the church by Commander Robert Hazard and forty swords of Narragansett commandery, No. 27, K. T., of Westerly. With commandery and state trooper escort the cortege proceeded to Wakefield for the burial in Riverside cemetery. Em. Thomas McKenzie, prelate of the commandery of which Mr. Church had been a member for 21 years conducted the templar service. The bearers were James Nall, Samuel R. Robinson, John B. Eldred, George A. Kroener, Samuel Gould and Daniel Watson. Many relatives and friends from Westerly were present.

Saturday morning Miss Mollie Gabriele and Angelo Cofone, both of Westerly, were united in marriage at the Church of the Immaculate Concention by Rev. Henry Bruno, S. M. The nuptial mass which followed was celebrated by Fr. Bruno. During the mass, Miss Mary Lapere sang "Ave Maria" and a Hymn to the Blessed Virgin. The wedding marches were played by Mrs. James McMahon. Miss Lena L. Nardone of eWsterly was maid of honor, and John Pannadio of Bradford was best man. The bride wore white georgette. Her veil of Spanish lace was caught with rhine stones and orange blossoms, and she carried white roses. The bridesmaid was dressed in blue crepe de chine, with hat to match, and carried pink roses and bluebells. Following the ceremony at the church a breakfast and reception was held at the home of the brides' aunt, Mrs. Frank Terranova, 73 Oak street. Mr. and Mrs. Cofone will make their home on Granite avenue.

OWNER OF POWER BOAT INJURED IN STRANGE WAY

(Special to The Bulletin)

WESTERLY, Aug. 12—Frank Van Mierenhaucht, of Pawcatuck, sustained a deep cut in his head Saturday when struck by the starting handle of the fly-wheel on the engine of his power boat. Dr. M. H. Scanlon took five stitches to close the gash. The man had started down the Pawcatuck river on a fishing trip and when near Pawcatuck Rock the engine stopped. When cranking the engine a spring broke and the handle came out and struck him in the forehead. He was brought to Westerly for medical attention.

Sometime during Saturday night or early Sunday morning, in Pawcatuck, Girard's restaurant on West Broad street was entered and the cash register was rifled of about $14. The theft was discovered about 6 o'clock Sunday morning when Victor Councelle, a day employe at the lunch room, arrived to open the place for business. Soon after opening a customer came in and was served. As Councelle went to make change at the cash register he discovered that there was no money in the register except about a hundred loose pennies. As it had been customary for the proprietor to leave about $15 in change in the drawers of the register Councelle notified Joseph Girard, one of the proprietors, and it was discovered that $14 in change and bills had been taken. An examination of the premises did not reveal that an entrance had been forced by way of the windows or doors, so it is believed that someone unlocked the front door with a skeleton key.

Saturday, the Hudson auto driven by Mrs. Robert H. Farnham of 17 Spruce street struck a telephone pole near the ice plant at Avondale when the operator turned to avoid hitting a truck which was coming out of the drive at the plant. The bumper on the Farnham car was smashed and the right front and rear mudguards were bent. Officer George L. Madison investigated the accident.

TOOK ONLY TWO DRINKS BUT THEY MADE HIM DROWSY

(Special to The Bulletin)

WESTERLY, Aug. 12—John W. Neuins, traveling salesman, of Milton, Mass., was given a $200 fine with costs of $8.80, by Judge Oliver H. Williams, in a special session of Third District court Saturday afternoon. He paid. His arrest resulted from an auto accident when he left his car after it had struck and knocked a telephone pole across the Nooseneck Hill road, Aug. 10. He was arrested by Frank H. Brown, Hopkinton chief of police. In pleading guilty the accused admitting taking two drinks before he left his Boston offices, although claiming he was in possession of his faculties he became drowsy and the machine traveled some 120 feet, after hitting the pole.

Favorable weather for Indian Meeting day Sunday, at the former Narragansett Indian reservation, Charlestown, was a reason for large numbers of descendants of the aborigines and interested spectators gathering for a powwow marked by the christening of two papooses, the performance of war dances and the solemn ritual of the pipe of peace.

The papooses christened were the sons of Mr. and Mrs. James Brown of Providence and Mr. and Mrs. C. A Gustafson of Swansea, Mass. Mrs. Gustafson's Indian name is White Dove, and she is a descendant of the Abuaki tribe of Canada.

A more modern feature of the conclave was a preaching, song and praise service. Among the speakers were Governor Norman S. Case, Mayor James E. Dunne of Providence, Mayor Mortimer A. Sullivan of Newport and Arthur S. Brown, vice president of the Rhode Island Citizens' Historical Society.

Rev. LeRoy C. Perry, Chief Ousa Mekin of the Wampanoag tribe, conducted religious services at 11 a. m. and 2 p. m. Other prominent Indian leaders were Edward Michael, Providence, Chief Sunset of the Narragansetts; Frank M. Nichols, Providence, Chief Gray Eagle of the Narragansetts; A. C. Perry, Providence, Chief Strong Horse of the Narragansetts, Horatio S. Stanton, Westerly, Chief Clearwater; William Wilcox of Westerly, Chief Sitting Bull and Philip Peckham of Charlestown, Chief Night Hawk.

Most of the leaders were in full Indian ceremonial regalia, including the picturesque feathered headdress. The committee of arrangements includes Rev. LeRoy C. Perry, Edward Michael, Alfred C. Perry and Frank M. Nichols.

Funeral services for Julius H. Gates were held at his home, 14 Maple avenue, Westerly, Sunday at 2.30 o'clock. Burial was in the First Hopkinton cemetery. Mr. Gates died Thursday after a long period of ill health. He was born in Harford, N. Y., and came to Westerly 44 years ago and engaged in the upholstery business, also as a dealer in antiques. He leaves his wife and a son, William M. Gates of Narragansett.

Edward James Chapman, infant son of Mr. and Mrs. George Chapman of 1 Pawcatuck avenue, Pawcatuck, died at Westerly hospital Friday night after a short illness. The funeral was held Sunday afternoon from the parents' home.

Four veteran organizations of Westerly gathered Sunday for the first annual joint outing and clambake at Peckham's grove, Brighman's pond. A program of sports was arranged for the day. The bake was opened at 3 o'clock for the British and Colonial Great War veterans, Harold W. Merrill post, American Legion, and Harley P. Chase post, Veterans of Foreign Wars. The committee comprised Thomas Waddington, Edward Weall Richard Gregory, Wilfred Mathieu, Lawrence Reock, Roy Wilcox, Grover King, Joseph Sicilian, Peter McTrinch Herbert Robinson, Shelby Nicholas and Henry Sutcliffe.

The outboard motorboat regatta is to be held Saturday, Aug. 25th on the Pawcatuck river, under the auspices of the recently organized Westerly Boat club, with clubhouse at Thompson's cove.

Commodore Geoffrey L. Moore of the boat club states that the regatta will be one of the largest held anywhere in New England this summer. There will be about 12 races for boats of A, B and C classes. All races will be conducted under rules of hte Rhode Island Outboard association, with officials of the association in charge. Twenty-six cups will be awarded.

Two of the more important races will be for the Rhode Island state championship of Class B boats. Solid silver loving cups 18 inches high will be presented the champions.

Included in the lists of awards will be special prizes, offered by the Westerly Boat club, for Westerly drivers Each race will have three awards.

In conection with the regatta, the Rhode Island Outboard association will hold its annual meeting.

WM. M'GUIRE, VOLUNTOWN, HAS COLLARBONE BROKEN

(Special to The Bulletin)

JEWETT CITY, Aug. 12—William McGuire, of Voluntown, was knocked down by an automobile driven by Charles Barber, of Jewett City, Saturday afternoon. The accident happened on Main street, near the Baptist church. The man attempted to cross the street, and started back and forth several times, confusing the driver. He was taken to Dr. McLaughlin's office and then to Backus hospital, as he had a broken collar bone and an injury to his leg.

Miss Estelle Moses, of Jamaica, N. Y., is visiting her aunt, Mrs. Jacob Wechsler.

Mrs. Nathaniel Urvant and daughter Selma have returned after two weeks' stay in Norwich.

An item sent from the National American Red Cross headquarters is of interest especially as Jewett City chapter has an accredited Red Cross life saver in Prentice Chase, who has every day swimming classes, also teaches life saving from drowning. Twice as many men and boys are injured in street accidents as are women and girls, according to a digest of deaths and injuries by accident just made public by the American Red Cross. Six per cent of all of the deaths in a year are due to accident. The Red Cross through its first aid and life saving service maintains a constant, all the-year-around battle to reduce accidental deaths. Infection of minor wounds, the most feared of all complications, caused a great number of deaths, and the first aid course, sponsored by the Red Cross, and taught in hundreds of industries each year has appreciably reduced these deaths, the safety experts state.

Thomas Morancey was one of the very efficient police who navigated the baseball procession without injury to Ashland Park, Thursday evening.

William R. Palmer states that two men from Plainfield, while fishing in Hopeville river, caught four bass each weighing from five to six pounds, and four large perch each weighing two and one-half pounds. Mr. Palmer said they were the largest fish he had ever seen caught in that river.

Nurse Fry says

"All Mothers Should Be Told About Sykes Comfort Powder"

Independence, Mo.—"I wish I could tell mothers all over the world about Sykes Comfort Powder. I could write all day of the wonderful results I have had in using it on children. I have proved over and over again it is the only powder that will heal and prevent chafing, scalding, rashes, skin irritations and soreness, and the little baby whose picture I am sending you has always been entirely free from such troubles by its use."—Laura M. Fry, Independence, Mo.

The reason Sykes Comfort Powder is so successful in such cases is because it contains six healing, antiseptic ingredients not found in ordinary talcums. Mothers and nurses call it "A Healing Wonder."

POETRY FOR THE WIDE-AWAKES

The Jolly Little Cat

The Jolly Little Cat sat down
And washed his face, with glee;
"This good old world is full," he purred,
"Of fun as it can be.
Some folk might say the wind is cold,
I don t mind that a bit.
I see a feather blowing round
And get warm chasing it.
Some people say the times are hard,
That food is high in price—
I like goo i meat—and yet I find
Great fun in hunting mice."

The Jolly Little Cat stood up
And arched his furry spine;
"What fun it is to stretch," he sang.
"And isn't sleeping fine?
And if your bed is cold one night,
And there's no food to eat—
Why, when you're warm again and full,
Say—isn't it a treat?"

The Jolly Little Cat spun round
And chased its flowing tail;
"Some people say success is best—
I sometimes like to fail;
For though it's merry sport for me
To catch my tail, I say
The tail must have some fun, you know,
Each time it gets away."

The Jolly Little Cat lay down
And curled up in a ball.
He dreamed that folk saw good in bad
And big in things quite small.
He dreamed that all bright spots in life
Were well worth looking at.
"What dandy dreams," he purred, awake.
The Jolly Little Cat.

The King

The King wears a crown and a worried frown,
For his throne is ever tilting,
And he must ride in his coach of state,
Though the birds are sweetly lilting.

I make my throne of the new-mown hay,
With the blue, blue sky above me;
With only my will to choose my way
And my little brown dog to love me.

And oh, for the love of a little brown dog,
King's ransom cannot buy it.
Nor win one wag of his curly tail—
If you don't believe me—try it.

So never we envy the weary King,
As we rest on our throne of clover;
But he may share and sup with us
When his golden throne tips over.

—Louise Upham Brooks.

UNCLE JED'S TALK TO THE WIDE-AWAKES

The coyot eand rabbit are numerous in the southwestern part of the country and people in that section insist on killing campaigns against the coyote, a really likeable sort of animal with a rare sense of humor, a lot of smart traits and an unwarranted reputation as a farmyard or ranch pest. The government maintains hundreds of men and spends great amounts of money in exterminating these animals which have a right to live and which, when left to their own program of life, will do little harm to farmyard fowl.

In places where great campaigns against the coyote have been waged it has been noted by farmers and ranchers that the number of jack rabbits increase in proportion to the success of the killers. The rabbits become such menaces to crops, gardens and trees that great rabbit drives are staged by entire communities, resulting in the wholesale slaughter of hundreds of rabbits. These rabbit drives are examples of shameless atrocity against animal life.

The rabbit drives were made necessary because the coyotes were exterminated. It has been found that where wholesale killing, poisoning and trapping campaigns were conducted against the coyote, within a few months or a year a similar drive was necessary against the rabbits. Left alone to follow their courses, the coyotes and rabbits fight their own battles, figuratively speaking, and the balance of nature is maintained. The coyote feeds upon the rabbit and when the farmer kills off the rabbit the coyote has to resort to catching chickens and turkeys. Much obnoxious slaughter of harmless and innocent animals would be prevented if nature were left undisturbed.

STORIES WRITTEN BY WIDE-AWAKES

True Happiness

Dear Uncle Jed: I have just moved to Jewett City from New Bedford, Mass. As I find great pleasure in writing I am sending you this story of mine, hoping you and the Wide-Awake club members will enjoy it rather than be bored. The title is True Happiness.

Verna Lois had always desired to live in the country, where she could enjoy being a "tomboy" without several elders remarking so very often how different she was from other girls of 12 years old. Therefore when she and her parents moved to a tiny Connecticut village her joy knew no bounds. As their cottage was nestled among several sloping hills, she found much enjoyment in thinking that her wishes had really come true. Then as vacation wore on she grew cross with everyone and even with herself. Her parents decided, as she grew worse, that something must be done to take up her time. The following night her aunt, who also lived in Connecticut, was taken seriously ill, so her baby girl was brought to Verna's home to be cared for. Almost instantly Verna's disposition changed and she was her same good self once more. The baby took up plenty of her time, but she didn't seem to mind that at all. She only would say, when her parents asked her why she took so much of the care of the baby for herself, "In New Bedford I belonged to the Girl Reserves and we learned "true happiness is found in making others happy."

At the Beach

Dear Uncle Jed: This is the second time I have written to you. I am going to tell you about the seashore.

One hot summer day my sister, father and I went to the beach. Sister and I made cakes with our sand pails. When we went to eat lunch a little boy came over and knocked down the cakes we made. I told my father the boy had a good time in knocking the cakes down.

Helps Teacher

Dear Uncle Jed: I have long wanted to write to the Wide-Awake circle. I have not any pets to write about, so I will write about my school. I am in grade III. I was not absent or tardy. Sometimes I wash the blackboards and clean the desks to help the teacher.

Rip Van Winkle

Dear Uncle Jed: When the weather was fair the Catskill mountains were clothed in blue and purple.

In the province of Great Britain lived a simple, good natured fellow named Rip Van Winkle.

He found it no use to live on his farm. His fences were falling to pieces. His children were ragged as if they belonged to nobody. He was very unhappy. He was Dame Winkle's henpecked husband.

Rip Van Winkle had a dog named Wolf He was just as henpecked as his master. Dame Winkle looked upon the dog with an evil eye. She hated him.

Rip Van Winkle would go hunting in the mountains, and there he would sit under a tree and share part of his dinner with Wolf.

One day when his wife scolded him he went up the Catskill mountains. He could overlook the whole country. In the distance he could see the Hudson. He heard a voice calling Rip Van Winkle. He looked, but all he could see was a crow. He heard the voice again. He hurried off to see who it was.

He was surprised to see a square-built old fellow with thick bushy hair and a thick grizzled beard. He was dressed in a Dutch costume. On his shoulder he had a keg which seemed full of liquor.

Here Rip Van Winkle went to sleep and slept for 20 years.

When he awoke there was a large rickety wooden building with great gaping windows, some of them broken, and mended with old hats and petticoats, and over the door was painted "The Union Hotel," by Jonathon Doolittle. Nicholas Vedder had died 18 years ago. All of his friends had died and he was all alone in the world.

I hope that you and all the little girls and boys enjoy reading my story and find it interesting.

Our Bible School

Dear Uncle Jed: I am going to tell you about our Bible school. It began the 11th of July and closed the 25th. I did not go the first day because I was away, but I went every other day.

In this school we had six teachers. There were 55 children that came to this school, but of course they did not go every day. Our teacher would tell us stories and then we would make note books, and in them we would write these stories. We also learnd new songs. Wednesday night we gave an entertainment. The class I was in gave a play. The name of it was Healing of Lepers. There was a large attendance at the church Wednesday evening. The things that the girls made in the class I was in were rag dolls and clothes for the dolls, mats, note books and aprons. The rag dolls were to be given to the poor people far away. The mats were for our mothers, and the aprons and note books for ourselves.

The boys who were in the sam class made match boxes, pocketbooks and note books. The match boxes and pocketbooks they sold and the note books they kept. The money that they got was given the missionary to help the poor people.

This school began at 8.30 in the morning and lasted until 11 o'clock. We all had a nice time at the Bible school and I hope we can all go again.

A True Story

Dear Uncle Jed: I haven't written to you for such a long time, and I hope that you and the Wide-Awake circle will enjoy my story.

As we live a short distance from the city limits on a lonely side road, there are on electric lights on the road It is rather dark.

One night as I was coming home from my friend's home I heard what seemed to me as footsteps coming down the hill in my direction.

I ran home as fast as my feet could carry me. I met my father coming out of the yard. On seeing my great excitement he asked me what caused it. Upon finding out he and our dog started down the road to see if anyone was there. Our dog can trail a scent quickly, but this night he couldn't. My father said that there wasn't anybody. Since then I am always afraid to come home alone.

My Trip to Norwich

Dear Uncle Jed: I am writing you just a short story about my trip to Norwich which I took July 28th. Saturday morning at about 9.30 o'clock my family and one of our neighbors started for Norwich. It was raining quite hard when we were just outside of Danielson. I had been to Norwich many times before but this was the first time that I had seen the place where The Norwich Bulletin is printed. I did not enter the building, but I looked at the building from the outside.

After we had eaten our lunch we went outside and we saw that the sun was shining. From 1.15 o'clock until 2.30 o'clock we looked about the city and entered some of the store.

We arrived at home at 4.30 after a short stop along the road. After eating our supper at 5 o'clock my mother and I attended a moving picture show which was Reginald Denny in Good Morning, Judge.

My Chickens.

Dear Uncle Jed: This is the first time I have written to you. I hope you will enjoy it.

I feed my chickens every day. I water them four times a day. At night I give them corn. Every time they see me my red rooster crows, cock-a-doodle-do.

My Fright.

Dear Uncle Jed: This is the first time I have written to you. I hope you will like my story.

I and my cousin were sitting on the front porch reading when suddenly we heard a noise. We looked but did not see anything. Then something moved and we saw a funny looking object. We could not make out what it was.

We ran and told my aunt and when we came out we saw that it was a snake. It was trying to swallow a hoppytoad. My aunt held it with a hoe and I hit it. The hoppytoad jumped away to a safe place I hope that I do not see another snake.

The Missing Hen.

Dear Uncle Jed: I hope the Wide-Awakes will enjoy my story. This is the first time I have written.

Last summer one of my mother's hens was missing. My mother thought a fox had caught her. A few weeks later I found her in the yard with seven chicks.

My mother gave me one of the chicks. I raised her and she became a large hen. My hen laid some eggs. I set my hen on 15 eggs. Now she is the proud mother of 12 chicks.

Visits Farm.

Dear Uncle Jed: This is the second time I have written to you and the Wide-Awakes and I hope you will enjoy reading it. The name of my story is "Visiting the Farm."

One hot day in August I went to visit the farm. I fed the chickens and pigs. I made yellow mash for the ducks and geese. I helped grandpa hoe the garden. I went with John to get the cows and horses. I rode on the goat's back and he tumbled me over but I did not cry. Then I went home.

The Swallow.

Dear Uncle Jed: The bank swallow, sometimes called the sand swallow, is a bird of the air and feeds upon the wing, and therefore apparently takes fewer risks in getting its living than do other birds of threes or the ground.

They may be seen in flocks on the telegraph wires or in company with others of their tribe.

Although there is a variety of plumage of the swallow, nearly all show more or less metalic luster in feathers of the back and all have pleasing voices which sound more like rippling bird laughter than an attempt at singing.

The swallow family is noted for its beauty and grace.

As in years past a colony of these birds returned this summer to the bank at the foot of the hill and it is very interesting to watch them darting in and out of their 17 cosy homes carrying insects to their young ones.

The nests and excavations made by the birds in the sandbank about a foot and a half in length are hollowed out to hold nesting material and consist of straw, grass and feathers, woven flat like a mat and well shaped.

The eggs are pure white and number four to six.

Two broods are usually reared a season, the first in May and the second in June.

The young are similar to the adults; their feathers are of a rusty or cinnamon color.

The bank swallow is described as five and one-half inches in length; its upper parts grayish brown, under parts white and grayish brown, has a band of grayish brown across chest. the bill is small, has depressed tail about a half length of wing forked for about one-sixth of its length.

Comforters.

Dear Uncle Jed: Tonighmt as we were eating supper it began to get very dark and we knew that we would have a storm. It started to rain and thunder The lightning flashed in on us. We stopped eating and went into the living room. Our dog is very frightened in a thunder shower. She wanted to come into the living room with us, but as she is shedding her hair, she had to go into the kitchen. My cousin and I went out into the kitchen to keep my dog company. She was lying under the table, so we sat down near her and petted her. Whenever it lightened and thundered she would look up and see if we were still there and what we were doing. She licked our hands and shook hands with us. As soon as my mother came in with a plate full of food for the dog she jumped up and deserted us. When the cat came in she got so jealous that she left her food and went outdoors.

One Of The Dry Leaders

HOOVER'S SPEECH OF ACCEPTANCE

STANFORD UNIVERSITY, Calif., Aug. 12—(AP)—Californians by the thousands converged yesterday upon this seat of learning to celebrate a great political event in the state's history—the formal notification of Herbert Hoover that the republican party has selected him as its candidate for president.

By airplane, by motor and by train they came to rub shoulders with the great and near great of the party who had travelled thousands of miles to bring the message of nomination to the engineer and administrator who began his life's career here thirty-seven years ago as one of Stanford's first students.

Hours before the gates of the huge athletic bowl were thrown open at noon, the east section of the far flung campus was swarmed with automobiles while the little city of Palo Alto, resplendent in its holiday dress, was overrun.

The text of Mr. Hoover's address follows:

You bring, Mr. Chairman, formal notice of my nomination by the republican party to the presidency of the United States. I accept. It is a great honor to be chosen for leadership in that party which has so largely made the history of our country in these last 70 years.

Mr. Chairman, you and your associates have in four days travelled 3,000 miles across the continent to bring me this notice. I am reminded that in order to notify George Washington of his election, Charles Thompson, secretary of the congress, spent seven days on horseback to deliver that important intelligence 230 miles from New York to Mount Vernon.

In another way, too, this occasion illuminates the milestones of progress. By the magic of the radio this nomination was heard by millions of our fellow citizens, not seven days after its occurrence, nor one day, nor even one minute. They were to all intents and purposes, present in the hall, participants in the proceedings. Today these same millions have heard your voice and now are hearing mine. We stand in their unseen presence. It is fitting, however, that the forms of our national life, hallowed by generations of usage, should be jealously preserved, and for that reason you have come to me, as similar delegations have come to other candidates through the years.

Those invisible millions have already heard from Kansas City the reading of our party principles. They would wish to hear from me not a discourse upon the platform—in which I fully concur—but something of the spirit and ideals with which it is proposed to carry it into administration.

Problems of Progress

Our problems of the past years have been problems of reconstruction; our problems of the future are problems of construction. They are problems of progress. New and gigantic forces have come into our national life. The World war released ideas of government in conflict with our principles. We have grown to financial and physical power which compels us into a new setting among nations. Science has given us new tools and a thousand inventions. Through them have come to each of us wider relationships, more neighbors, more leisure, broader vision, higher ambitions, greater problems. To insure that these tools shall not be used to limit liberty has brought a vast array of questions in government.

The points of contact between the government and the people are constantly multiplying. Every year wise governmental policies become more vital in ordinary life. As our problems grow so do our temptations grow to venture away from those principles upon which our republic was founded and upon which it has grown to greatness. Moreover we must direct economic progress in support of moral and spiritual progress.

Our party platform deals mainly with economic problems, but our nation is not an agglomeration of railroads, of ships, of factories, of dynamos, or statistics. It is a nation of homes, a nation of men, of women, of children. Every man has a right to ask of us whether the United States is a better place for him, his wife and his children to live in, because the republican party has conducted the government for nearly eight years. Every woman has a right to ask whether her life, her home, her man's job, her hopes, her happiness, will be better assured by the continuance of the republican party in power. I propose to discuss the questions before me in that light.

With this occasion we inaugurate the campaign. It shall be an honest campaign; every penny will be publicly accounted for. It shall be a true campaign. We shall use words to convey our meaning, not to hide it.

The republican party came into authority nearly eight years ago. It is necessary to remind ourselves of the critical conditions of that time. We were confronted with an incompleted peace and involved in violent and dangerous disputes both at home and abroad. The federal government was spending at the rate of five and one-half billions per year; our national debt stood at the staggering total of twenty-four billions. The foreign debts were unsettled. The country was in a panic from over expansion due to the war and the continued inflation of credit and currency after the armistice, followed by a precipitant nation-wide deflation which in half a year crashed the prices of commodities by nearly one-half. Agriculture was prostrated; land was unsaleable; commerce and industry were stagnated; our foreign trade ebbed away; five millions of unemployed walked the streets. Discontent and agitation against our democracy were rampant. Fear for the future haunted every heart.

No party ever accepted a more difficult task of reconstruction than did the republican party in 1921. The record of these seven and one-half years constitutes a period of rare courage in leadership and constructive action. Never has a political party been able to look back upon a similar period with more satisfaction. Never could it look forward with more confidence that its record would be approved by the electorate.

Rigorous Economy

Peace has been made. The healing processes of good will have extinguished the fires of hate. Year by year in our relations with other nations we have advanced the ideals of law and of peace, in substitution for force. By rigorous economy federal expenses have been reduced by two billions per annum. The national debt has been reduced by six and a half billions. The foreign debts have been settled in large part and on terms which have regard for our debtors and for our taxpayers. Taxes have been reduced four successive times. These reductions have been made in the particular interest of the smaller taxpayers. For this purpose taxes upon articles of consumption and popular service have been removed. The income tax rolls today show a reduction of 80 per cent in the total revenue collected on income under $10,000 per year, while they show a reduction of only 25 per cent in revenues from incomes above that amount. Each successive reduction in taxes has brought a reduction in the cost of living to all our people.

Commerce and Industry Revived

Commerce and industry have revived. Although the agricultural, coal and textile industries still lag in their recovery and still require our solicitude and assistance, yet they have made substantial progress. While other countries engaged in the war are only now regaining their prewar level in foreign trade, our exports, even if we allow for the depreciated dollar, are 58 per cent greater than before the war. Constructive leadership and cooperation by the government have released and stimulated the energies of our people. Faith in the future has been restored. Confidence in our form of government has never been greater.

But it is not through the recitation of wise policies in government alone that we demonstrate our progress under republican guidance. To me the test is the security, comfort and opportunity that has been brought to the average American family. During this less than eight years our population has increased by 8 per cent. Yet our national income has increased by over thirty billions of dollars per year or more than 45 per cent. Our production—and therefore our consumption—of goods has increased by over 25 per cent. It is easily demonstrated that these increases have been widely spread among our whole people. Home ownership has grown. While during this period the number of families has increased by about 2,300,000 we have built more than 3,500,000 new and better homes. In this short time we have equipped nearly nine million more homes with electricity, and through it drudgery has been lifted from the lives of women. The barriers of time and distance have been swept away and life made freer and larger by the installation of six million more telephones, seven million radio sets, and the service of an additional 14 million automobiles. Our cities are growing magnificent with beautiful buildings, parks and playgrounds. Our countryside has been knit together with splendid roads.

We have doubled the use of electrical power and with it we have taken sweat from the backs of men. The purchasing power of wages has steadily increased. The hours of labor have decreased. The 12-hour day has been abolished. Great progress has been made in stabilization of commerce and industry. The job of every man has thus been made more secure. Unemployment in the sense of distress is widely disappearing.

Most of all, I like to remember what this progress has meant to America's children. The portal of their opportunity has been ever widening. While our population has grown but 8 per cent we have increased by 11 per cent the number of children in our grade schools, by 66 per cent the number in our high schools, and by 75 per cent the number in our institutions of higher learning.

Savings Deposits Doubled

With all our spending we have doubled savings deposits in our banks and building and loan associations. We have nearly doubled our life insurance. Nor have our people been selfish. They have met with a full hand the most sacred obligation of man—charity. The gifts of America to churches, to hospitals, and institutions for the care of the afflicted, and to relief from great disasters, have surpassed by hundreds of millions any totals for any similar period in all human record.

One of the oldest and perhaps the noblest of human aspirations has been the abolition of poverty. By poverty I mean the grinding by under-nourishment, cold, and ignorance and fear of old age of those who have the will to work. We in America today are nearer to the final triumph over poverty than ever before in the history of any land. The poorhouse is vanishing from among us. We have not yet reached the goal but given a chance to go forward with the policies of the last eight years, and we shall soon with the help of God be in sight of the day when poverty will be banished from this nation. There is no guarantee against poverty equal to a job for every man. That is the primary purpose of the economic policies we advocate.

National Efficiency

I especially rejoice in the effect of our increased national efficiency upon the improvement of the American home. That is the sanctuary of our loftiest ideals, the source of the spiritual energy of our people. The bettered home surroundings, the expanded schools and playgrounds, and the enlarged leisure which have come with our economic progress have brought to the average family a fuller life, a wider outlook, a stirred imagination, and a lift in aspirations.

Economic advancement is not an end in itself. Successful democracy rests wholly upon the moral and spiritual quality of its people. Our growth in spiritual achievements must keep pace with our growth in physical accomplishments. Material prosperity and moral progress must march together if we would make the United States that commonwealth so grandly conceived by its founders. Our government, to match the expectations of our people, must have constant regard for those human values that give dignity and nobility to life. Generosity of impulse, cultivation of mind, willingness to sacrifice, spaciousness of spirit—those are the qualities whereby America, growing bigger and richer and more powerful, may become America great and noble. A people or government to which these values are not real, because they are not tangible, is in peril. Size, wealth and power alone cannot fulfill the promise of America's opportunity.

The most urgent economic problem in our nation today is in agriculture. It must be solved if we are to bring prosperity and contentment to one-third of our people directly and to all of our people indirectly. We have pledged ourselves to find a solution.

Agricultural Problem

In my mind most agricultural discussions go wrong because of two false premises. The first is that agriculture is one industry. It is a dozen distinct industries incapable of the same organization. The second false premise is that rehabilitation will be complete when it has reached a point comparable with pre-war. Agriculture was not upon a satisfactory basis before the war. The abandoned farms of the northeast bear their own testimony. Generally there was but little profit in midwest agriculture for many years except that derived from the slow increases in farm land values. Even of more importance is the great advance in standards of living of all occupations since the war. Some branches of agriculture have greatly recovered, but taken as a whole it is not keeping pace with the onward march in other industries.

There are many causes for failure of agriculture to win its full share of national prosperity. The after-war deflation of prices not only brought great direct losses to the farmer but he was often left indebted in inflated dollars to be paid in deflated dollars. Prices are often demoralized through gluts in our markets during the harvest season. Local taxes have been increased to provide the improved roads and schools. The tariff on some products is proving inadequate to protect him from imports from abroad. The increases in transportation rates since the war has greatly affected the price which he receives for his products. Over six million farmers in times of surplus engage in destructive competition with one another in the sale of their product, often depressing prices below those levels that could be maintained.

The whole tendency of our civilization during the last 50 years has been toward an increase in the size of units of production in order to secure lower costs and a more orderly adjustment of the flow of commodities to the demand. But the organization of agriculture into larger units must not be by enlarged farms. The farmer has shown he can increase the skill of his industry without large operations. He is today producing 20 per cent more than eight years ago with about the same acreage and personnel. Farming is and must continue to be an individualistic business; it is a state of living. We do not wish it converted into a mass production machine. Therefore, if the farmers' position is to be improved by larger operations it must be done not on the farm but in the field of distribution. Agriculture has partially advanced in this direction through cooperatives and pools. But the traditional cooperative is often not a complete solution.

Differences of opinion as to both causes and remedy have retarded the completion of a constructive program of relief. It is our plain duty to search out the common ground on which we may mobilize the sound forces of agricultural reconstruction. Our platform lays a solid basis upon which we can build. It offers an affirmative program.

An adequate tariff is the foundation of farm relief. Our consumers increase faster than our producers. The domestic market must be protected. Foreign products raised under lower standards of living are today competing in our home markets. I would use my office and influence to give the farmer the full benefit of our historic tariff policy.

A large portion of the spread between what the farmer receives for his products and what the ultimate consumer pays is due to increased transportation charges. Increase in railway rates has been one of the penalties of the war. These increases have been added to the cost to the farmer reaching seaboard and foreign markets and result therefore in reduction of his prices. The farmers of foreign countries have thus been indirectly aided in their competition with the American farmer. Nature has endowed us with a great system of inland waterways. Their modernization will comprise a most substantial contribution to midwest farm relief and to the development of twenty of our interior states. This modernization includes not only the great Mississippi system, with its joining of the Great Lakes and of the heart of midwest agriculture to the Gulf, but also a shipway from the Great Lakes to the Atlantic. These improvements would mean so large an increment in farmers' prices as to warrant their construction many times over. There is no more vital method of farm relief.

But we must not stop here.

Marketing System

An outstanding proposal of the party program is the whole-hearted pledge to undertake the reorganization of the marketing system upon sounder and more economical lines. We have already contributed greatly to this purpose by the acts supporting farm cooperatives, the establishment of intermediate credit banks, the regulation of stockyards, public exchanges and the expansion of the department of agriculture. The platform proposes to go much farther. It pledges the creation of a federal farm board of representative farmers to be clothed with authority and resources with which not only to still further aid farmers' cooperatives and pools and to assist generally in solution of farm problems but especially to build up with federal finance, farmer-owned and farmer-controlled stabilization corporations which will protect the farmer from the depressions and demoralization of seasonal gluts and periodical surpluses.

Objection has been made that this program, as laid down by the party platform, may require that several hundred millions of dollars of capital be advanced by the federal government without obligation upon the individual farmer. With that objection I have little patience. A nation which is spending ninety billions a year can well afford an expenditure of a few hundred millions for a workable program that will give to one-third of its population their fair share of the nation's prosperity. Nor does this proposal put the government into business except so far as it is called upon to furnish initial capital with which to build up the farmer to the control of his own destinies.

This program adapts itself to the variable problems of agriculture not only today but which will arise in the future. I do not believe that any single human being or any group of human beings can determine in advance all questions that will arise in so vast and complicated an industry over a term of years. The first step is to create an effective agency directly for these purposes and to give it authority and resources. These are solemn pledges and they will be fulfilled by the republican party. It is a definite plan of relief. It needs only the detailed elaboration of legislation and appropriations to put it into force.

During my term as secretary of commerce I have steadily endeavored to build up a system of cooperation between the government and business. Under these cooperative actions all elements interested in the problem of a particular industry such as manufacturer, distributor, worker and consumer have been called into council together, not for a single occasion but for continuous work. These efforts have been successful beyond any expectation. They have been accomplished without interference or regulation by the government. They have secured progress in the industries, remedy for abuses, elimination of waste, reduction of cost in production and distribution, lower prices to the consumer, and more stable employment and profit. While the problem varies with every different commodity and with every different part of our great country, I should wish to apply the same method to agriculture so that the leaders of every phase of each group can advise and organize on policies and constructive measures. I am convinced that this form of action, as it has done in other industries, can greatly benefit farmer, distributor and consumer.

The working out of agricultural relief constitutes the most important obligation of the next administration. I stand pledged to these proposals. The object of our policies is to establish for our farmers an income equal to those of other occupations; for the farmer's wife the same comforts in her home as women in other groups; for the farm boys and girls the same opportunities in life as other boys and girls. So far as my own abilities may be of service, I dedicate them to help secure prosperity and contentment in that industry where I and my forefathers were born and nearly all my family still obtain their livelihood.

Protective Tariff

The republican party has ever been the exponent of protection to all our people from competition with lower standards of living abroad. We have always fought for tariffs designed to establish this protection from imported goods. We also have enacted restrictions upon immigration for the protection of labor from the inflow of workers faster than we can absorb them without breaking down our wage levels.

The republican principle of an effective control of imported goods and of immigration has contributed greatly to the prosperity of our country. There is no selfishness in this defense of our standards of living. Other countries gain nothing if the high standards of America are sunk and if we are prevented from building a civilization which sets the level of hope for the entire world. A general reduction in the tariff would admit a flood of goods from abroad. It would injure every home. It would fill our streets with idle workers. It would destroy the returns to our dairymen, our fruit, flax and livestock growers, and our other farmers.

No man will say that any immigration or tariff law is perfect. We welcome our new immigrant citizens and their great contribution to our nation; we seek only to protect them equally with those already here. We shall amend the immigration laws to relieve unnecessary hardships upon families. As a member of the commission whose duty it is to determine the quota basis under the national origins law I have found it is impossible to do so accurately and without hardship. The basis now in effect carries out the essential principle of the law and I favor repeal of that part of the act calling for a new basis of quotas.

We have pledged ourselves to make such revisions in the tariff laws as may be necessary to provide real protection against the shiftings of economic tides in our various industries. I am sure the American people would rather entrust the perfection of the tariff to the consistent friend of the tariff than to our opponents, who have always reduced our tariffs, who voted against our present protection to the workers and the farmer, and whose whole economic theory over generations has been the destruction of the protective principle.

Having earned my living with my own hands I cannot have other than the greatest sympathy with the aspirations of those who toil. It has been my good fortune during the past 12 years to have received the cooperation of labor in many directions and in promotion of many public purposes.

Trade Union Movement.

The trade union movement in our country has maintained two departures from such movements in all other countries. They have been staunch supporters of American individualism and American institutions. They have steadfastly opposed subversive doctrines from abroad. Our freedom from foreign social and economic diseases is in large degree due to this resistance by our own labor. Our trade unions, with few exceptions, have welcomed all basic improvement in industrial methods. This largeness of mind has contributed to the advancing standards of living of the whole of our people. They properly have sought to participate—by additions to wages—in the result of improvements and savings which they have helped to make.

During these past years we have grown greatly in the mutual understanding between employer and employee. We have seen a growing realization by the employer that the highest practicable wage is the road to increased consumption and prosperity and we have seen a growing realization by labor that the maximum use of machines, of effort and of skill is the road to lower production costs and in the end to higher real wages. Under these impulses and the republican protective system our industrial output has increased as never before and our wages have grown steadily in buying power. Our workers with their average weekly wages can today buy two and often three times more bread and butter than any wage earner of Europe. At one time we demanded for our workers a "full dinner pail." We have now gone far beyond that conception. Today we demand larger comfort and greater participation in life and leisure.

The republican platform gives the pledge of the party to the support of labor. It endorses the principle of collective bargaining and freedom in labor negotiations. We stand also pledged to the curtailment of excessive use of the injunction in labor disputes.

The war and the necessary curtailment of expenditure during the reconstruction years have suspended the construction of many needed public works. Moreover, the time has arrived when we must undertake a larger visioned development of our water resources. Every drop which runs to the sea without yielding its full economic service is a waste.

Development of Waters.

Nearly all of our greater drainages contain within themselves possibilities of cheapened transportation, irrigation, reclamation, domestic water supply, hydro-electric power and frequently the necessities of flood control. But this development of our waters requires more definite national policies in the systematic co-ordination of those different works upon each drainage area. We have wasted scores of millions by projects undertaken not as a part of a whole but as the consequence of purely local demands. We cannot develop modernized water transportation by isolated projects. We must develop it as a definite and positive interconnected system of transportation. We must adjust reclamation and irrigation of our needs for more land. When they lie together we must co-ordinate transportation with flood control, the development of hydro-electric power and of irrigation, else we shall as in the past commit errors that will take years and millions to remedy. The congress has authorized and has in process of legislation great programs of public works. In addition to the works in development of water resources, we have in progress large undertakings in public roads and the construction of public buildings.

All these projects will probably require an expenditure of upwards of one billion dollars within the next four years. It comprises the largest engineering construction ever undertaken by any government. It involves three times the expenditure laid out upon the Panama canal. It is justified by the growth, need and wealth of our country. The organization and administration of this construction is a responsibility of the first order. For it we must secure the utmost economy, honesty, and skill, these works which will provide jobs for an army of men should so far as practicable be adjusted to take up the slack of unemployment elsewhere.

I rejoice in the completion of legislation providing adequate flood control of the Mississippi. It marks not alone the undertaking of a great national task but it constitutes a contribution to the development of the south. In encouragement of their economic growth lies one of the great national opportunities of the future.

The 18th Amendment

I recently stated my position upon the 18th amendment which I again repeat:

"I do not favor the repeal of the 18th amendment. I stand for the efficient enforcement of the laws enacted thereunder. Whoever is chosen president has under his oath the solemn duty to pursue this course.

"Our country has deliberately undertaken a great social and economic experiment, noble in motive and far-reaching in purpose. It must be worked out constructively."

Common sense compels us to realize that grave abuses have occurred—abuses which must be remedied. And organized searching investigation of fact and causes can alone determine the wise method of correcting them. Crime and disobedience of law cannot be permitted to break down the constitution and laws of the United States.

Modification of the enforcement laws which would permit that which the constitution forbids is nullification. The American people will not countenance. Changes in the constitution can and must be brought about only by the straightforward methods in the constitution itself. There are those who do not believe in the purpose of several provisions of the constitution. No one denies their right to seek to amend it. They are not subject to criticism for asserting that right. But the republican party does deny the right of anyone to seek to destroy the purposes of the constitution by indirection.

Whoever is elected president takes an oath not only to faithfully execute the office of the president, but that oath provides still further that he will to the best of his ability, preserve, protect and defend the constitution of the United States. I should be untrue to these great traditions, untrue to my oath of office were I to declare otherwise.

Our Economic System.

With impressive proof on all sides of magnificent progress, no one can rightly deny the fundamental correctness of our economic system. Nothing however is perfect but it works for progress. Our pre-eminent advance over nations in the last eight years has been due to distinctively American accomplishments. We do not owe these accomplishments to our vast natural resources. These we have always had. They have not increased. What has changed is our ability to utilize these resources more effectively. It is our human resources that have changed. Man for man and woman for woman we are today more capable, whether in the work of farm, factory, or business than ever before. It lies in our magnificent educational system, in the hard working character of our people, in the capacities of far-sighted leadership in industry, the ingenuity, the daring of the pioneers of new inventions, in the abolition of the saloon, and wisdom of our national policies.

With the growth and increasing complexity of our economic life the relations of government and business are multiplying daily. They are yearly more dependent upon each other. Where it is helpful and necessary, this relation should be encouraged. Beyond this it should not go. It is the duty of government to avoid regulation as long as equal opportunity to all citizens is not invaded and public rights violated. Government should not engage in business in competition with its citizens. Such actions extinguish the enterprise and initiative which has been the glory of America and which has been the root of its pre-eminence among the nations of the earth. On the other hand, it is the duty of business to conduct itself so that government regulations or government competition is unnecessary.

Business Founded on Faith

Business is practical, but it is founded upon faith—faith among our people in the integrity of business men, and faith that it will receive fair play. Our whole business system would break down in a day if there was not a high sense of moral responsibility in our business world. The whole practice and ethics of business has made great strides of improvement in the last quarter of a century, largely due to the effort of business and the profession themselves. One of the most helpful signs of recent years is the stronger growth of associations of workers, farmers, business men and professional men with a desire to cure their own abuses and a purpose to serve public interest. Many problems can be solved through co-operation between government and these self-governing associations to improve methods and practices. When business cures its own abuses it is true self-government which comprises more than political institutions.

One of the greatest difficulties of business with government is the multitude of unnecessary contacts with government bureaus, the uncertainty and inconsistency of government policies, and the duplication of governmental activities. A large part of this is due to the scattering of functions and the great confusion of responsibility in our federal organization. We have, for instance, 14 different bureaus or agencies engaged in public works and construction, located in nine different departments of the government. It brings about competition between government agencies, inadequacy of control, and a total lack of co-ordinated policies in public works. We have eight different bureaus and agencies charged with conservation of our natural resources, located in five different departments of the government. These conditions exist in many other directions. Divided responsibility, with the absence of centralized authority prevents constructive and consistent development of broad national policies.

Our republican presidents have repeatedly recommended to Congress that it would not only greatly reduce expenses of business in their contacts with government but that a great reduction could be made in governmental expenditure and more consistent and continued national policies could be developed if we could secure the grouping of these agencies devoted to one major purpose under single responsibility and authority. I have had the good fortune to be able to carry out such reorganization in respect to the Department of Commerce. The results have amply justified its expansion to other departments and I should consider it an obligation to enlist the suport of Congress to effect it.

The government can be of invaluable aid in the promotion of business. The ideal state of business is freedom from those flucuations from boom to slump which bring on one hand the periods of unemployment and bankruptcy and on the other speculation and waste. Both are destructive and fraught with great hardship to every home. By economy in expenditures, wise taxation, and sound fiscal finance it can relieve the burdens upon sound business and promote financial stability. By sound tariff policies it can protect our workmen, our farmers, and our manufacturers from lower standards of living abroad. By scientific research it can promote invention and improvement in methods. By economic research and statistical service it can promote the elimination of waste and contribute to stability in production and distribution. By promotion of foreign trade it can expand the markets for our manufacturers and farmers and thereby contribute greatly to stability and employment.

Production and Distribution

Our people know that the production and distribution of goods on a large scale is not wrong. Many of the most important comforts of our people are only possible by mass production and distribution. Both small and big business have their full place. The test of business is not its size—the test is whether there is honest competition, whether there is freedom from domination, whether there is integrity and usefulness of purpose. As secretary of commerce I have been greatly impressed by the fact that the foundation of American business is the independent business man. The department by encouragement of his associations and by provision of special service has endeavored to place him in a position of equality in information and skill with larger operations. Alike with our farmers his is the stronghold of American individuality. It is here that our local communities receive their leadership. It is here that we refresh our leadership for larger enterprise. We must maintain his opportunity and his individual service. He and the public must be protected from any combination or from predatory business.

I have said that the problems before us are more economic, that in a much greater degree they are moral and spiritual. I hold that there rest upon government many responsibilities which affect the moral and spiritual welfare of our people. The participation of women in politics means a keener realization of the importance of these questions. It means higher political standards.

Responsibilities of Ballot

One-half of our citizens fail to exercise the responsibilities of the ballot box. I would wish that the women of our country could embrace this problem in citizenship as peculiarly their own. If they could apply their higher sense of service and responsibility, their freshness of enthusiasm, their capacity for organization to this problem, it would become, as it should become an issue of profound patriotism. The whole plane of political life would be lifted, the foundations of democracy made more secure.

In this land, dedicated to tolerance we still find outbreaks of intolerance. I come of Quaker stock. My ancestors were persecuted for their benefits. Here they sought and found religious freedom. By blood and conviction I stand for religious tolerance both in act and in spirit. The glory of our American ideals is the right of every man to worship God according to the dictates of his own conscience.

In the past years there has been corruption participated in by principal officials and members of both parties in national, state and municipal affairs. Too often this corruption has been viewed with indifference by a great number of our people. It would seem unnecessary to state the elemental requirement that government must inspire confidence not only in its ability but in its integrity. Dishonesty in government, whether national, state, or municipal is a double wrong. It is treason to the state. It is destructive of self-government. Government in the United States rests not only upon the consent of the governed but upon the conscience of the nation. Government weakens the moment that its integrity is even doubted. Moral incompetency by those entrusted with government is a blighting wind upon private integrity. There must be no place for cynicism in the creed of America.

Civil Service.

Our civil service has proved a great national boon. Appointive office, both north, south, east, and west, must be based solely on merit, character, and reputation in the community in which the appointee is to serve; as it is essential for the proper performance of their duties that officials shall enjoy the confidence and respect of the people with whom they serve.

For many years I have been associated with efforts to save life and health for our children. These experiences with millions of children both at home and abroad have left an indelible impression—that the greatness of any nation, its freedom from poverty and crime, its aspirations and ideals—are the direct quotient of the care of its children. Racial progress marches upon the feet of healthy and instructed children. There should be no child in America that is not born and does not live under sound conditions of health; that does not have full opportunity of education from the beginning to the end of our institutions; that is not free from injurious labor; that does not have every stimulation to accomplish the fullest of its capacities. Nothing in development of child life will ever replace the solicitude of parents and the surroundings of home, but in many aspects both parents and children are dependent upon the vigilance of government, national, state and local.

I especially value the contribution that the youth of the country can make to the success of our American experiment in democracy. Theirs is the precious gift of enthusiasm, without which no great deeds can be accomplished. A government that does not constantly seek to live up to the ideals of its young men and women falls short of what the American people have a right to expect and demand from it. To interpret the spirit of the youth into the spirit of our government: to bring the warmth of their enthusiasm and the flame of their idealism into the affairs of the nation—is to make of American government a positive and living force, a factor for greatness and nobility in the life of the nation.

Passion For Peace.

I think I may say that I have witnessed as much of the horror and suffering of war as any other American. From it I have derived a deep passion for peace. Our foreign policy has one primary object, and that is peace. We have no hates; we wish no further possessions; we harbor no military threats. The unspeakable experiences of the Great War, the narrow margins by which civilization survived from its exhaustion, is still vivid in men's minds. There is no nation in the world today that does not earnestly wish for peace—that is not striving for peace.

There are two co-operating factors in the maintenance of peace—the building of good will by wise and sympathetic handling of international relations, and the adequate preparedness for defense. We must not only be just; we must be respected. The experiences of the war afforded final proof that we cannot isolate ourselves from the world, that the safeguarding of peace cannot be attained by negative action. Our offer of treaties open to the signature of all, renouncing war as an instrument of national policy, proves that we have every desire to cooperate with other nations for peace. But our people have determined that we can give the greatest real help—both in times of tranquility, and in times of strain—if we maintain our independence from the political exigencies of the old world. In pursuance of this, our country has refused membership in the League of Nations, but we are glad to co-operate with the league in its endeavors to further scientific, economic, and social welfare and to secure limitation of armament.

We believe that the foundation of peace can be strengthened by the creation of methods and agencies by which a multitude of incidents may be transferred from the realm of prejudice and force to arbitration and the determination of right and wrong based upon international law.

Limitation Armaments.

We have been and we are particularly desirous of furthering the limitation of armaments. But in the meantime we know that in an armed world there is only one certain guarantee of freedom—and that is preparedness for defense. It is solely to defend ourselves, for the protection of our citizens that we maintain armament. No clearer evidence of this can exist than the unique fact that we have fewer men in army uniform today than we have in police uniforms, and that we maintain a standing invitation to the world that we are always ready to limit our naval armament in proportion as the other naval nations will do likewise. We earnestly wish that the burdens and dangers of armament upon every home in the world might be lessened. But we must and shall maintain our naval defense and our merchant marine in the strength and efficiency which will yield to us at all times the primary assurance of liberty, that is, of national safety.

No Privileged Class.

There is one of the ideals of America upon which I wish at this time to lay especial emphasis. For we should constantly test our economic, social and governmental system by certain ideals which must control them. The founders of our republic propounded the revolutionary doctrine that all men are created equal and all should have equality before the law. This was the emancipation of the individual. And since these beginnings, slowly, surely and almost imperceptibly, this nation has added a third ideal almost unique to America—the ideal of equal opportunity. This is the safeguard of the individual. The simple life of early days in our republic found but few limitations upon equal opportunity. By the growing of our people and the intensity and complexity of their activities it takes today a new importance.

Equality of opportunity is the right of every American—rich or poor, foreign or native-born, irrespective of faith or color. It is the right of every individual to attain that position in life to which his ability and character entitle him. By its maintenance we will alone hold open the door of opportunity to every new generation, to every boy and girl. It tolerates no privileged classes or castes or groups who would hold opportunity as their prerogative. Only from confidence that this right will be upheld can flow that unbounded courage and hope which stimulates each individual man and woman to endeavor and to achievement. The sum of their achievement is the gigantic harvest of national progress.

Equal Opportunity.

This ideal of individualism based upon equal opportunity to every citizen is the negation of socialism. It is the negation of anarchy. It is the negation of despotism. It is as if we set a race. We, through free and universal education, provide the training of the runners; we give to them an equal start; we provide in the government the umpire of fairness in the race. The winner is he who shows the most conscientious training, the greatest ability, and the greatest character. Socialism bids all to end the race equally. It holds back the speedy to the pace of the slowest. Anarchy would provide neither training nor umpire. Despotism picks those who should run and those who should win.

Conservative, progressive and liberal thought and action have their only real test in whether they contribute to equal opportunity, whether they hold open the door of opportunity. If they do not they are false in their premise no matter what their name may be.

It was Abraham Lincoln who firmly enunciated this ideal as the equal chance. The Sherman law was enacted in an endeavor to hold open the door of equal opportunity in business. The commissions for regulation of public utilities were created to prevent discrimination in service and prevent extortion in rates—and thereby the destruction of equal opportunity. Equality of opportunity is a fundamental principle of our nation. With it we must test all our policies. The success or failure of this principle is the test of our government.

Mr. chairman, I regret that time does not permit the compass of many important questions. I hope at a later time to discuss the development of waterways, highways, aviation, irrigable lands, foreign trade and merchant marine, the promotion of education, more effective administration of our criminal laws, the relation of our government to public utilities and railways, the primary necessity of conservation of natural resources, measures for further economy in government and reduction of taxes—all of which afford problems of the first order.

Praises President Coolidge.

I would violate my conscience and the gratitude I feel, did I not upon this occasion express appreciation of the great president who leads our party today. President Coolidge has not only given a memorable administration, he has left an imprint of rectitude and statesmanship upon the history of our country. His has been the burden of reconstruction of our country from the destruction of war. He has dignified economy to a principle of government. He has charted the course of our nation and our party over many years to come. It is not only a duty but it is the part of statesmanship that we adhere to this course.

No man who stands before the mighty forces which ramify American life has the right to promise solutions at his hand alone. All that an honest man can say is that within the extent of his abilities and his authority and in co-operation with the congress and with leaders of every element in our people these problems shall be courageously met and solution will be courageously attempted.

Our purpose is to build in this nation a human society, not an economic system. We wish to increase the efficiency and productivity of our country but its final purpose is happier homes. We shall succeed through the faith, the loyalty, the self-sacrifice, the devotion to eternal ideals which live today in every American.

The matters which I have discussed directly and deeply affect the moral and spiritual welfare of our country. No one believes these aspirations and hopes can be realized in a day. Progress or remedy lies often enough at the hand of state and local government. I want to see our government great both as an instrument and a symbol of the nation's greatness.

The presidency is more than an administrative office. It must be the symbol of American ideals. The high and the lowly must be seen with the same eyes, met in the same spirit. It must be the instrument by which national conscience is livened and it must, under the guidance of the Almighty interpret and follow that conscience.

CROP AND INDUSTRIAL REPORTS ARE FAVORABLE TO BUSINESS OUTLOOK

NEW YORK, Aug. 13—(AP)—Trade, crop and industrial reports during the past week continued to lend a rosy tinge to the business outlook for the remainder of the year, in distinct contrast to developments at this time last year.

The only menacing shadow was cast by the credit situation, with time money rising to 6 1-2 per cent for the first time in seven years, accompanied by an increase in the bankers' acceptance rate of 1-8 of 1 per cent, boosting it to the highest figure in some time. Continued tight money, however, has not appreciably retarded business this far, although in some circles it is reported to have held up new business enterprises.

The department of agriculture estimated that bumper crops would be harvested, yields averaging 4 per cent larger per acre than for any recent year.

The metal working industry gave evidence of progress the best summer in its history. Steel ingot production surpassed all records for production in the first seven months, and production continued heavy during the first week of August. While the United States Steel corporation reported a small decline in unfilled orders for July, the decline was not as large as had been expected, in view of the hot weather.

Heavy demands for steel continued to come from the automobile, building and farm implement industries, while orders for railroad equipment picked up. The high rate of activity in the automobile industry was reflected by Detroit employment figures, which were the highest ever reported last week. Building permitted during July showed a gain of more than 11 per cent over July of last year, the largest gain shown in any month in four years.

Pig iron, which had been lagging for some time, encountered a buying movement of large proportions in the middle west, and greater activity in the east. More activity was also reported in the non-ferrous metals, particularly zinc.

The lumber trade reported firmer prices on the Pacific coast and more doing in the hard wood section of the south. Shoe manufacturing kept up at a high rate of activity. The rubber industry continued to feel a heavy demand for tires, while the petroleum industry improved with further gasoline price rises. Textiles were unsettled by the government cotton report, although a few cotton mills resumed activity at a decreased rate.

Retail trade in seasonable commodities was kept at a good level by the warm weather, and buying for the fall trade had reassuring beginnings, although unsettled prices has made it slow in cotton textiles. Department and chain stores and mail order houses substantially increased car loadings.

Total freight car loading for the last week, however, declined slightly. Business failures showed a marked increase over the corresponding week of any recent year, attributable largely to tight money. Bank clearings were almost down to last year's volume.

VIRGINIA-NEWPORT WOMAN DRIVER FIGURES IN NEW LONDON CAR CRASH

(Special to The Bulletin)

NEW LONDON, Aug. 12—The only arrest today was that of Mrs. Robert Briggs, 23 Belview avenue, Ocean View, Norfolk, Va., and 33 VanZandt street, Newport, R. I. She was arrested by Patrolman George Perkins following a collision of her auto, and a car driven by Walter Elliott, 195 Campbell avenue, New Haven, on Main street. Mrs. Briggs, who did not have either a driver's license or registration in her possession, was ordered to appear in the police court Monday. Both machines were damaged.

An automobile carrying Canal Zone markers, which had been parked on the pier of the Fishers Island Navigation company four days was taken in charge by the police today and removed to storage. It later developed that the auto is the property of Sidney P. Abbott, a member of the crew of the U. S. S. Camden, which is at anchor in the lower harbor.

An automobile truck, owned by the Eastern Dairies, Inc., and driven by Henry Burke, in backing along the municipal pier yesterday, crashed against one of the wooden supports for wires that provide power for the electric lights there. The pole was demolished and the wires torn away. A repair gang of the Connecticut Power company, placed the wire back in position so that light was obtainable Saturday night.

THEFTS AT NOANK STATION GET DAVID WELLS, 17, IN BAD

(Special to The Bulletin)

NEW LONDON, Aug. 12—David Wells, 17, residing at Riverhead, L. I., appears to have developed a mania for thieving and was highly successful until his activities in this line were brought to an end Friday by State Police Officer Bernard Kennerson. Earlier in the week a man named Carson, residing at Noank, made complaint to the state police that $70 had been stolen from his clothing during his absence from home. Officer Kennerson was assigned to investigate the complaint and suspicion pointed to the youth. Wells finally broke down and made a complete confession. He admitted stealing the money and spending all but $22, which amount was found in his possession when he was arrested. He was presented in court and fined $50, but because of additional thefts, he is now a prisoner at the state police barracks awaiting his being turned over to the federal authorities for he has admitted mail robbery. The boy broke into the Noank railroad station and finding registered letters there stole them, in the belief that he would find money in the envelopes. As the contents of the letters were of no value to the youth, he destroyed them.

Miss Mae Stoebener of Groton; Mrs. Sebastian Germano, 43 Cutler street; Elmer Miner, Noank and Hugo Dynner, Jersey City, N. J., patients at Home Memorial hospital, were discharged Saturday.

Mrs. Gershowitz of Jay street, made complaint to the police Saturday that articles of apparel that had been allowed to remain on a clothes line in the rear of her home Friday night had been mutilated. Patrolman Clarence Wells who investigated the complaint, reported that the apparel had been wilfully damaged by some person using a knife or similar sharp instrument.

Five arrests were made by the police Saturday afternoon and night for violators of the city's parking or traffic laws. Richard H. Waite, Palmer, Mass., Mrs. R. E. Hunter, 319 Broad street and Arthur M. Shaw, Springfield, Mass., were charged with parking overtime on State street; Sybil J. Newhall, Phoenixville, Pa., blocking traffic on Bank street and Donald Hallock, 446 Park street, Montclair, N. J., parking in restricted area on Main street. All furnished bonds and were ordered to appear in the police court tomorrow.

NEW YORK MAN RESPONSIBLE FOR HEAD-ON COLLISION

(Special to The Bulletin)

NEW LONDON, Aug. 12—As a result of a head-on collision on Plant Hill, East Lyme Saturday morning, five persons were injured, one perhaps fatally. All excepting one are patients at Lawrence-Memorial hospital. The injured are John Anderson, 36, of 34 West 126th street, New York, abrasions on the face and neck; Walter Himmick, 37, same address, possible fractured skull, multiple contusions and lacerations of the face; Mrs. Hilda Salo, 37, of 8 East 127th street, New York, fractured rib and lacerations of scalp; Rust Salo, 34, same address, lacerations of the scalp, John Hanson, 20, Saybrook, fractured nose, fractured elbow and lacerations of the face and hands. Himmick's condition is reported as critical. Hanson went to his home after his injuries had been treated.

Anderson was driving a sedan in which were Himmick and Mr. and Mrs. Salo. The car, a new one, not having been driven 1,000 miles, was headed toward New London, when the coupe driven by Hanson, residing at Saybrook and employed as night watchman where road construction work is under way, approached from the opposite direction. The two cars had reached a point near the Bridebrook road, when Anderson for some unknown cause changed the course of traffic and headed the auto to the left hand side of the highway. In another instant the two cars crashed, the sedan being overturned. Hanson's auto was lifted several feet from the earth, but did not overturn. Hanson was thrown out. The overturned sedan held its occupants prisoners and while in that predicament the car became ablaze. Charles Champion, who was on the veranda of his home when the accident occurred, rushed to the assistance of the imprisoned passengers in the burning car and with the aid of passing autoists the men and women were rescued. After being freed from the burning auto, which was destroyed, the passengers were taken to the lawn of the Champion home and a hurry call was sent for the ambulance. On its arrival all the passengers of the two cars were rushed to the hospital. State Police Officers Frederick Johnson and Peter Busch were sent from the Groton barracks to make an investigation and decided that Anderson was entirely responsible for the crash. He will be arrested on a charge of reckless driving as soon as his condition will permit his being discharged from the hospital.

Mrs. John Milby, 59 High street, Westerly; Mrs. Loretta Brooks, 340 North Seventh street, Trenton, N. J.; Rev. Philip M. Kerridge, 31 Post Hill place; Russell Reynolds, Hamburg; Miss Teresa Brown, 57 Fair Harbour place; Miss Abbie Bart, 56 Latham street, Groton and Mrs. Mary Manwaring, Niantic, patients at Lawrence-Memorial hospital, were discharged Saturday.

Charles Lloyd, submarine base, a member of the crew of U. S. S. Chewink, was arrested Saturday by State Officer Peter Busch, charged with violation of the state motor vehicle laws in parking his car longer than 24 hours. Lloyd allowed his machine to remain longer than a day on the military highway, Groton.

An automobile carrying New York markers was driven to the rear of the P. Adel company, 426 Bank street last Sunday and allowed to remain there until Saturday when the police had the car taken to storage.

Mr. and Mrs. Thomas Hunt, North Adams, Mass., spent the week end with relatives in this city, making the trip by automobile.

A pony was found roaming about Bank street, between Howard and Tilley streets at 5.30 o'clock Saturday morning. The animal was taken to the yard of the Chevrolet service station and secured. Later it was claimed by the owner.

A couple of drunks, one a Niantic man, were found asleep in a barn, corner of Federal and Water streets adjutting the tracks of the New Haven railroad, Friday night by Patrolman Frank Philopena and Special Agent Harold Swanson. They were arrested and in the police court Saturday, one received a suspended sentence of 10 days in jail and the other was fined $5, but execution was suspended. Another drunk, who was found in the boiler room of the railroad and arrested by Special Agent Jorgerson, was given a suspension of judgment.

Cecil Cunningham, 326 Crystal avenue and William G. Burt of Lyme, were charged with violation of the city parking laws. They failed to appear in court so their respective bonds of $2 were declared forfeited.

Two picnics were held Saturday, one at the Ninigret house, Crescent beach and the other at Riverside park. The employes of the city, most of them being employed at the municipal building, passed the day at Crescent beach. Thirty young men and ladies enjoyed the outing. A New England clam chowder was served at noon. At 5 o'clock the picnickers feasted on chicken and lobsters. At Riverside park the Daughters of Liberty spent the day feasting and bathing.

A Chrysler automobile owned by Harry Laviness, Station 11, Waterford, was stolen in this city Friday night. The automobile which carries Connecticut registration, N-5008 was driven by the thief to East Hartford where it was abandoned. Last night the Hartford police notified the New London police of the recovery of the auto and today Laviness went to East Hartford and drove the machine home.

Officials of Lawrence-Memorial hospital requested the assistance of the police Friday night for a woman had been brought to the hospital without authority of a physician nor request from a charitable institution. These facts made the woman a city charge, especially as she had been brought from one state to another. Patrolman Dennis Murphy was sent to the hospital and ascertained that Mary Judd 55, of Old Mystic, who had been receiving treatment at Middletown hospital, Cambridge, Mass., had been brought to the institution by Warren A. Michie, 10 Hancock place, Cambridge, he said at the request of Mrs. Judd's daughter, Mrs. Fannie Champlin, also of Old Mystic. The woman is still a patient at the hospital and some arrangement will be made, either by Michie or Mrs. Champlin for caring for the woman.

The United Cigar company has leased to Albert P. Ware, the two floors of the building corner of State and Bank streets, over the cigar store, for a term of 12 years. The annual rental of both floors from July 15 to July 14, 1933, will be $1500 and from the latter date to March 21, 1940, the annual rent will be $1800. Since obtaining the lease of the two floors, Mr. Ware has subleased the floor space to the New England Locker and Billiard company, of New York.

David Fitzgerald of Montville, was presented before Justice of the Peace J. Y. Miller, of Montville, Saturday afternoon and fined on charges of intoxication and breach of the peace. He was arrested Friday night by State Police Officer Peter Busch and locked up at New London headquarters over night.

Mrs. Frances T. Simonds, wife of Otis E. L. Simonds, died at 1 o'clock Saturday morning at her residence, 39 Hill street, after a lingering illness. Besides her husband and an infant she also is survived by her father, James Taylor and by two brothers.

DENIED FINDING RING—NEW YORK WOMAN STRIPPED

(Special to The Bulletin)

NEW LONDON, Aug. 12—Mary Smith, Ruth Taylor and Mrs. Lillian Jones, all colored and of New York, were arrested this afternoon by Traffic Officer William Corcoran and Special Agent James Daly, charged with theft. They will be in the police court tomorrow. The young women were in the vicinity of the railroad station where a woman passenger had reported the loss of a ring. Later the Smith woman was observed to pick up the ring and when she was requested to deliver the ring to the owner she refused to do so, denying all knowledge of the finding of the ring. The officers were called into the case, but neither of the women would admit finding the ring, even in view of threat of arrest. The women were taken to police headquarters where they were given another opportunity to deliver the ring. Further refusal to do so resulted in the matron at the railroad station being brought to police headquarters and when the Smith woman was stripped of her clothing the ring was found.

Saturday afternoon, Miss Pauline Cherrick, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. John Cherrick of Oakdale, became the bride of Howard Beebe, son of Mrs. Carrie Beebe of School street. The ceremony was performed by Rev. J. Romeyn Danforth, pastor of the First Church of Christ. Following the wedding a reception was held at the home of the bride's parents. After a honeymoon trip, Mr. and Mrs. Beebe will make their home in this city. The bride's dress was of white satin. She wore a train veil and carried white roses. Two girls, Ida Topaz of this city and Ardis Coffey of Oakdale carried the bride's train. The bridesmaid, Miss Annie Topaz, wore a gown of green organdie with picture hat to match and carried pink roses. Frank Cherrick of Oakdale, brother of the bride was best man. Mr. Beebe is in the United States lighthouse service.

When Mrs. E. Oliver Winship of Ocean avenue entertained at bridge Friday night for her daughters, Elizabeth and Dorothy, those who won prizes were Matilda Belcher, Eleanor Hull, Constance Meadnis and Peggy David. At the conclusion of play refreshments were served. Others in attendance were Dorothy and Eleanor Talcott, Flora Maine, Judy Main, Marion Brown, Eleanor Bowen, Frances Doll, Elizabeth and Catherine Avery, Harriet Chappell, Virginia David, Nancy Smith, Joan Byrd, Ruth Chandler, Elizabeth Latimer, Edna Howey, Dorothy Andrews, Katherine Eggleston, Alice Fisher, Jean Foster, Diana Marsh, Evelyn Utley and Winifred McGuire.

Announcement was made Saturday of the wedding of Miss Alyce Elizabeth Chapel, daughter of Mrs. Ellen Chapel of Montville, and Oliver Dorne of Miami, Fla. The ceremony was performed at East Lyme. Upon the completion of a honeymoon they will reside in Miami.

Robert A. Ferguson, son of Mr. and Mrs. Robert Ferguson, of Montauk avenue, has been awarded a scholarship to Lafayette university, Easton, Pa. Young Ferguson is a graduate of Bulkeley school and during the four-year course there had a general average of 92.

Miss Dorothy Parenteau gave a miscellaneous shower recently for Miss Bertha Parenteau of 10 Montauk avenue, soon to become the bride of William T. Miller, Jr., son of Mr. and Mrs. William T. Miller of Burlington, N. J. She received many attractive gifts.

ANNOUNCEMENTS

Will Occupy Broadway Store

Carl W. Brown, Incorporated, local Delco-Light and Frigidaire dealers have leased the store at 64 Broadway in the T. A. B. building, next to the Gilbert Furniture company, for an office and sales room for Frigidaire and Delco-Light.

This business was started over ten years ago by Carl W. Brown with offices in the Thayer Building, when farm lighting plants were practically unknown, and after a time larger quarters were secured in the Thames Loan & Trust building and for the past several years still larger quarters were occupied in the Uncas National Bank building.

The company was incorporated in January, 1925, and today has over four hundred Delco-Light users and more than that number of Frigidaire users, serving the community of southeastern Connecticut. In their new quarters this corporation will be enabled to display their complete line and render more prompt and efficient service.

The public will be welcome in these new quarters as soon as alterations have been completed which will be within a very few days.

ANNOUNCEMENTS

Breed Theatre

Beautiful Billie Dove has a role that could hardly be surpassed for charm and effective dramatic appeal in "The Love Mart," which is now being offered at the Breed theatre. The portrayals by Gilbert Roland and Noah Beery are equally effective.

The story is laid in the ariy Nineteenth Century, in New Orleans and vicinity. This was a time when slave-running was at its height, because Congress had forbidden the importation of slaves into American. Antoinette Frobelle, a beautiful girl of aristocratic lineage, is accused of being an octoroon; and is sold at the auction block. Victor Jallot, a gentleman adventurer, buys and frees her. But she comes back because she loves him and, when proved white, they are reunited as man and wife.

Pirates, slave-runners, slaves and Creole fashion-plates are among the picturesque figures in this brave tale of theold South. Gilbert Roland plays the role of Jallot and Noah Beery is a villainous, slave-running ship-master. Other fine characterizations are supplied by Emile Chautard, Armand Kalis, Boris Karloff, Andre Lanoy and Raymond Turner.

The settings are colorful and the direction is superb. It is a George Fitzmaurice production for First National Pictures and not for one moment has he permitted the action to lag.

As pure entertainment, plus beauty and admirable acting, "The Love Mart" stands out like a beacon as one of the most colorful films of the year an done that the audience thoroughly enjoyed.

Palace Theatre

And where did hoop skirts come from?

That was the question asked by Norma Shearer when she was fitted for her costumes in the filming of "The Actress", her latest Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer starring picture now showing at the Palace theatre.

The studio research department, investigating the authenticity of the costumes used during the screening of the film, an adaptation of Arthur Wing Pinero's "Trelawney of the Wells," provided the answer.

Piecing together steel corset stays, the working girls improvised "hoops" that puffed out their skirts to stylish proportions. Dressmakers saw the attractiveness of the necessitated innovation and henceforth "hoop-skirts" became the vogue.

Miss Shearer and Gwen Lee, Virginia Pearson and Andree Tourneur, who support her in the picture, say they felt lost when they got back to the modern skimpy gowns after working all day in crinolines. Ralph Forbes plays opposite Miss Shearer in the great Pinero drama of old English life. The supporting cast is a notable one, including O. P. Heggie, a leading actor of the stage, who makes his first screen appearance; Roy D'Arcy, Effie Ellsler, Cyril Chadwick, Owen Moore, Lee Moran and others. Sidney Franklin, director of "Quality Street," "Beverly of Graustark", "Her Sister From Paris" and other successes, directed.

The second feature is both interesting and entertaining and packed full of thrills.

Though he has been on the screen less than two years, Tim McCoy's daring horsemanship and histrionic talent have won him hundreds of thousands of picture fans. He is a real westerner, owner and operator of a big ranch in Wyoming and former adjutant general of that state. During the World war he left the ranch to join the colors and soon became a major of cavalry. He is now a lieutenant colonel of cavalry in the officers' reserve corps.

"Riders of the Dark" was written by W. S. Van Dyke and directed by Dick Grinde. Dorothy Dwan, Roy D'Arcy, Bert Roach, Frank Currier, Rex Lease, Dick Sutherland and others are in the cast.

Broadway Theatre

The much heralded stock company, "The Garrick Players," opening this Monday evening at the new Broadway theatre with Geo. M. Cohan's "The Baby Cyclone," a real laugh festival, has come to Norwich with a definite purpose in view. That purpose is to promote local interest in good stock production so that by obtaining the co-operation of the citizens of Norwich and surrounding towns only the best and latest New York stage hits may be presented to you at popular low prices.

In order to more fully accomplish that purpose, Mr. Robert F. Stevens and Jack Dunigan, co-producers of The Garrick Players, have selected the best and cleanest stage hits available. Included among these are "Smilin' Thru," the great American love classic that will never be forgotten and "Nightstick", a melodrama spectacle of underworld life.

ANNOUNCEMENTS

Bradley Theatre, Putnam

It is the belief of Lieutenant Commander John Philip Sousa, who, with his band will be at the Bradley theatre, Putnam, Tuesday afternoon, Aug. 14, that the American knows more about musical art of Europe than does the European himself. Mr. Sousa has for fifty years been conductor and composer and his golden jubilee tour is under way this year. It will be the twentieth transcontinental tour of the band and the thirty-sixth in point of actual consummation.

Just before he started upon the present tour at Rochester, New York, he declared that the appreciation of music, both from the non-professional and the professional standpoint is perhaps greater today that ever before "The two countries that seem to be making the greatest strides," he asserted, "are the United States and Italy—and both from opposite points of progress. America, up to a few years ago, was so busy in commercial endeavor that little attention was paid to advancement of musical art. This was lamentable and America today has fewer folk songs than are possessed by any other important nation Italy, which may be called the home of musical art, allowed its musical genius and effort to be drawn strongly to opera. No other form of composition had much chance in that country. But of late years there has developed in Italy a number of splendid writers who are devoting their talent to the production of symphonic music and to forms of music that appeal to what may be called symphonic audiences.

"America today vies with other nations in having appreciation for every form of musical endeavor. We have symphonic orchestra 'fans', concert band 'fans', opera 'fans', jazz 'fans'. In fact there is no music that has not its especial group of followers. And there is something splendid about the people of America, for they are not hide-bound and they do not lean to any one nation for music. This comes naturally from the fact that our teachers formerly were largely recruited from the nations of the world. If, for instance, a Hungarian teacher laid stress upon Hungarian compositions, it was certain that the American pupil profited by obtaining a knowledge of the music literature of Hungary. And so with German, Italian, French or other music—the American pupil got the benefit of special study. That is the reason that the American today knows European music so well. My hope is that we will always be free from prejudice and will appreciate music whether it comes from Berlin or Beluchistan; Paris or Patagonia."

RHODE ISLAND MAN AGAIN HEADS TAFTVILLE PIONEERS

Close to 300 present and former residents of Taftville were present at the 16th annual outing and reunion of the Pioneer Boys of Taftville held Sunday at Rocky Point. The gathering included members of the organization, their wives and friends, all of whom thoroughly enjoyed the day, which comprised a shore dinner, business session and visits to the various amusements at the shore resort. All of the officers were re-elected at the business session.

Early in the morning the members and guests began to arrive and soon the grounds were sprinkled with small groups engaged in conversation, mainly of the early days at Taftville. It was noticeable that the usual large crowd from New Bedford that has attended the outings each year was missing this year, this evidently being due to the strike in that city. But, nevertheless, there was a large group from Taftville and vicinity, the usual number of badges for that section being sold.

By noon the majority of the members had arrived and after renewing acquaintances they were in shape for the shore dinner, served in the large dining room at the resort at a specially reserved section. Among those present was a pioneer, Mrs. James Sudlow, who is 85 years old and another, 83 years old, Mrs. Sudlow at one time managed the Ponemah house at Taftville. One Pioneer remarked that "it makes a person feel good to see old friends that one hasn't met for 40 years or more, have a good hand shake and talk over old times."

After the dinner the business meeting was held with the president, William H. Thomas presiding. The officers were re-elected as follows: Mr. Thomas, of Greens Landing, R. I., president; William Brierly of New Bedford, vice president; George W. Weller of Taftville, treasurer and secretary; William C. Kendall of Norwich and William E. Duprey of South Dartmouth, Mass., assistant secretary. The secretary's and treasurer's reports were read and accepted, the latter showing a good financial standing. It was decided to hold the 17th annual outing at the same place on the second Sunday in August, 1929.

RESPONSIBLE FOR DEATH OF FORMER NORWICH MAN

(Special to The Bulletin.)

WORCESTER, Mass., Aug. 12—The death of Jacob Sandinsky of 4 Wyman street, Worcester, formerly of Norwich, Conn., was due to the manner in which Walter E. McDonald, 20 years old, of 45 Summer street, Westboro, was driving an automobile on Aug. 2 in Westboro, according to an inquest finding handed down to the superior court by Judge William E. Fowler of the Westboro court.

The inquest report by Judge Fowler places the blame upon McDonald, whose truck collided with a motorcycle which the former Norwich man was riding.

The report, going into detail, states that the accident took place on Milk street, Westboro, late in the afternoon of Aug. 2. The truck ran over Sandinsky after striking the cycle, the report stated. Sandinsky was taken to the City hospital at Worcester, where he died a few hours later, on the following day.

McDonald is employed by his father, A. L. McDonald, a Westboro grocer. Sandinsky was a mechanic for the Harley-Davidson Co. at 945 Main street, Worcester coming here from Norwich, where he has relatives.

McDonald, at a hearing held a few days ago, was held in bonds to await possible action for the Worcester county grand jury on a charge of violating the automobile laws. The grand jury session will open at Fitchburg on Aug. 20.

A Philadelphia Opinion

The Philadelphia Ledger says: Women have been forbidden to wear knickers in Norwich, Conn., on the ground that they are "scanty and vulgar attire." . . . We think the authorities of Norwich have the wrong silk purse by the ear. Knickers are not particularly scanty and we doubt that they are vulgar. The trouble as we see it is that they're not becoming to women. . . . If the authorities of Norwich really want to rid the town of knicker-wearing women, we suggest that they stress that point.

Suspended Sentences for Vagrants

Daniel Connelly of Providence, Eugene Lowe of Westerly, James Chester of this city and James Mullaney of Pawtucket, R. I., presented in the city court Saturday morning on the charge of vagrancy were each given a 30 day jail sentence suspended for six months. They were arrested Friday evening by Sergeant Matthew Delaney and Officers Allen, Quinn and Shahan, at a barn on Hamilton avenue.

FAREWELL PARTY FOR TWO NORWICH GIRLS

A farewell party was given Thursday evening at the home of Mrs. George Campbell of No. 176 Norwich avenue in honor of Miss Harriet Anderson and Miss Lillian Wallace, who are leaving the employ of the Lincoln store. Miss Anderson is to enter the state normal school and Miss Wallace the Backus hospital as a student nurse.

An enjoyable evening was spent by those attending. Refreshments, consisting of sandwiches, cookies, ice-cream and lemonade were served by the hostess assisted by Miss Mabel Fowler.

Gifts of five dollar gold pieces were presented to Miss Anderson and Miss Wallace.

SOCIALIST PARTY TO HOLD RALLY TONIGHT

The local branch of the socialist party will hold a rally this Monday evening at Ferry street, on behalf of their candidates, Norman Thomas for president and James H. Maurer for vice president. The chief speaker will be Frederick Hurst an old time socialist writer and lecturer, who is the candidate of the socialist party of Rhode Island for governor. Mr. Hurst will deal especially on how the great principles of the Declaration of Independence are set aside under capitalism.

SECURED POSITIONS FOR OVER 3,000 APPLICANTS

Positions for 3,015 applicants were secured by the six state free employment bureaus during July according to the monthly report of the state labor department. The bureau received 3,257 applicants from employers seeking help and 4,523 applications from unemployed persons.

NON-SUPPORT CASE IS CONTINUED SIX MONTHS

Arthur Machard, 44, of Merchants avenue, Taftville, who was presented in the city court Saturday morning on a non-support charge, had his case continued for six months by Judge Arthur Libby. This action was taken by Judge Libby after hearing testimony given by the accused and his wife. Machard explained that too many relatives accounted for his trouble at home. He was arrested Friday evening by Constable Dugas of Taftville.

ST. PATRICK'S LAWN PARTY WILL NET ABOUT $2,500

The ecclesiastical year is speeding on, as was demonstrated by the gospel read in all the masses throughout the Roman Catholic world yesterday, the 11th Sunday after Pentecost, Mark 7:31-37, narrating the miracle of Christ in making the man deaf and dumb to hear and speak. The epistle for the Sunday was I Corinthians 15: 1-16, beginning, "Brethren, I make known unto you the gospel which I preached to you, which also you have received and wherein you stand; by which also you are saved."

Attention was directed at the four services of the day in St. Patrick's church to the fact that the coming Wednesday, Aug. 15, is the feast of the Assumption, commemorating the pious belief of the faithful in the tradition that after her death the Mother of Christ was assumed by her Divine Son body and soul into heaven. It is a holy day of obligation when attendance at mass is required; in St Patrick's the masses will be at 5, 7 and 8 o'clock.

Making the parish announcements at the 9 o'clock mass, Rev. John J. Reilly expressed for the rector, Rt. Rev. Msgr. M. H. May, and his assistants appreciation of the co-operation of the people in making the annual parish lawn party so great a success that it will net about $2,500. Special obligation was expressed to societies and individuals for bringing about this result, especially to the Knights of Columbus for the annual loan of the fine grounds about White Cross council's home on Broadway for this big parish social affair. Extension was made that, due to the fact that the newspapers had used the original list of committee members, many active and helpful workers had not been named publicly and to these a special expression of thanks was given.

Requiem masses announced for the coming week were for Miss Helen O'Rourke, Mrs. Ellen Mahoney and Mrs. Adelaide Noyes.

Rev. Father Reilly assisted Rev. Myles P. Galvin, who read the low mass, in giving holy communion to the usual large number of penitents.

PURCHASERS PLEASED WITH NEW BRIDGEMAN MACHINES

When asked to comment on how the new Bridgeman machines are being received by purchasers, John Mitchell, secretary and treasurer of the Bridgeman corporation, who is spending the week end in Norwich said the machines are getting a better reception than is usually accorded box-making machines of this character.

He also stated that the need for these machines, as well as their merit is a strong factor in influencing their favorable consideration. In the introduction of any high priced new machine the prospective purchaser is naturally desirous of knowing where the machines are being used and the strength of the company manufacturing them. They have been fortunate because the merit of the machines has interested some of the most prominent as well as the largest paper box manufacturers in the country.

Machines are now in operation, installed under their contract arrangement for purchase, in the following well known factories: The Hood Rubber Co., The Carter Underwear Co., Cambridge Paper Box Co. The Climax Paper Box Co., Dyckerman Paper Box Co., The W. F. Schraft & Sons corporation, J. T. Kachline Co., The Lebanon Paper Box Co., The Lee Paper Box Co.

They are at the present time getting machines ready to ship to Quality Paper Box Co., St. Paul and The Waldensian Hosiery mills, Valdese, North Carolina and in addition have a large number of box-manufacturers ready for demonstrations of the machines in operation and from whom orders will be received. One of the concerns now operating stated that they expect to place orders for additional machines almost immediately.

In a letter received by the corporation, E. LaRue Bliven, treasurer of the Norwich Paper Box Co., says: We purchased one set of Bridgeman automatic stripping and turn in machines and we believe that there is a large field for the use of your machines and that the machines make a large saving in cost of labor, in connection with this class of work.

We also desire to say that our experience with your organization has been highly satisfactory.

A letter from the Hood Rubber Co., to the Bridgeman corporation says: We thought you might be interested in the figures and results of the operation of the machines on which we based our acceptance. The average number of boxes per hour, per operator, actual running time was 960. The percentage of waste boxes that could not be reclaimed was two thirds of 1 per cent. The percentage of imperfect boxes that could be reclaimed by hand turning, was four-fifths of 1 per cent.

We wish at this time to take the opportunity of thanking you and your entire organization for the wonderful co-operation extended us in working these machines out and adapting them to our conditions.

Mr. Mitchell also stated that a large amount of advertising through magazines, letters, circulars and personal visits has created an interest throughout the country in these machines and there is a constant inquiry in regard to them.

He also stated that the usual difficulties and problems in connection with both the machines and the business problems that rise in connection with the proposition have been solved successfully and that those interested in the company should feel confident in its ultimate success.

He also stated that it is well known that the paper box industry is increasing in volume each year to the extent of millions of dollars. These machines are a very important factor in connection with this industry and the expected volume from their sale can be readily seen as being very large.

In his judgment, the proposition offers a fine opportunity as a profit-maker for the reason that the field for their use is very great and increasing every year and the merits of the machine from a labor saving standpoint was entirely beyond question, making the amount of money invested in the purchase of the machine one of immediate, constant and continuous saving.

President Bridgeman wired from Boston, Friday that one of the largest and most critical box manufacturers in the country had just approved the machines installed in their plant and would make payment in accordance with terms of their contract. Vice-President Smith stated that the future of the company seems brighter now than at any time in the past.

SIX INSURANCE COMPANIES LICENSED IN STATE

One casualty and five fire insurance companies of other states were licensed during July to operate in Connecticut, Insurance Commissioner Howard P. Dunham has announced. The companies admitted are as follows:

The Occidental Insurance Co. of San Francisco was licensed to write fire and ocean marine insurance. This company is under the same management as the Firemen's Fund Insurance Co. and the Home Fire and Marine Insurance Co., both old established institutions. It commenced business last April with a capital of 1,000,000 and a surplus of $2,000,000.

The Merchants Mutual Casualty Co. of Buffalo, N. Y., was licensed to write the ordinary casualty lines. This company has been in operation since 1918. Its surplus as of December 31, 1927, was $400,632.

The Public Fire Insurance Co. of Newark, N. J., was licensed to transact fire and ocean marine insurance. This company was incorporated April 2, 1928, with a capital of $1,000,000 and a surplus of $4,000,000.

The Anchor Insurance Co. of Providence, R. L., was licensed to transact fire and ocean marine insurance. This company was incorporated last April, and is a running-mate of the Providence Washington Insurance Co. It has a capital of $500,000 and on May 24th its surplus stood at $756,985.

The What Cheer Mutual Fire Insurance Co. of Providence, was licensed to transact fire insurance. This company has been in business since 1874, and is a member of the Associated Factory Mutual Insurance companies. Its surplus as of Dec. 31, 1927, was $1,066,895.

The Hope Mutual Fire Insurance Co. of Providence, was licensed to transact fire insurance This company is also a member of the Associated Factory Mutuals and has been in business since 1875. Its surplus as of December 31, 1927, was $980,444.

FRESTON MAN FINED ON LIQUOR CHARGE

Charged with violation of the liquor laws John Norworkowski was fined $100 and costs in the Preston town court Friday evening by Justice Walter Tarbox. The accused was charged with having made an actual sale and with keeping liquor with intent to sell but the latter count was not pressed. Norworkowski's home on the Norwich-Westerly road near Hallville was raided by state police Friday afternoon and 240 bottles of home brew, 10 gallons of hard cider and 10 gallons of wine were seized. The liquor was later destroyed.

REPUBLICANS TO INVADE DEMOCRATIC STRONGHOLD

Leaders in Conference at San Francisco Are Planning an Offensive Campaign in the South—An Endeavor Also Will Be Made to Win the Feminine Vote—Rifts in the "Solid South" Were Forecast by Committeemen From Texas, Arkansas and North Carolina

SAN FRANCISCO, Aug. 13—(AP)—Republican committemen and women from the western states gathered today at a conference presided over by Dr. Hubert C. Work, national chairman, at which plans for nearly three months of active campaigning were made. In an outline of future maneuvers, particular attention was paid to offensive plans in what party leaders considered the two salient sectors, the south and the nation-wide stronghold of feminine votes.

In the first region, said Senator George H. Moses of New Hampshire, "the sight may be expected of vessels long considered democratic slipping their cables and floating into the safe harbor of republicanism. In the second" he said, "Herbert Hoover will prove the men for whom housewives will desert their stoves on November 8th."

Surprising rifts in the "solid south" were forecast by committeemen from Texas, Arkansas and North Carolina.

Charles L. Neumiller, chairman of the republican state committee in California predicted that his state will "go in November as she did in the main primary."

Governor George L. Fisher of Pennsylvania told the conference that "there is no doubt of the success of Herbert Hoover in the east."

HOOVER REALIZES HE HAS CONTEST AHEAD

STANFORD UNIVERSITY, Cal., Aug. 13—(AP)—While Herbert Hoover is gratified by both the reception of his acceptance speech and the reports on the political outlook brought to him here, he appreciates that he has a battle ahead for the presidency.

Friends of the republican nominee disclosed today that the information as to the situation over the country given him by party leaders has been somewhat different from that which some of these leaders have given to the public through the newspapers. Generally they have advised Hoover that there is a real contest, but that they are confident as to the result.

Having received detailed reports from Dr. Hubert Work, chairman of the republican national committee, and other leaders who came here for the notification ceremonies last Saturday, Hoover did not regard it as essential that he attend the national committee meeting today at San Francisco. He went to that city, however to be present at a session of the board of trustees of Stanford university of which he is a member.

Several republican chieftains accompanied him back to his home here and he spent a couple of hours with them and then turned again to work on his West Branch, Iowa, speech which he hoped to complete before leaving here Thursday night for his birth place by way of Los Angeles, Albuquerque and Kansas City.

WILL TEST SMITH AND ANTI-SMITH SENTIMENT IN TEXAS

SAN ANTONIO, Tex., Aug. 13—(AP)—The way was paved for a test of Smith and anti-Smith sentiment in Texas when the democratic state executive committee today certified the name of Thomas B. Love of Dallas as a candidate for lieutenant-governor in the run-off primary Aug. 25.

Love, former democratic national committeeman for Texas, has announced he will vote for Herbert Hoover for president. In the run-off primary he will be opposed by Lieut.-Gov. Barry Miller, who has pledged support to Gov. Alfred E. Smith, democratic presidential nominee.

Love's name was certified by the committee after Miller had urged such action.

The committee disregarded a resolution adopted at a meeting of "regular" democratic leaders of the state at Austin last week which demanded that "boiters" be barred from the run-off primary.

Now with only two candidates in the race, one a Smith man and the other anti-Smith, the run-off primary will afford the democratic voters of the state an opportunity to render a clear-cut decision.

COTTON SALE PROCEEDS FOR THE SMITH CAMPAIGN FUND

NEW YORK, Aug. 13—(AP)—The first bale of cotton ginned from the 1928 Georgia crop will be auctioned on the stage of the Ziegfeld theatre Wednesday night with Mayor James J. Walker as auctioneer, it was announced today at democratic campaign headquarters.

Proceeds of the auction will be turned over to Gov. Alfred E. Smith's campaign fund, as were those of an auction of the same bale held last week on the Atlanta cotton exchange.

The bale was shipped here by airplane from Atlanta for the traditional auction on the New York cotton exchange with the stipulation that the proceeds be used for Gov. Smith's campaign fund. The New York exchange declined to participate because the proceeds were to be used for political purposes.

ENDED TRAGEDY ON GRAVE OF HIS WIFE

CLARKSVILLE, Tenn., Aug. 13—(AP)—Attracted by pistol shots cemetery attendants today found Gordon C. Young, 48, lying on the grave of his wife with a bullet wound in his forehead, his grandson, Haroll Schlinker, four years old, dying, and his daughter Mrs. Edith Schlinker, with a bullet wound in her neck.

Grief over the death of his wife is believed to have caused Young to become suddenly insane and open fire on the child and its mother and then fire a bullet into his own head. Young was dead when the cemetery employes reached him. The child died at a hospital. Mrs. Schlinker is not believed seriously hurt.

DESERTER OF WIFE AND CHILDREN LOCKED UP

NEW YORK, Aug. 13—(AP)—Charles N. Edwards, 40-year-old civil engineer of Shore road, Poughkeepsie, was ordered in family court today to post a $1,300 bond to insure payment of $25 a week for one year to the wife and three children he deserted last June, or go to jail for six months in default of posting the bond he was locked up.

Edwards was arrested with Loretta Wilson of Highland, N. Y., with whom Mrs Edwards said he ran away. Police said Edwards admitted his wife's charge that he had married Miss Wilson in Norwalk, Conn.

TO DRAW UP PLATFORM FOR DEM. CONVENTION

NEW HAVEN, Aug. 13—(AP)—A committee to draw up a tentative platform for submission to the committe on resolutions at the forthcoming democratic state convention, to be held in New Haven the second week of September, has been named by state Chairman James J. Walsh of Meriden.

The membership is Prof. Nicholas Moseley of New Haven, Charles D. Hart, attorney of Waterbury; Mrs. Lucy J. Kretzer, of Mystic; William Kelly, attorney, of Stamford and Abraham S. Bordon, of Hartford

FOREST FIRE IN THE PACIFIC COAST STATES

SAN FRANCISCO, Aug. 13—(AP)—Forest fires in California were well under control today, but other Pacific coast states were organizing their forces to deal with the flames that were forcing fire-fighting crews back at various points.

While rangers and laborers rested on several California fire fronts, Blanchard, Idaho, sent out a call for 200 additional men to combat the flames sweeping toward that community, which is near Spirit Lake. Another fire, two miles west of Priest river, Idaho, was confined to a small area today.

Near Yosemite Park, California, the fire that for a time threatened to sweep into the Merced grove of big trees, was stemmed by a crew that fought it on a 20-mile front for six days. The blaze today ate its way up wooded gulches of the Merced river canyon.

Other California fires being watched today were at Miami mountain, on the edge of the Sierra forest in Madera county, and in the Sequoia National park.

With memories of the disastrous Berkeley fire of 1923 fresh in their minds 200 fire fighters including reinforcements from the Oakland and Berkeley fire departments, fought a brush and grass fire which swept toward Walnut Creek, a town in Contra Costa county.

RIOTING IN DIAMOND REGIONS OF BRAZIL

RIO JANEIRO, Brazil, Aug. 13—(AP)—The diamond regions in the states of Matto Grosso and Goyaz have been thrown into an uproar by rioting prospectors. Several towns have been looted and a number of murders committed by the enraged natives who claim that they were paid by grubstakers in counterfeit money.

The natives found they could buy nothing with money which they received for weeks of toil in the heat of the wilderness.

The prospectors turned bandit and started an intensive search for the persons who, they claim, cheated them with the fake money. When the police tried to prevent them from entering several towns, they burned houses and abused the inhabitants. One police commander and several soldiers have been killed.

The outbreak of diamond prospectors in Goyaz and Matto Grosso is understood to be distinct from the political revolt in the latter state reported several days ago through advices received at Asuncion, Uruguay. No news on the political disturbances has been available.

PROHIBITION PARTY MAY WITHDRAW ITS CANDIDATE

NEW YORK, Aug. 13—(AP)—Leigh Colvin, chairman of the prohibition party national committee, said today that members of the national committee would be asked to pass upon withdrawal of the party's presidential ticket in favor of Herbert Hoover, republican nominee.

"Hoover's views as expressed in his acceptance speech are very satisfactory to me," Colvin said, "and I believe to a majority of my colleagues on the national committee. In my judgment our national ticket will be withdrawn before September 1 and prohibitionists urged to vote for the republican presidential and vice presidential nominees."

"Our convention," he said, "authorized the national committee to replace its nominees with others if in the meantime it became apparent that a major party had named candidates pledged to rigid enforcement of the prohibition law, and against its repeal or modification."

RESCUED FROM DROWNING; THREE COMPANIONS LOST

POCATELLO, Idaho, Aug. 13—(AP)—Carl D. Clay, prominent Pocatello sportsman, was rescued after clinging for 18 hours to an overturned boat, from which his three companions had been washed one after another during a storm yesterday on the American Falls reservoir near here.

The three men who lost their lives were Carl Jones, an official of the western weighing and inspection bureau, George Bailey, local insurance agent, and Benny Layng.

Giving mute evidence of a probable tragedy which is believed to have cost the life of Captain Patrick Blake, 55, a power boat of the sloop type came sailing into the sandbar at Seaside park, Bridgeport and went aground with the engine still running and nobody on board.

20 Million Tons Of Water Released

By Breaking Through Glacial Ice Dam 40 Miles Long in India.

LONDON, Aug. 13—(AP)—Twenty million tons of water were rushing today in an awe-inspiring torrent upon the valley of the Indus through mountain gorges tributary to the Shyok river in Kashmir, according to messages from Lahore, India.

This gigantic flood was loosened last night by the breaking of a glacial ice dam 1,000 feet wide and 1,200 feet thick which had formed 140 miles north of Len.

At this point the little Khumban glacier in 1926 thrust its nose across the Shyok valley, or two years, the waters have been piling up, forming a lake nine miles long. It was 17,000 feet above the Indus valley.

Despit elaborate preparations to give warning and to drive the inhabitants out of the Kashmir mountain villages and from the populous Indus valley of the Punjab, British officials have grave anxieties for the safety of the people. It was felt certai nthat death threatens all who may have failed to heed the warnings.

FALL RIVER, Mass., Aug. 13—(AP)—Four leaders of the textile strike in Fall River were removed today to the county jail in New Bedford after they had failed to find sureties for their release on appeal after conviction for inciting to riot. A sentence of six months was imposed in each case and bail on appeal was set at $1,000 with an additional bond of $1,000 to keep the peace for six months.

Raskob Praises Hoover's Speech

Declares That It Will Tend to Raise Politics to a Higher Level.

NEW YORK, Aug. 13—(AP)—Herbert Hoover's speech accepting the republican presidential nomination was "one that tends to raise politics to a higher level," John J. Raskob, chairman of the national democratic committee, said in a statement issued late today.

"It was tempered," asserted Mr. Raskob, referring to the speech; "there was a tempered expression of the issues, as, I presume, he sees them.

"I particularly admire Mr. Hoover's desire to elevate this campaign to the dignity that a contest of this kind, I feel, should command in American politics and my hope is that we will be able on our side to keep the conduct of the campaign on a very high basis.

"I believe the efforts of the respective parties engaged in a campaign of this kind should be to educate the people—to honestly educate the people—as to the merits of the issues they stand for and the character and ability and representations of their respective candidates."

FARM LEADERS PLEASED WITH SMITH'S ATTITUDE

ALBANY, Aug. 13—(AP)—After an extended conference today with Governor Smith a group of farm leaders from the west and south in a joint statement said they were "pleased with the governor's interest and understanding of the agricultural problem."

Declaring that he had invited members of the delegation to Albany to obtain first hand their views on legislation "and not to discuss politics," the democratic presidential nominee in a separate statement asserted that he had "assured them that, in my opinion, the essentials of the relief they are seeking through legislation are covered in the democratic platform upon which I stand."

NEGRO CONFESSED SLAYING JENNIE META CONSTANCE

CHICAGO, Aug. 13—(AP)—David Skaggs, 23, Negro, tonight confessed to the slaying of Miss Jennie Meta Constance, school teacher who was beaten to death last week. Evanston and Chicago police announced. He intended to rob the woman he said and gained only $1.19 which resulted from the sale of the woman's wrist watch, and which led to his arrest.

Skaggs was arrested when a youth named Leland Bastian, called at a jewelers to claim the watch, following a request earlier in the week to change the initials on it from those of the slain teacher to his own the jeweler notified police who watched the shop for the youth's return. When he was arrested tonight he told police a Negro in his father's boot blacking stand had sold the watch to him for $1.19.

When Bastian pointed out the Negro to police, Skaggs said: "I guess it's all over. I killed her. I only got a dollar out of it."

The two prisoners were held in an unannounced station tonight, pending further investigation.

Miss Constance was beaten to death with an iron bar last Tuesday night while enroute home from the Northwestern university library. She had been a summer student, and was engaged as an instructor in the Bradley Polytechnic institute at Peoria, Ill. Her body was found early Wednesday morning.

Skaggs is of powerful build. He told police that he didn't know what made him kill Miss Constance. "That night was the first time I've been in Evanston in five years," he declared.

WESTERN RAILROAD MEN TO TAKE STRIKE VOTE

CLEVELAND, O., Aug. 13—(AP)—Members of the Brotherhood of Railroad Trainmen and the Order of Railway Conductors in the western states will hold sectional meetings tomorrow to vote upon a strike following the failure of attempts to arbitrate wage demands, A. F. Whitney, president of the trainmen, announced here tonight.

The men will be voted on the original demands of the labor organizations for increases ranging from 10 per cent for yard men to 18 per cent for trainmen and conductors, Whitney said.

SOLE SURVIVOR OF QUINTET TELLS OF HIS EXPERIENCE OFF WATCH HILL

WESTERLY, R. I., Aug. 13—(AP)—The sole survivor of a quintet of young college men whose 15 foot sail boat capsized in Fisher's sound Sunday night, John B. Colohan at the Westerly hospital today told how his four comrades were drowned.

The four men, whose bodies have not been recovered, Trowbridge Cottrell, son of Arthur M. Cottrell of Westerly; John McIlvain, son of Mrs. Charles J. McIlvain, of Ardmore, Pa.; Lloyd G. Bankson, son of Mrs. Joseph Bankson, of Philadelphia, and Joseph Scales, of Louisville, Ky.

Colohan and the four other men were spending their vacations at Watch Hill, R. I.

Colohan told newspapermen that the quintet left Watch Hill for Fisher's Island about 3 o'clock Sunday afternoon. They went in McIlvain's 15 foot Alden type sail boat. The trip over was uneventful.

Early in the evening, he said, they started back.

"It was about 15 minutes before dusk when a sudden gust of wind hit the sail and tipped us over," said Colohan. "I judged we were about half a mile from the entrance to Little Narragansett bay. We all climbed to the bottom of the boat and tried to right the craft. We got her up once but she went over on her other side. None of us had knives and we couldn't cut the sail off. We swam around for a while trying to get her righted and then we all climbed on the side and hung on the best we could. Cottrell was the first to disappear. I don't know just how it was except that all of a sudden he was gone. I think McIlvain started to swim ashore. He was next to disappear."

After the disappearance of McIlvain, Colohan, clinging to the capsized craft apparently lost consciousness, for he could not remember much of the night except that waves frequently broke over them and that he saw a searchlight. Later a powerboat passed fairly near, but his attempt to hail it failed. He could not recall whether Bankson and Scales lost their grip on the boat or whether they attempted to swim for shore.

Ten hours after the boat capsized George Adams, Noank, Conn., fisherman on his way to the Block Island fishing grounds, saw the Alden floating on her side, and a man lying on the hull. He made for the wreck, to find Colohan delirious from exhaustion and shock. It was only with difficulty that Adams got the youth on board his own craft.

The rescue was effected about four miles southwest of Watch Hill light. Adams took the rescued man into the Watch Hill coast guard station, where Colohan, scarcely able to stand and his arms rigid from their long cramped position, was wrapped in hot blankets. Later he was taken to Westerly hospital, where he is apparently out of danger.

Coast guard and private boats and airplanes have been searching for the four bodies for hours without success.

Colohan is said to be a former Princeton man, as was McIlvain, whose age was given as about 20. Scales was said to be a member of the class of '31 at Princeton. Cottrell would have begun his sophomore year at Yale in the fall, and Bankson was also a Yale student.

Mrs. Bankson arrived at Watch Hill this afternoon. The Scales boy's father is on the way here from Louisville. Trowbridge Cottrell's father is travelling in Germany.

PASSENGERS TAKEN FROM STRANDED MUNSON LINER

Steamship Munamar is Fast on a Reef Off Great Abaco Island, Bahamas—Seventy-Five Passengers Have Been Taken Off by a Tug and Landed at Nassau—The Munson Line Tug Colonial and the Motor Schooner Halcyon Are Standing By—The Munamar Was Driven Ashore in a Gale.

MIAMI, Fla., Aug. 13—(AP)—The Munson line steamship Munamar was tonight fast on a reef off Great Abaco Island, Bahamas, where she went aground yesterday, but her seventy-five passengers had been taken safely to Nassau aboard a tug.

One of two Bahamas government tugs, which went to the stranded steamer's assistance last night, took the passengers off today, the local office of the line was advised by radio from the vessel, and proceeded to the Bhamas capital where she was due early tonight. There they will be put aboard another liner.

The Munamar, bound for New York from Miami and Nassau, was driven ashore in a gale at a spot on the island called Hole-in-the-Wall. Two tugs summoned by radio reached the 3,400-ton steamer late last night but un until a late hour this afternoon had been un-successful in floating her.

A radio message earlier in the day from the ship's master to The Associated Press, however, said the Munamar was in no danger and that the sea was calm. Her position was said to be in the lee of the island which afforded protection from a heavy sea kicked up by high winds.

The Munson line tug Colonial and the motor schooner Halcyon were standing by, and since no further assistance had been asked by the vessel since yesterday, it was presumed here that her officers felt she would be released from the shoal water within a few hours. Radio advices to the Miami Daily News said the New York offices of the line were considering ordering the transfer of some of her heavy cargo of sugar to facilitate her removal.

SETTLEMENT BETWEEN BRITAIN AND CHINA

LONDON, Aug. 13—(AP)—The correspondence between Sir Miles Lampson, British minister to China, and Dr. C. T. Wang, Nationalist foreign minister, under which a settlement was reached between Great Britain and the Nationalist government on the Nanking incident of March, 1927, was made public tonight by the foreign office. The settlement is virtually the same as that reached in April of this year between the United States and the Nationalist government over the same incident.

Under the settlement the Nanking government apologizes for the Nanking affair and undertakes to punish those guilty of it. The British government declined to apologize for firing on Socony hill. It agreed to negotiations on treaty revision "in due course."

The letters under which the settlement was reached were exchanged on Aug. 9 between Wang and Sir Miles. In the first letter Wang conveyed the Nationalist government's profound regret at the indignities and injuries inflicted upon official representatives of the British government and for the losses and injuries sustained by the British government and for the losses and injuries sustained by the British consulate and residents.

TOOMBS INTENDS TO TAKE ACTION AGAINST ACCUSERS

CHICAGO, Aug. 13—(AP)—Roy C. Toombs left today for St. Louis to answer charges of embezzling securities of the International Life Insurance Co., of which he was president.

He departed after arraignment in municipal court, where he was granted a continuance until Aug. 15. He said he intended to take action against the instigators of the charges against him, maintaining there was no basis for them.

Mr. Toombs was arrested Saturday night by Chicago police at the request of St. Louis authorities. Sunday word came from St. Louis to release Toombs after he had given his word to appear there today. Chicago police, however, had him post a $10,000 bond and instructed him to appear for the arraignment today.

The insurance man is alleged to have misappropriated securities belonging to his company, placing it in circumstances which caused its receivership.

COOLIDGE DID NOT LISTEN TO HOOVER SPEECH

SUPERIOR, Wis., Aug. 13—(AP)—The belief that President Coolidge would not add his message to the thousands which have poured upon Secretary Hoover in connection with his speech of acceptance last Saturday was expressed at the summer white house today.

President Coolidge, it was said, has given no indication that he intends to send any communication to the republican presidential nominee.

It was also revealed today after two days of great reserve that Mr. Coolidge did not listen over the radio to Mr. Hoover's acceptance speech. The chief executive was fishing on Saturday while the address was being delivered. White house officials and aides had been very reticent, both yesterday and Saturday, regarding this point, saying they had no information to give out.

SHIP-TO-SHORE AIRPLANE SERVICE INAUGURATED

NEW YORK, Aug. 13—(AP)—Regular ship-to-shore airplane service was successfully inaugurated today by the Ile de France of the French line, from which an airplane carrying mail was catapulted into the air approximately 500 miles at sea. The plane left the liner at 1 o'clock this afternoon and alighted on the water at Quarantine at 5:16.

The amphibian plane manned by a three-man French crew, made a perfect take-off and by a fast flight reached New York almost a full day ahead of the liner. Similar flights will be made from the Ile de France on both east and west journeys from now on and the service eventually will be extended to passengers.

2,000,000 FEET OF TIMBER RUINED BY FOREST FIRES

VANCOUVER B. C., Aug. 13—(AP)—Two forest fires raging over 1,000 acres of lumber country today were reported to have swept a million feet of felled timber in the Bainbridge Lumber Co.'s territory near Alberni, and to have destroyed 2,000,000 feet in the Malsom Lumber Co. holdings north of Duncan.

Two hundred men were fighting the fire in the 800-acre Malsom tract, where five logging railway bridges had been burned away and machinery was threatened.

The fires broke out on Sunday and three hours of rain last night aided the fire-fighters materially.

SIX PERSONS CHARGED WITH POISON PLOT MURDERS

CHARLOTTE, N. C., Aug. 13—(AP)—Six people charged with murder or conspiracy to murder in connection with an alleged poison plot were preparing their defense tonight while officers pieced together threads of evidence with the objective of bringing about other arrests.

S. W. Daniels, a fortune teller, said by the police to be the central figure in the alleged plot, and five others implicated with him were granted two days' continuance when they were called for preliminary hearing today.

Daniels is charged specifically with murder in connection with the death of L. M. Lockany last June. Mrs. E. F. Pressley, then Mrs. Lockany, and her present husband are also charged with the murder. Mrs. L. M. Prigden, Mrs. R. B. Townley and J. H. Moore, a Negro preacher, are accused of conspiracy in connection with alleged poisoning of their spouses. All were alleged to have procured the poison from Daniels.

Detectives said today that their investigation was taking them into what they termed "the better sections of the city."

The probe was begun last week when police officers found a notebook in Daniels' room said to contain the names of his "clients." This notebook guided authorities in further investigations. The police declared they discovered in his room also a can of white powder which they said was poison, and this led to the fortune teller's arrest.

SOUTHERN FLA. MENACED BY STORM AND FLOOD

JACKSONVILLE, Fla., Aug. 13—(AP)—The double menace of storm and flood reared itself in sections of southern and southwestern Florida tonight as a tropical disturbance blew along the Gulf coast from Boca Grande toward Tampa, and Lake Okeechobee threatened to overflow the countryside from torrential rains.

The situation was worst along the northern and western shores of the lake where an overflow would inundate a wide strip of fertile lands extending from Okeechobee City to Moorehaven and up the Catoosahatchee river to Labelle.

Already at its highest level in the memory of the inhabitants of its shores as a result of floods from last week, the lake was slowly swelling higher as tributary streams received fresh volumes from rain which has been falling steadily for the past 24 hours.

Lakeport, on Fish Eating creek, midway between Okeechobee City and Moorehaven, already was inundated and dozens of smaller communities had not been heard from today.

Meanwhile, the tropical storm which lashed the extreme southwestern tip of the peninsula last night, from Key West and the Key Islands to Boca Grande, was reported central south of Venice, near Sarasota, moving north-northwest. Winds of gale and near gale velocity were blowing along part of the coast and were predicted in the vicinity of Tampa tonight.

SALE OF THE PITTSFIELD WOOLEN COMPANY PLANT

PITTSFIELD, Mass., Aug. 13—(AP)—The Pittsfield Woolen Manufacturing company has sold its plant and business in this city to L. Bachmann and Company, of New York, it was announced here today. Bachmann and Company are interested in the Uxbridge Pascoag Woolen company at Pascoag, R. I., the Killingly Worsted company at Danielson, Conn., the Genark mills, Woonsocket, R. I., and the Danielson Manufacturing company at East Brookfield. They also are selling agents for several other large mills. They will manufacture here men's suitings, coatings and overcoatings.

It is understood that the Pascoag plant will be moved to this city. At present the Pittsfield plant employs only about 200 persons but it is expected that soon it will have a normal force of approximately 500.

TWO MEN IMPERILLED IN STORM IN DELAWARE BAY

PHILDELPHIA, Aug. 13—(AP)—The waters of Delaware Bay and a raging northeaster took two men for a ride yesterday but they lived to tell their stories.

One, Frank Godfrey, was tossed and washed by the waves for several hours before he was dragged into a lighthouse, exhausted, after a lifebelt had kept him afloat since he was swept from the tug Radiant before it went down.

The other, Carl Kluge, clung to the mast of the same tug for two hours, while hope and strength ebbed, until he was picked up by a lifeboat from the freighter Innoko.

SULLIVAN WAS WELL KNOWN TO MANY IN WILLIMANTIC

(Special to The Bulletin.)

WILLIMANTIC, Aug. 13—Raymond J. Sullivan, 22, single, a farmer residing in Colchester, who was instantly killed shortly before eight o'clock Monday morning on the Norwich-Colchester state highway, almost directly in front of his home, when struck by an automobile operated by Paul Rogers of New Britain, was well known here. Sullivan, it is stated, was driving some cows across the highway when the accident occurred. Medical Examiner Dr. Cyrus E. Pendleton of Colchester and the state police were notified.

The deceased was quite well known in this city and was a patient a little over a year ago in St. Joseph's hospital where he underwent an operation for a severe case of appendicitis. He is survived by his mother, Mrs. Elizabeth Sullivan; three sisters, Mrs. John Shea and the Misses Marion and Mildred Sullivan of Colchester; and two brothers, Jerome and Willard Sullivan, also of Colchester.

Rev. Willis C. Norris, who is spending the summer at New Milford, Pa., writes under recent date that he does not seem to gain strength very rapidly from his recent illness but is able to answer "mess call" three times a day. He believes that the effects of the operation he underwent several months ago are hard to shake off. Mr. Norris says that he is enjoying himself, nevertheless, and is meeting many tourists from this section. He and Mrs. Norris intend to leave for home in time to vote for Hoover and Curtis, after a visit in Weymart, Pa. He offered his congratulations to the local chamber of commerce, its secretary, Earl J. Arnold, and local people for successfully staging the recent drive for a new industry here.

Mr. and Mrs. Jeremiah Donahue of 14 Park street entertained with a party Saturday afternoon in honor of their son John's seventh birthday, nine of his little playmates being in attendance. Games and music were enjoyed and refreshments served. Master John received many choice gifts. Those present were Fransella Tremblay, Margaret and Rita Noel, Doraine Lord, Winifred Donahue, Robert and James Gavigan, Roland Tremblay, Eugene Donnelly and Richard Murteau.

A "big night" will take place in Chaplin on Thursday evening of this week, when an entertainment will be held on the village green for the benefit of the community fund. A number of noted theatrical people who are summering in the town are arranging the affair. Lindley Cook, manager of a theatre in New York city, has charge of the program. Music for the occasion will be furnished by a band from Stafford Springs. Some of the talent taking part includes William Lockwood, violinist of the Roxy theatre orchestra, Mrs. Adele Neff, a native daughter of Chaplin, formerly of Earl Carroll's Vanities, who will be heard in vocal and instrumental numbers, and "Long John" Collins, claimant of the world's championship at harmonica playing. Fifty years ago this summer Collins was one of the headliners at the old Tony Paston theatre in New York city and with Newton's Varieties in Hartford. The green will be attractively decorated an dillumniated for the occasion.

The following warranty deeds were filed during the past week at the office of Town Clerk Frank P. Fenton: Mrs. Mary M. Preston of Providence, R. I., to William E. Clark, land and buildings at the corner of Pleasant and Mountain streets, comprising the most desirable portion of the Hayden estate; E. Lyman Gould of South Windham to Eugene J. Dion of this city, two large tracts of land with buildings in Windham on highway leading to Scotland on what is known as the Indian Hollow road; Charles W. Tryon to Frank and Nellie Sharon of New York city, two tracts of land on the back road to Windham, one of three acres and the other of forty acres; and Nelson Lawrence to Rudolph Bouen, tract of land on north side of West Prospect street.

Nora, infant daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Emile (Beaudoin) Glaude, died Sunday at their home, 221 Main street. The funeral was held Monday morning at the late home with interment in St. Joseph's cemetery.

FOUR CASES DISPOSED OF IN POLICE COURT

(Special to The Bulletin)

WILLIMANTIC, Aug. 13—Four cases were on the docket in police court Monday morning, three of which were disposed of and one continued. Alphege Potvin, of 41 Temple street, was charged with intoxication and breach of the peace, to which he pleaded guilty. He was arrested by Officer Roderick Larivere Sunday afternoon shortly before six o'clock. He was fined $5 on each count by Deputy Judge Russell A. Andrews, the assessment amounting to $17.65, which was paid.

Waren Metcalp of West Hartford pleaded guilty to the charge of operating an automobile with improper registration. The violation in his case was detected Sunday morning at 1:50 o'clock at the corner of Center and Union streets by Patrolman Albert F. Montie. At the time Metcalp was driving a Ford coune with registration for a roadster. Judge Andrews fined him $10 and costs, amounting to $19.15, which he paid.

The case of James Doyle of this city, charged with drunkenness, was continued until Tuesday morning, after the coutr had been informed that the accused had been released on a bond and word had been received that he was suffering from a lame back and was unable to attend court. He was arrested Saturday night at eleven o'clock in the rear of the Capitol theatre building, by Sergeant Grant Bombria and Officer Frederick R. Laramie.

The contiqued case of Mrs. Sarah Street of 269 Main street, Suffield, charged with violations of the motor vehicle laws by evading responsibility, reckless driving and failure to have an operator's license, was disposed of when the complaints were modified to include only the last mentioned charge. The offense was committed on August 5, when the accused in driving her car west on Main street, collided with a horse and wagon owned by a Mansfield man in front of the Willimantic Grain company store. The court nolled the charge on payment of costs of $10.55, at the suggestion of Prosecuting Attorney Harry S. Gaucher.

WEDDING

Caron-Drouin

Two well known local young people, Walter George Caron and Miss Yvonne Drouin, were united in marriage at St. Mary's church Monday morning at eight o'clock by the pastor, Rev. J. J. Papillon, who also celebrated the nuptial high mass. Rev. Hormisdas C. Selec was deacon and Rev. Edward A. Mathieu, sub-deacon. Special music was rendered by the choir with Mrs. Joseph F. Gaudreau at the organ.

The best man was Alfred Drouin, brother of the bride, and the maid of honor, Miss Flurette Caron, a sister of the groom. The oflwer girls were the little Misses Dolores and Therese Laramee, daughters of Mr. and Mrs. Pierre J. Laramee. The services were largely attended.

The bride was attired in a gown of white georgette with chiffon trimmings, a veil caught up with orange blossom sand lilies of the valley, and carried a bouquet of bride's roses. Her maid of honor wore a gown of orchid chiffon with hat to harmonize and carried a bouquet of pink roses. The flower girls were attired in gowns of yellow georgette.

After the ceremony a wedding breakfast was served at the home of theb ride's parents, Mr. and Mrs. Alfred Drouin, at 125 Quercus avenue, at which about forty guests were in attendance. Many choice gifts were received by the newly married couple. Later in the day they left on a wedding trip to be spent in Boston and nearby sea resorts.

The groom is employed by the Church-Reed company, local clothiers, and is also a teacher of dancing. For some time past the bride has been employed by the American Thread company. Upon their return Mr. and Mrs. Caron will make their home at 248 Valley street.

Guests were present at the ceremony and recention which followed from Montreal, Canada, Boston, Mass., Hartford and this city.

IMPROVEMENT SOCIETY HOLDS ITS REGULAR MEETING

(Special to The Bulletin)

WILLIMANTIC CAMP GROUND, Aug. 13—The Ladies' Improvement society held their regular business meeting Tuesday afternoon at the Haven. Plans were made and committees appointed for the coming bazaar to be held next Friday afternoon from 3:30 until 6 o'clock, at the usual place in the auditorium.

Wednesday evening, the leader of the meeting was Rev. George Squires of Colrain, Mass., with Miss Francis MacIntire at the piano. Rev. Mr. Squires has been the guest of his sister, Mrs. Orrin Tourtellotte, the past week.

Rev. John Pearse and wife, with Mrs. Emma Elmer and Mrs. S. M. Dunstan, recently attended a funeral in Niantic. While in the cemetery, they saw the large boulder that was originally at the entrance of Mystic avenue on the Campground. Martin C. Walker, former caretaker of the grounds for about 15 years, had the stone, which was near his private cottage, taken to the Niantic cemetery and placed on his lot and an inscription on a bronze tablet inserted on its face. It is the only marker of its kind and an object of interest, especially to campers.

Mr. and Mrs. England and daughter of Chaplin, who bought the Moodus society house recently, have been having a new veranda built on it, which adds greatly to its appearance and also to Church circle.

Mr. and Mrs. Allan W. H. Sterry and daughter, Helen, left the grove Tuesday for a visit with Mrs. Sterry's people, Mr. and Mrs. H. G. Hull, at Ridgefield, Mass.

Rev. F. C. Baker and family of North Grosvenordale arrived at their cottage at Haven and Prospect avenues last week.

Mr. and Mrs. Harvel Alrich of Norwich have been spending the past week at the Norwich Trinity society house.

Dr. W. B. Hill of New York is visiting his mother, Mrs. J. H. Hills, on Church circle after visiting friends in Marlboro, Mass.

Mrs. R. M. Geer of Watertown, Mass., has been spending several days the past week at the Ray cottage.

Mr. and Mrs. Frederick Smith of Brooklyn, N. Y., and Mr. and Mrs. Jack Long and daughter of Providence are stopping at the Smith cottage on Norwich avenue.

Mrs. Goodrich and four children from Hartford are stopping at the Root cottage on Haven avenue.

Mrs. Mary Benjamin of Haven avenue is visiting in Norwich, the guest of Mr. and Mrs. William Crandall.

Miss Edith Finch of South Vineland N. J., is the guest of Miss Frances MacIntire on Haven avenue.

Rev. and Mrs. Frank Chamberlin of East Thompson arrived at their cottage on Cartwright avenue Wednesday.

A beautiful bunch of goldbanded lilies on Wesley park is the admiration of all the campers. At present there are 22 in blossom, beside several larg buds.

Frank Potter and daughter, Grace, with Mrs. Gertrude Shey of Bridgeport, were callers of Mrs. Grace Potter at the Willimantic home Sunday.

Mr. and Mrs. Harlan Hills of East Hampton visited at the Hills' cottage Sunday.

William Sommermann returned to his cottage Saturday from a visit to his home in New York.

Mrs. Faith Buttlingame of Charlton, Mass., returned to her home last Wednesday after visiting her mother at the Hills' cottage.

At the Gardner cottage on Haven avenue are Mrs. Emily Sanford and Miss Marion Sanford, Mr. and Mrs. Harry Macks and Miss Cora Macks and Kemp Macks, all from New London.

At the service Sunday evening, Rev. F. L. Grant of Sunderland, Mass., was the preacher. Edward Wheeler of Providence conducted the singing and Mrs. William Carter of Rutherford, N. J., assisted at the piano. This service had the largest attendance for the season.

Four little children were holding a meeting recently. A tree for the church and a convenient stump for the altar. The oldest child was the preacher and two of the children were the choir, leaving one little child for the congregation. The choir sang several selections, then the little preacher proceeded with her sermon. She solemnly asked the congregation if she wanted to go to Heaven, receiving no audible answer. The preacher said, "Well, you know if you don't go to Heaven, you will go to the Devil." Then the choir sang another selection and the meeting was over.

Joseph P. Paulhus and William E. Geer, carriers at the local postoffice, started upon their annual fifteen days vacations yesterday upon the return to duty of Carriers Dwight W. Ide and George K. Allen.

Mr. and Mrs. Michael Conway and Joseph Rizy of No. 62 Summit street and Mr. and Mrs. David C. Eagan of Hartford have returned from a week's visit with Mrs. Conway's daughter, Mrs. J. C. Gardner in Stanbridge, P. Q., Canada. The trip was made by automobile and many points of interest were visited en route by way of New York state and Vermont.

Henry Martell of No. 597 Zion street, Hartford, driver of the automobile which was wrecked in a collision with the bridge in Flanders separating the towns of Coventry and Mansfield Saturday night, was before the Coventry town court Monday forenoon, charged with reckless driving, to which he pleaded not guilty. He was represented by Attorney John Neuman of Hartford. State Policemen Frank A. Starkell and Walter Wood of the Stafford Springs barracks gave testimony for the state. Martell was found guilty of the charge by Justice of the Peace Albert M. Gilman and fined twent-five dollars and costs, ten dollars of the one being remitted. The balance, amounting to $26.47, was paid. Martell and his three companions, all Hartford men, were injured but not seriously.

Funeral services for Miss Grace Belle Chappell were held Monday afternoon at two o'clock in the mortuary parlors of the J. C. Lincoln company at No. 82 Church street. The Rev. Harold H. Critchlow, pastor of the Methodist Episcopal church, officiated. Interment followed in the Windham Center cemetery. The bearers were Walter Chappell, Richard Lewis, George Chappell and Paul Webb.

L. V. Tirrell of Storrs is to be one of the judges at the first annual New England sheep dog trials to be held at Bennington, Vt., on Thursday of this week. The event will be held under the auspices of the New England Sheep and Wool association, of which Harry L. Garrigus, also of Storrs, is one of the vice-presidents.

Mrs. M. F. Ladd and son, Everett W. Ladd of Dedham, Mass., left Sunday morning by automobile for Minot, Mass., to be the guests of Mr. and Mrs. Ross W. Baker of Dedham. After a few days there Mrs. Ladd will leave to spend the remainder of the month in New Hampshire.

Miss Evelyn Thompson of Hartford, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Charles M. Thompson, of No. 68 Prospect street, with a party of friends is on an automobile trip to Atlantic City, N. J., Philadelphia and New York city.

Mr. and Mrs. Walter H. Lathrop of Mystic and Groton Long Point had as week end guests Mr. and Mrs. Roland B. Jordan, Mr. and Mrs. Raymond A. Parker, Mr. and Mrs. Kenneth N. Fillhouse and Mr. and Mrs. Harold F. Taylor of this city.

Mr. and Mrs. John F. Connor of No. 246 Windham road, are to leave today for Irvington, N. Y., to make their residence. Mr. Connor, formerly in the employ of the American Thread company, is to be superintendent of an apartment house in that city.

Mr. and Mrs. J. P. Lamb of South Manchester, the Misses Annie and Mary Eldredge of Willington and E. A. Hobby of Mansfield, were guests of Mrs. Annie A. Ladd and Mrs. Stella Brooks of No. 125 Valley street Sunday.

Mr. and Mrs. Frank J. Moran, who have been the guests of Mr. and Mrs. Fred G. Nason of Shetucket park, South Windham, for the past three weeks, returned to their home in Philadelphia, Pa., yesterday.

Joseph Glynon, Adolph and Jerome DeMontigney of this city with Frank Lacaste of Hartford left Sunday for a week's trip to Canada. They will visit relatives in Grand Mere, P. Q. enroute.

William J. Park of East Providence, R. I., has purchased the Douglas farm in South Woodstock for a summer home. Extensive alterations will be made there in the near future and it will be known as "Park Crest Farm." Mr. Park was formerl a resident of this cit.

Mrs. Jennie Brooks of Jersey City, N. J., is a guest of Mrs. Charles M. Thompson of No. 68 Prospect street.

Mr. and Mrs. Frank Collins of Meriden were week end guests of Mr. and Mrs. J. Cvorlen Paulhus of No. 245 North street.

"OVER THE COUNTER"

DEAR DOT:

I was delighted to hear that you and your husband were planning to Build a New Home. I certainly agree with you that it is the right thing to do both from the standpoints of economy and satisfaction. So many people pay rent year in and year out and in the ebbing days of life find themselves without a roof of their own. It really is pitiful when you consider that the same amount of monthly rent would in ten or a dozen years pay for a cozy home, built to suit, that could then be called One's Own Home.

At your suggestion I went to the Willimantic Lumber and Coal company to inquire about Building Materials. They sure have an impressing display.

I found them very courteous and they outlined for me a full line of every material you would use from the foundation to the roof. Here is their recommendation

Giant cement and brick form the foundation. Flue-lining for the chimney. They claim that West Coast fir timber is best for framing and recommend the use of Idaho pine wide clapboards for Bungalow siding. Anderson white pine should be used in the window frames and Morgan windows and doors for durability. Samson plaster board completes the walls. For good appearance and long wear there are several grades of oak and pine for hard-wood flooring.

Realizing the importance of proper roofing they named Safekote Roofings as the best material in their opinion. There are the 4 in 1 strip shingles, plain and in varigated colors and Hexagon shingles in colors. Safekote building papers for insulation complete the order.

Having given you this summary of materials I would suggest that you call at the company's offices on Church street and ask for one of their valuable Plan Books. This will help you in selecting the type of home without going to the expense of employing an architect. The Willimantic Lumber and Coal company are always ready to serve with a complete stock and deliveries in truck load lots are made anywhere without charge.

Congratulating you on your decision to Build and wishing you the best of luck, I am,

Yours, JANE.

A SIMILARITY IN PRICES OF ALL SUMMER GOODS

Similar, in that they are all small; sort of overcome by the heat.

There aren't enough of any of them to brag about, nor enough to make a window display of any one kind.

So we grouped them; a few of this and a few of that, but all of them at such a low price that you can't fail to observe it.

If you happen to need any of the articles which are on display, just step into the store and look them over.

Our windows are intended to be of interest, and in that respect they are somewhat of a success; it is not unusual for some of our competitors to call us on the phone and make some inquiries regarding sizes, prices, etc. "for a lady in Windham" or sometimes "for someone in Storrs"—and we always tell them.

We figure that if they can't keep busy "minding their own business" they will not profit so very much by what they learn of ours.

Take a look into the window.

SUCCESS

It's struggling on with the will-to-win,
But taking loss with a cheerful grin;
It's sharing sorrow, and work, and mirth,
And making better this good old earth;
It's serving, striving through strain and stress,
It's doing your noblest—that's Success.

A CALL TO ACTION

Senator Moses has done well to qualify his undoubtedly justifiable optimism regarding the success of the republican national ticket with the warning that the party need expect no walkover. At the beginning of the campaign a feeling of over confidence threatened to cause a slackening of effort. If there is now a clearer realization of the appeal and resourcefulness of the democratic candidate, it contains no cause for discouragement, but rather a much-needed incentive to republican action. The advantage is plainly with the republican party, not only on account of its normal numerical superiority, but because of its strong candidate and the obvious handicaps of his opponent. But it is necessary to press this advantage by conducting a positive constructive campaign, emphasizing Mr. Hoover's outstanding qualifications for the presidency rather than the deficiencies of Governor Smith.

As Mr. Moses says, republicans are facing an "alert, adroit and affluent foe." The democrats are more efficiently organized than in many years. They will spare neither money nor effort to obtain their return to power. The situation calls for an especially militant, aggressive republican campaign. With such a leader, victory is reasonably assured. But it must be earned by hard work. And the time for the republicans to begin is right now.

BIG MEN IN MAJOR POLITICS

One of the political heresies of a few years ago was to whisper, as some did, in time of emergency: "What a great secretary of the treasury J Pierpont Morgan would make." The cult which would draft the best business brains of the country to serve the government grew very slowly and even as short a time back as 1921 many heads were shaken when it was announced that President Harding had selected Andrew J. Mellon of Pittsburgh as the financier of his administration. Today we find in both political parties men who are masters of big business.

The republican party has nominated for president an engineer, who has made a fortune in association with some of the greatest industrial enterprises of the day. His democratic opponent appoints to manage his campaign the chairman of the board of a gigantic motor corporation. The president of the Pennsylvania railroad heads the republican organization in Pennsylvania and the founder of the largest chain-store drug business in the world has charge of the Hoover campaign in Massachusetts.

The list might be extended many times but it serves to bring into notice that the systematic usage of the leaders of industry and finance is one of the most heartening things in American political life. It erases at one stroke the thought that one major party or the other is either the creature or the enemy of the nation's business. The intelligent American voter can feel confident that he will be well served when men who have made a success of their own careers and enterprises are turning aside from money-making and devoting their great talents to the public good.

These men are of sharply differing points of view upon many public questions, but they are approaching public problems together, in the full light of knowledge and experience. Out of their conferences and their clashes will come an education of the voting public in the merits of many national problems—water power, immigration, foreign relations, farm relief, prohibition, transportation and a dozen others—that is destined inevitably to make for good government, whatever party may be in power. The campaign will not be a listless one, when these mighty human dynamos get under way with their work.

THE PROBLEM IN MANCHURIA

In forbidding the extension of the Chinese Nationalist authority into Manchuria, the Japanese government has taken a course likely to affect the Far East for many years to come. The Chinese Nationalist will continue to look upon Manchuria as by right and by history a part of his nation. Against this he will see Japan as the adversary of the legitimate fulfillment of Chinese aspirations. The considerable Chinese population in Manchuria will feel the presure from both sides. It may come to conceive itself a captive race and to carry on one of those distressing struggles of unwilling subjects with powerful masters.

There is another side to the matter. Manchuria has not in recent times been a province of China in the ordinary sense. The Manchu race, though now greatly outnumbered by the Chinese in the region, has maintained itself distinct from the Chinese in language and in customs. The land lies beyond the Great Wall, which marks the ancient boundary of Chinese rule. Since 1912 the controlling element in Manchuria has been separatist in spirit and largely in actual policy.

A complication arises from the fact that for several generations there has gone on a movement of migration from the overpopulated portions of China to Manchurian territory. These settlers have remained distinctly Chinese, nor is it likely that Manchu pride has encouraged them to unite with the race of the old conquerors.

Economically, Manchuria has developed only in recent years and this development has been largely in the direction of Japan. Yet Japan has not checked nor attempted to compete with the influx of Chinese settlers, estimated to have run as high as a million a year in recent times. There has thus arisen a situation in which Manchuria appears as economically Japanese, racially Chinese in the main, and historically separate. The racial element of this area appears to have become fixed, since it has a population of about 40 to the square mile, chiefly Chinese and agricultural. This population enjoys on the whole better living conditions than those of the masses in China, and might wish to preserve this advantage by remaining apart from Chinese governmental authority.

The situation provides one of the points of future insecurity of the Far East; it cannot be solved without full and equal consideration to all its features. A friendly understanding on other matters between China and Japan would help greatly to lessen the risk of eventual Manchurian difficulties.

A BOY SCOUT EXPLORER

Boy Scouts the world over will read with just pride that one of their number may accompany the Byrd expedition to the Antarctic. Six scouts have arrived in New York and from them one will probably be chosen to join the explorer. The boys, who range from seventeen to nineteen years old, represent all sections of the country. Two hail from the Pacific coast, two from the District of Columbia and Pennsylvania. Minnesota is represented and so is Alabama.

Here is fitting enterprise for such boys. Assuming a choice is made, the lucky one will probably not go far afield with the hardy men who form the supporting parties and establish the depots to facilitate and safeguard the airplane dash to the pole. There are nearly one hundred members of the expedition. Its activities will be varied. But for a youngster of less than twenty years the experience will be a glorious adventure in whatever capacity he serves. And whatever the capacity, the Boy Scout, with his training should acquit himself with credit.

The news that a Scout may accompany the Byrd expedition comes a few weeks after that silly performance in Cleveland when the Scouts there were advised to remonstrate if they saw women smoking. National leaders of the organization promptly deprecated such a suggestion. In the main, it was treated as merely another evidence that the silly season had arrived with the heat waves. But it was, nevertheless, unfortunate. The kind of news which is in keeping with the purpose and character of the Scout movement is that contained in despatches saying that a member of the organization may be selected to sail south with Byrd. Boys have been members of recent Arctic expeditions, but they were not on the scale of the present enterprise, nor designed to produce results so comprehensive as those for which Commander Byrd and his companions will strive.

THE WAR PRICE OF WHEAT

Mr. Hoover's political opponents, along with many resentful farmers who have accepted the legend as true, persist in bringing against the republican candidate for president the groundless charge that he "robbed the American farmer" in 1917 by limiting the price of wheat to $2.20 a bushel.

The price of wheat in the United States, after this country entered the world war, was determined by a so-called fair price committee appointed by President Wilson. As Eugene D Funk, Illinois member of that committee, now affirms, Mr. Hoover was concerned with its activities only to the extent of finding a room for it to meet in. He asked to be relieved from participating in its deliberations on wheat and the other members of the committee acceded to that request. Consequently he took no part in the price-fixing arguments one way or the other, was not consulted as to the committee's conclusions, and knew nothing of its report, which was taken directly to President Wilson.

Other members of the committee have made public statements similar to that of Mr. Funk. The price as fixed, says Mr. Funk, was a compromise. Nobody dictated it. Some members of the committee wanted to make the price higher and some insisted that it should be lower. The result represented a decision arrived at by the familiar give-and-take process.

This simple statement ought to bury permanently the oft-repeated charge which long has resounded in the wheat districts that "Hoover robbed the farmer by holding down the price of wheat."

TWO GIRLS AND TWO JOBS

All the wall mottoes about success seemed bitter mockery to Frieda Barodi. She was persistent, she was faithful to her task, she did keep her chin high and a smile upon her lips. But she didn't seem to be getting anywhere. Was the trouble with the job or with herself? After the fourth reprimand within a week for errors in taking dictation, she determined to answer an ad for a secretarial position which she had thought alluring. After all, it might be the job.

Promptly at 3 o'clock she stood before the door of 308 Merchants building, hesitant. Had the ad said 306 or 308? Why hadn't she brought it with her? She noticed a petite girl—blond and bland, the ideal type for a secretary, she thought—hesitating in the corridor also. So she hurriedly entered 306.

During the ten minutes she was kept waiting she wondered whether, after all, she could succeed in this position any better than she had in her former one. If she could only cure herself of inattention while she dreamed of what was going on in the heads of her office colleagues, and what their homes and their friends were like!

"You are the young lady who came by appointment in answer to our advertisement?" Miss Barodi woke from a trance. The young woman speaking made a graceful gesture—Miss Barodi would have liked to mimic it before a mirror. She was always mimicking folk in front of her own mirror. Still playing with the idea, she was ushered into the presence of a heavy-set man in a checked suit who stared at her so appraisingly that it made her blush.

"Tall, dark, with beautiful romantic eyes," he said, and she blushed deeper still. "What experience?" She was rightened.

"Not enough," she said. "In fact, scarcely any. Where I work now I play so insignificant a role that it's hardly worth mentioning. But I do want a chance." The man was evidently paying much more attention to the tone of her voice than to her words. He nodded his head.

"You're exactly the type we need," he said. "While we seldom take chances like this, I think we'll take one on you. Come back tomorrow morning at 10 o'clock.

All the wall mottoes about success seemed a bitter mockery to Ruth Briggs. She was persistent, she was faithful to her task, she did keep her chin high and a smile upon her lips. But she didn't seem to be getting anywhere. After all, was she as good as she thought she was or was it that she had never had a part which gave her a suitable opportunity?
